She told me that some short time after her arrival a stranger had gained admittance to the house. While he was there the man had entered her room, held her arm, and threatened her with violence if she made any outcry. After hearing this I did not pursue the subject.

Carriston and Madeline were married at the earliest possible moment, and left England immediately after the ceremony. A week after their departure, by Carriston's request, I forwarded the envelope found upon our prisoner to Mr. Ralph Carriston. With it I sent a few lines stating where and under what peculiar circumstances we had become possessed of it. I never received any reply to my communication, so, wild and improbable as it seems, I am bound to believe that Charles Carriston's surmise was right—that Madeline was decoyed away and concealed, not from any ill-will towards herself, but with a view to the possible baneful effect which her mysterious disappearance might work upon her lover's strange and excitable organization; and I firmly believe that had he not in some inexplicable way been firmly convinced that she was alive and faithful to him the plot would have been a thorough success, and Charles Carriston would have spent the rest of his days in an asylum.

Both Sir Charles—he succeeded to his title shortly after his marriage—and Lady Carriston are now dead, or I should not have ventured to relate these things concerning them. They had twelve years of happiness. If measured by time the period was but a short one; but I feel sure that in it they enjoyed more true happiness than many others find in the course of a protracted life. In word, thought and deed they were as one. She died, in Rome, of fever, and her husband, without, so far as I know, any particular complaint, simply followed her.

I was always honored with their sincerest friendship, and Sir Charles left me sole trustee and guardian to his three sons; so there are now plenty of lives between Ralph Carriston and his desire. I am pleased to say that the boys, who are as dear to me as my own children, as yet show no evidence of possessing any gifts beyond Nature.

I know that my having made this story public will cause two sets of objectors to fall equally foul of me—the matter-of-fact prosaic who will say that the abduction and subsequent imprisonment of Madeline Rowan was an absurd impossibility, and the scientific man, like myself, who cannot, dare not believe that Charles Carriston, from neither memory nor imagination, could draw a face, and describe peculiarities, by which a certain man could be identified. I am far from saying there may not be a simple natural explanation of the puzzle, but I, for one, have failed to find it, so close this tale as I began it by saying I am a narrator, and nothing more.

THE END.

The March Magazine of American History presents an appetizing table of contents. Every article is of importance, and of superior merit. The frontispiece is an excellent steel portrait of General W. T. Sherman. The opening article, "The Van Cortlandt Manor House," is from the pen of the editor, and is illustrated with curious relics of two and half centuries ago; also portraits and exquisitely drawn interiors. The Hon. John W. Johnston contributes the second article, "Shall we have Colonies and a Navy?" discussing in an exceptionally able and informing manner the attempts hitherto of the United States to colonize. George B. Bacon gives a thrilling description of the breaking of the chain for Farragut's fleet, at the forts below New Orleans, entitled, "One Night's Work, April 20, 1862." The varied departments are filled with particularly choice reading. Price $5.00 a year in advance. Published at 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

The weeping willow, says the Garden, seems to have had a romantic history. The first cion was sent to Smyrna in a box of figs to Alexander Pope. General Clinton brought a shoot from Pope's tree to America in the time of the revolution, which, passing into the hands of John Parke Curtis, was planted on his estate in Virginia, thus becoming the progenitor of the weeping willow in America.

H. M. Brainard & Co., Cleveland, have just issued a new piano piece entitled "The Kirmess" Schottische Militaire, by Louis Grayle. It is a delightful composition, well arranged and sprightly, and especially adapted to the latest fashionable dance, the "Military Schottische." Send 35 cents to the publishers, H. M. Brainard & Co., 209 Superior street, Cleveland, O., and receive a copy by mail.

SOUGHT FOR the last hundred years.—A remedy for catarrh, hay fever and cold in the head, found at last in Ely's Cream Balm Safe and pleasant to use, and easily applied with the finger. It gives relief at once and a thorough treatment positively cures. Price 50 cents.

I have been troubled with catarrh from boyhood and had considered my case chronic until about three years ago I procured one bottle of Ely's Cream Balm and I count myself sound to-day, all from the use of one bottle.—J. R. Cooley Hardware Merchant, Montrose, Pa.

Sunlight and air are finding their way into the cellars and will do much toward purifying the malaria holes.

TAKE IT THIS MONTH.—Spring rapidly approaches, and it is important that every one should be prepared for the depressing effects of the changing season. This is the time to purify the blood and strengthen the system, by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, which stands unequalled as a spring medicine, and has endorsements of a character seldom given any proprietary medicine. A book containing statments of the many wonderful cures it has accomplished, will be sent upon application to C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. 100 Doses One Dollar.

Venus is now the morning star!

"Let me write the ballads of a nation," said a wise man, "and I care not who makes its laws." This is true, and it may also be said that the discovery of St Jacobs Oil,— the conqueror of pain, has been of more value than the finding of a comet.

A RINGTAIL COW.

No man in this country is more truthful than John Hilfern. He would rather tell a truth than to tell a lie. This peculiarity has given to his Character an oddity that causes vague mutterings in the neighborhood. No one ever saw John take a drink of whisky. Yet when he came to town last week he was so drunk that he could not have slapped the face of the earth with a horse blanket. I was greatly shocked, for I had confidence in John. I was not willing that he should escape censure, so the next time we met I drew him to one side and said:

"John, we are all pained to know that you have been drunk. During many years you have been a shining example. Now, our confidence in you is shaken—we are hurt."

Affectionately placing his broad hand on my shoulder, he replied:

"I do not deny that I was drunk. It is an almost incredible story. Let us sit down and I will tell you."

When we had sat down, John continued: "The other day as I rode along toward town I began to notice that there was something curious the matter with me. I felt a disposition to yell at everything I saw; and, strange as it may seem, I began to get hungry for a fight of some sort. Well, by the time I got to town I was as drunk as a fool. I couldn't understand it, for I had drunk nothing. When I returned home my perplexity was increased, for I found my wife and brother-in-law so drunk that they couldn't have walked round a straw hat."

"You don't tell me so."

"Yes, I do. They swore that they hadn't drank a drop."

"How do you account for it?"

"Just wait a minute. The next morning we were all sober, but after breakfast we were all drunk again."

"You don't say so!"

"Of course I do. If I didn't you would'nt know anything about it. Well, we sobered up a little, but sir"—here his voice sank to a whisper—"after dinner we were all so drunk that we wouldn't have known the President from a deputy constable."

"How do you account for it?"

"You just wait a minute. The affair was so strange that I began to investigate. After awhile it was all as clear as daylight."

"What was it that made you drunk?"

"Milk."

"Milk!" I exclaimed.

"Yes, milk."

"How can you explain it?"

"You just wait a minute. Several days before, I had bought a ringtail cow, the most peculiar animal of her species, and I discovered that she had gone to a distillery and had drank the slop."

"Well, that is remarkable."

"Yes, rather. I soon found out that the ringtail cow is the only illicit distiller among the entire cow family. People came for miles to look at her."

"What did you do with her, kill her?"

"Bless you, no. A deputy United States marshal arrested her, but, upon examination, the judge said that there was no statute to fit the case. I took the cow home and sold her for three hundred dollars."

"So large a sum as that?"

"Yes, a temperance lecturer bought her. I saw him the other day and he told me that he wouldn't take a thousand for her. Said that he never did see so much fun. Well, I must go."

John is a poor man, but he is truthful. He would rather tell the truth than to break a colt.

NO THIRD OF TWO WITH HIM.

A story is told of a farmer in Schley who rented some land last year to a colored man for a third of the crop. When the drought came on his corn and cotten were affected by it. He gathered two bales of cotton and two wagon loads of corn. The latter he penned up for his own use and the cotton was sold. When the landlord called for his share he was told there was none for him. He was thunderstruck and asked:

"Didn't I rent you my land for a third of the crop?"

"Yes, boss," said the darkey, "but, you see, dar was no third. Dar was only two bales of cotton and two loads of corn; all mine, and nuffin' for you by the contract."

And the landlord could not make Cuffee believe any other way. He left the premises, saying:

"No d—n rascal can make me say dat two am three, nairy time."

YORK GIRLS VERY FAST.

"I always thought them York gals was very fast," said Mrs. Orthodox to a friend the other day, "but now they are getting awful, simply awful."

"What's the matter now?"

"Why, they run races at regular race tracks, three-quarters of a mile! Of course they can't wear trains, and I guess to run that far they must go bare legged. Think of it! running around a track that way in front of a parcel of men and gamblers and people like that! Here it is, right here in this paper," and she handed the following to her friend.

NEW YORK, June 3.—The first race at Brighton Beach to-day was for maidens of all ages; three-quarters of a mile.

"Now," she went on, "I was going to send Mary Jane to New York to get an education, but before I'll have her trapesin' around like that there, I'll send her out to the colored school."

DENTAL NOTICE.

To the thousands who are suffering from the ill effects of badly decayed teeth, we would beg leave to inform them that with Our Method of Administering the New Vegetable Vapor all teeth can be removed without pain. Since we first began using the Vapor, we have used over 15,000 Gallons, administering it to thousands who have come from all parts of Essex County to have their teeth removed, and in no case has there been any ill effects from its use. We have given it to the most delicate and sensitive woman as well as the hardy man; to the child of 5 years, or the adult of 75. We have given the Vapor to hundreds of the most nervous people, who have for years dreaded having their decayed teeth removed. And we can say that one and all have gone away with the happy thought that their teeth were removed without pain. We can refer to hundreds of our patients who have taken Gas, Ether or Chloroform who declare that the Vapor has no equal as an anæsthetic. We charge No Extra for administering this Anæsthetic. Our prices remain the same as with gas. FINE GOLD FILLING A SPECIALTY.

Happiness

results from that true contentment which indicates perfect health of body and mind. You may possess it, if you will purify and invigorate your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. E. M. Howard, Newport, N. H., writes: "I suffered for years with Scrofulous humors. After using two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I great relief. It has entirely restored me to health." James French, Atchison, Kans., writes: "To all persons suffering from Liver Complaint, I would strongly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with a disease of the liver for nearly two years, when a friend advised me to take this medicine. It gave prompt relief, and has cured me." Mrs. H. M. Kidder, 41 Dwight st., Boston, Mass., writes: "For several years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family. I never feel safe, even without it. As a liver medicine and general purifier of the blood, it has no equal." Mrs. A. B. Allen, Winterpock, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and finally became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of and commenced giving it to him. It surely worked wonders, for, in a short time, he was completely cured."

Found

At Home

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

While shackling cars for the shifter last Friday, a train hand named O'Neil, had his finger jammed so badly as to take off the nail.

A lady living on Lowell street, has a pet cat that will steal and eat hens eggs whenever she sees them.

One of our grocers removed eight barrels of well soaked beans from his basement last Thursday, which were pleasant relics of the late flood. They were all swelled ready for cooking.

While F. C. Holmes of this town, was passing along Sullivan Place in Boston, one day last week, a heavy bag of wool fell from a fourth story window and struck the side walk in front of Mr. Holmes, and bouncing up, knocked him over. He was not injured, but if he had been a little nearer he would have been struck on the head.

Thomas Stringer was fined Tuesday $3 and costs for assaulting Mrs. Joshua Patterson.

Charles Trask was before Judge Merrill this morning for drunkenness. He was fined $1.00 and costs.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Some weeks since we published in this column a criticism from the Springfield Republican regarding the Bennett & Moulton Opera Company. Viewed in the light of the week's performance in Salem the criticism was very just. There are two things regarding the company which are to be borne in mind—and there is no denying that they are important items to the managers—they draw large houses, and apparently please the crowd who compose the audiences. But that is the end of it. From any musical standpoint the performances of the operas given cannot be called a success. The performers rely, for their success with the audience, upon cheap gags, local hits, buffoonery and interpolations of the text. The female performers rely upon their ability to flirt from the stage with the audience, and the loudness and boldness of their manner and dress, or undress. There is hardly one of the solo singers who can sing on the key; and the choruses are oftentimes rendered out of both time and tune. An opera company, of any reputation, like McCaull's or the Ideals, who should bring out the operas with such singing and such dressing—and especially with such interpolations and extravagances, would be hissed from the stage by a first class audience. Yet there are a few exceptions to these strictures. Ben Lodge in the Mikado is good, as far as his impersonation and acting goes. In short, as the comedian of the opera company he is superior to many. Miss Irene Murphy, as Pitti Sing, in the Mikado, was excellent, and the tunefulness of her singing and quiet demeanor on the stage was in striking contrast to that of the other members. There is material enough in the company, if rightly directed, to give a better performance. But the large audiences, who are delighted with the cheap prices, the guys and buffoonery, are evidently giving the performers an idea that the music of the opera is of a secondary consideration, and the whole performance smacks of the minstrel show. The claim of the managers that the company give a first class performance at low prices is not a fact that can be sustained. The price of admission charged is all the performances are worth.

Miss Emma Rice has been engaged as contralto in the First Baptist church at Jamaica Plain, and has resigned from the choir of Barton Square Church in Salem.

Miss Sopha C. Hall, Avon D. Saxon, and other well known artists, gave a fine concert at the Young Men's Christian Association Hall, Salem, last Monday evening.

The choir of the Universalist church sang at the temperance meeting last Sunday evening, at the Town Hall. Miss Annie K. Orr rendered in a delightful manner, Handel's "Angels, ever bright and fair."

The music of the Salem Band Orchestra, last Sunday evening, was excellent. Not only their selections but the playing was the best we have heard from the orchestra.

The friends of Miss Lizzie Webb Cary, in this town, will regret to learn that she has been quite ill for a number of weeks.

Miss Emma Rice of this town, and Mrs. J. P. Fernald, will give a song recital in the parlors of the Fairhaven hotel, for the benefit of the library association of that town, next week. Miss Addie Taber, a promising young pianist of that town, will assist.

We have never heard the apostrophe to the moon, in the Mikado, by any Yum Yum, rendered as finely as it was done by Mrs. Clara Emilio Gilbert in Plummer Hall, Salem, for the benefit of the Schubert Club.

The best selection we have heard rendered by the choir of the South Church, was the piece sung by them last Sabbath just previous to Rev. Mr. Sperry's sermon. The beautiful quality of Mrs. Chase's voice is apparent the more one listens to it.

Only for a few performances longer will "Oxygen," with its varied and interesting features, be the burlesque attraction of Managers Miles and Barton at the Bijou Theatre, Miss Lydia Thompson, whose performance as the prince has made her new friends and kept all her old admirers, will sing "It depends on the way that it's done," "His heart was true to Poll" and other popular numbers; Miss Addie Cora Reed is sure to find favor; and Messrs. De Lange, Carroll and Clarke will see that the fun does not lag.

The last weeks of the Japanese opera at the Hollis Street are now announced and there will undoubtedly set in a grand rush to the box office. Every body will wish to see "The Mikado" at least once more before it is withdrawn. It is certain that the opera will exceed the run of "Iolanthe," and thus take first place in the long line of lyric successes in this city.

Where Hours go Merrily.

The costume carnival at the rink last Wednesday evening, was attended by about 500 people and there were about 150 in costumes. Music by the Salem band enlivened the occasion. The costumes were varied and some of them very unique and original. The judges were W. F. Sawyer, Mrs. George C. Prescott and Miss M. S. Taylor, and they awarded the prizes as follows. Handsomest ladies' costume, Miss Lucinda Rock; Handsomest gents' costume, E. C. Clay, Malden; Second handsomest ladies' costume, Miss Lilly Todd, Peabody; Second handsomest gents' costume, H. I. Benedict; Burlesque costume, first prize Belle Jeffery, Marblehead; Second prize, J. Broadley, Salem. As a whole it was a complete success.

Mr. Martin Brophy of Mason street, returned from the caucus last Wednesday evening, and found at his home, about 50 of his friends who had "dropped in" to give him and his wife a surprise. There was singing, dancing and a good supper. During the evening, the daughter-in-law of the worthy couple, Mrs. U. A. Brophy, in behalf of the company, presented them with a hanging lamp.

Last Thursday evening, L. A. 2947 K. of L.; were given a surprise party by their brother and sister Knights from Lynn. The head moguls in 2947 had probably been posted before hand, and the lady friends of the order had prepared for the visitors, and set the tables at town hall with an old-fashioned baked bean supper, and after partaking of that, the company returned to Ashland hall, where for several hours, good cheer, wit and music mingled. The Lynn friends returned at a late hour but carried with them, many pleasant recollections of the power of 2947 to entertain their guests.

Edward McLaughlin and Master McManus, the contortionist and club swinger, gave a very pleasing exhibition at the rink, last Saturday evening, before a fair sized audience.

The skating and dancing party of the St. John's C. T. Society last night was well attended, and the evening was spent in the usual way of such occasions. During the evening the Milo Brothers in their kicking, somersault and tumbling acts were introduced. The first part was very pleasing, but the rest was not as satisfactory.

Remember that next Tuesday evening and Wednesday afternoon the pleasing operetta by the author of R. E. Porter, entitled "Hunt the thimble" or Little Nell's surprise party," and the farce, "A love of a bonnet," will be presented at the Universalist vestry by the Merry Workers. A new comic dance will also be introduced. You can't spend a few hours more pleasantly and at the same time benefit a worthy cause better than visiting the children's opera.

Holten Lodge of Odd Fellows will visit West Lynn this evening, leaving the square at about 7 o'clock on special horse cars over the Lynn & Boston horse railroad.

The Peabody Dramatic Club assisted by Hal Newton Carlyle as Lawyer Moneypenny in Boucicault's drama "The Long Strike" appeared at the Opera house last Thursday evening, but were greeted by a small audience. The young men are well known in town, and assumed the different roles in a very creditable manner. We can not mention one without speaking of all, but we will say a word for those "who doubled" on their characters. So well did they do that they were scarcely recognized. The feminine portion also did well, and the parts were taken by Mamie Knowles, Nellie Winters and Mabel Narbis. We learn that the young men have been urged to repeat it at no distant day.

We return thanks to the Unity Club of the Unitarian Society for tickets to their dance at town hall, Thursday, March 18th, 1886. The Salem Cadet Band will furnish the music. We learn this will not be a fancy dress party, but one where all can enjoy themselves.

The Crowell's at the rink next Wednesday evening.

We understand that the Long Strike is to be repeated on the evening of March 17 (St. Patrick's day) for the benefit of the strikers who have been in Harrington's employ.

Annie Gallagher, for being drunk, paid a fine of $1 and costs yesterday.

Engine No. 79 ran off the side track near the rolling mills at Danversport Wednesday. A wrecking train came from Salem and set things right.

Friday last was observed by the W. C. T. U. as a day of prayer for continued prohibition. Miss Elizabeth Larkin addressed the morning meeting, and Mrs. E. Trask Hill, of Boston, and Rev. Mr. Ewing, of Danvers, spoke very acceptably in the afternoon.

The large and well known carpet firm of John H. Pray, Sons & Co., of Boston, have an advertisement in our columns to which we direct attention. This firm are reliable and carry first class goods, besides having a reputation which is unsurpassed. Their stock for spring is now ready for inspection.

Mrs. James Fitzpatrick, while lifting a teakettle of hot water from the stove, last Saturday, was burned about the foot by the falling fluid.

Mr. Charles Reed, son of W. W. Reed, employed at F. Osborn, Jr., & Co's shop, got his right hand caught in a blacking machine, last Friday, and it was badly injured. It was nearly half an hour after the accident, before the machine could be taken apart sufficiently to release him.

Mr. Robert Emerson, the well known butcher, while pushing his wagon out of his shed, last Saturday morning, slipped on the ice, and his right arm struck on a corn beef tank, dislocating the shoulder. Mr. Emerson has had hard luck, has and met with a number of severe accidents during the past few years. He has the sympathy of the community.

Mrs. Elizabeth Tucker has removed to West Peabody.

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW IN HIS LIBRARY

Our engraving of "Longfellow in His Library," of which the above cut is a miniature copy, is an accurate representation of the room which Longfellow used from 1837 until the time of his death, and it will undoubtedly be accepted as the favorite picture of the "American Popular Poet." The likeness is good; the attitude and expression happily betoken a mind deeply occupied in the task before him, and everyone who admires and appreciates the writings of the poet, will be pleased to see the appointments of the room in which he worked, together with a faithful portrait of him. Remember that this is no chromo, but a Superb Steel-plate Engraving, 24x32 inches in size.

The central figure is that of the Great Poet. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical. The artizan is in his workshop. Aside from from being the workshop of our immortal poet, it was the room in which Gen. George Washington made his headquarters, directly after the battle of Bunker Hill.

We shall offer this engraving till February 1st, on the following conditions

EVERY NEW SUBSCRIBER paying $2, in advance, for the PRESS, will receive a copy FREE.

Old Subscribers, in arrears, who will settle to date and pay one year in Advance, will receive a copy.

Subscribers who pay in advance can have the PRESS and engraving by paying $2.50.

The Doctor's Honeymoon.

A HYDROPHOBIC ROMANCE.

The state of New Jersey takes pride in being the birthplace of one Don Pietro D. McRogue, who is a genuine M. D., (made doctor) having paid for his diploma in silver, and crawled into the profession on all fours. This accomplished, he took up his abode with a maiden aunt, who resided in the village of Egypt, advertised in the county journals, put a brass M. D. on his door plate, provided himself generously with pills and powders and a case of surgical instruments, set up a gig of his own, (which in due time and for divers reasons he exchanged for a buggy) and thus equipped became at once a professional man. To hear him talk, the natural supposition would have been that he was in the habit of raising some Lazarus daily, and that incurable patients and deadly diseases were what he continually coveted. Perhaps it was to his habit of bragging, he viewed his early success with the ladies. If there is anything endearing to the fair sex it is this incomprehensible power of self inflation that makes a man a giant in his own estimation, even though he may be a pigmy in the eyes of others. It is true that most of the Doctor's lady patients were single, and he was still a marketable young man, with some money, a good profession, a growing practice, and indefinite prospects.

But it is not to be believed that the unsophisticated damsels of Egypt ever indulged in such mercenary sentiments as are involved in the foregoing train of reflection. Be this as it may, headache, hysteria, and other ailments of like ilk, were soon so unpleasantly (?) predominant that Doctor Don (as he was familiarly called) exchanged his gig for a buggy, in order that he might give these unfortunate girls an occasional airing behind his "high-stepper." The elderly people thought it a little singular that so much of this riding was done after nightfall. Their experience had informed them that night air was not good for invalids; but the Doctor ordered it, and whatever the Doctor orders is unquestionably right, even though it be in drams of that unpalatable beverage known as cognac brandy, or in the diversion gained by that disgusting and immoral practice known as theatre going. After all, your really popular physician is the one who prescribes morning walks, regular attendance at church and plenty of water—hot or cold—without the shadow of a stick in it.

However, about this time, Doctor Don was siezed with a serious attack of heart disease, which threatened, much to the dismay and consternation of the Egyptian maidens, to carry him off. He was quite anxious that this should be the case. He had reached that momentous period when life is such a burden, that man wants somebody to help him bear it. Of course he in his superior generosity gives her the feather end, and most of the satisfaction consists in the unselfish knowledge that he has a companion in misery.

Delilah Hutchinson was the cause of all Doctor Don's suffering, nor had he an allopathic dose powerful enough to put him out of his misery, unless he took a through prescription to that "undiscovered bourne" which seems to have little charm for adventurers, perhaps because "no traveller returns."

Physician heal thyself! was continually ringing its changes in poor Doctor Don's ears, and indeed he did his best toward the accomplishment of a cure, but without Delilah the charm was like a handful of herbs without the witchcraft of incantation. A maiden held in her wee hands (she wore a number eight glove) the magic power to restore or destroy, and taking true medical advantage of the situation she kept him evenly balanced between hope and despair for many weeks, giving him large doses of the bitter quinine of indifference, alternated with sugar coated pills of love, and the morphine and hashish conveyed in honeyed words.

Delilah was a defunct schoolmarm; not that she was a virtual spectre, but that she had wrapped the drapery of her dolly varden about her, and by the common consent of the board had passed away from school duties. Sic semper tyrannis, declaimed the scholars, and she perished. But she was not to be effaced from the world's remembrance in this summary manner, and as her father was a feudal lord, (defined in Egypt as a man having no feud with his neighbors) the matter was soon forgotten or charitably overlooked, except by people with inconvenient memories. As for Delilah, poor little innocent, she quite forgot it, and nursed new plans and projected new schemes, which all tended to the accomplishment of one purpose, for Delilah was determined to go abroad. See Paris and die! was the height of her ambition, when she met Doctor Don, who, after he had journeyed numberless times forth and back through all the agonies and ecstasies of first love (that was what he called it with a sly grimace at the adjective) carefully dusted the Hutchinson's sitting room carpet, spread out his silk handkerchief, dropped upon both knees in a style that would have made an amateur actor die of envy, and presented in pleading accents the momentous question, Your money or your life,(hold, I am getting things slightly mixed) Your hand and heart, or I perish.

Delilah softly cooed, It is yours, but there was speculation in her eye a few minutes later, when she said, where shall we spend our honeymoon, Don? Wherever you wish, my bumble-bee. O don't, was her playful response, don't call me a bumble-bee. I might sting you.

Don was nothing if not original and he, feeling well satisfied with his copy-right on the pet name, boldly asserted that she might sting and welcome. Even a wound inflicted by her hand would be thankfully received. Some time afterward he had slight cause to rememember his statement, which was followed, after a delicious pause, by Delilah's arch inquiry if he really expected her to decide such an important matter. Her bewildering smile played its part in influencing his reply, and he gave her carte blanche to make any move (I am getting mixed again) to decide the matter according to the dictates of her own sweet will; at the same time drawing her beautiful face (girls are all beautiful) up to his, that he might—but I am not writing a biography.

Then we will go to Paris, was her serene response.

To Paris, my love? he gasped interrogatively.

Yes, love, she answered, without seeming to notice his discomposure.

But—

But what? she asked in silvery tones. You think the expense is too great? Ah; Don, you do not love me.

Love you, and again there was a momentary convulsion, after which he whispered something not intended for the public ear, then he said audibly, but in husky tones, Paris is so far my darling.

O Don; far; and with me, she sobbed. I wouldn't have been so cruel to you, Don.

There! there! there! he said, in the soothing manner peculiar to nurses. It shall go to Paris.

That's a darling; that's my own Don; she exclaimed, wiping away the imaginary tears. And we will be married right away, my pet—two weeks from Wednesday. You shan't yield to me always, my Don, I will show you that I also can be generous.

Doctor Don kissed her, and said that sealed her his affianced bride; but why that kiss was any different from the million others he had given her I fail to comprehend—doubtless they understood why.

Once on his homeward way, love's hashish began to lose its power, and the doctor slapped his ears (perhaps to shorten them) and beat his breast fiercely, in order (so to speak) to identify himself. He go to Paris with a wife; and in two weeks. He had not dreamed of anything so sudden, so startling, so intensely realistic as this. He believed now he had meant love in the abstract, but she was a concrete girl and he ought ta have known better.

What was he to do? He could not live without her, and he could not see his way across the trackless deep, and he could not borrow money with any probability of repaying it, and he disliked to leave the vantage gained in Egypt. What should he do? Had he been president or even cashier of a bank, he might have arranged matters without much difficulty, or had he known P. B. S, the recently returned European traveller, he might have gained a point or two, but alas; he was only a poor country physician who had never managed a bank, and who thought far more about a little gold circlet to fit Delilah's forefinger than he did about the whole of the broken ring made to fit Tammany. What should he do? For more than a week he beat his wings (this is a metaphor) against that conundrum, when it was solved by Fate, and in a most unexpected manner.

PART SECOND.

About this time Europe and America began to be convulsed with the revelation of Monsieur Pasteur. He had made one grand discovery, and was advertising for subjects who were willing to test the pleasure of being bitten by a mad dog, and experience the consequent delights of inoculation—even though to accomplish the latter it were necessary to endure the perils of an ocean voyage. The public pulse ran high. Who should be the first martyr to science? Who would consent to brave the liability to seasickness and shipwreck? Who was willing a poor dog should be run mad in order that he might enjoy the sensation of being bitten, and give Monsieur the supreme delight of paying his expenses and furnishing him with pin money. Cold weather had already set in, and according to the wiseacres of successive generations, dogs run mad themselves only in the heated season. But Jersey is amazingly productive(as evidence of this let me cite the records of the mosquito crop) and mad canines soon abounded, and dog bitten patients grew painfully plenty. In short, should Monsieur's experiments prove successful, the future historian will hold up New Jersey as the first state whose sons sacrificed themselves to this science, and some coming senator may win tremendous applause upon the rostrum by frequent and witty allusions to his first trip to Paris, its incidents and dangers.

While we wander about among these madding details, Doctor Don has read of the star in the East and the wise boys from Jersey who followed it, and his resolution is taken. There is a man residing in Egypt who owns a savage dog. One morning, this dog was observed to be attentively reading the Philadelphia Boomerang. Shortly afterward he barked at sight of water (there was a mouse in it) and when he frothed at the mouth, and bit a boy who pulled his tail, he was condemned to durance vile. Here his lunecy increased, and he took a small chop out of the arm of another boy who failed to beat a sufficiently hasty retreat after punching him in the ribs with a stick. This was the dog on which Doctor Don placed his dependence; he would sacrifice himself, ostensibly to science, actually to Delilah, and would attempt to make one bite ticket them both; but if this proved unsuccessful, he would borrow his wife's passage money. If he recovered (and he had no doubt of Monsieur's skill) a long and happy life with Delilah would be the reward of his diplomacy (self sacrifice he called it). If he perished he should at least be able to say:

> "What matter if I go mad.
> I shall have had my day."

and that day was to be spent in a floating ark with his dove by his side.

Of all this he said not a word to Delilah, but laid his plans deeply and darkly. They were married on Wednesday (the sun shone, mark that, my fair but supertistious reader) at two p. m. At four he was called away; at five he bearded the dog in his den; at six he returned to his bride with the seeds of a fatal disease lurking in his system. Delilah was almost prostrated by the terrible accident that had so soon befallen him whom she had sworn to love, honor and obey, but when she learned that her husband's salvation depended on her exertions, and that they must leave New York en route for Paris the following morning, she bravely controlled her feelings, and was quite ready before the arrival of the carriage. Thus practically began love's honeymoon.

Alas for the plans that gang agley! Doctor Don was seasick all the way across, and while the young bride tearfully bemoaned her loneliness to a sympathetic Frenchman (also en route for Paris) and suffered all the agonies that moonlight and music, and blue seas and bluer skies can inflict upon a bereaved heart that is forced to seek consolation from a stranger, Doctor Don was leaning over the side of his berth and making night hideous. In fact he secretly cherished a suspicion that the virus from the dog had taken effect in his stomach. Could he have seen the little drama nightly enacted in the salon or on deck no doubt it would have contributed much to his relief, and it is quite possible that he would have masqueraded through the steamer as the ghostly madman; but blissful unconsciousness and a state room blanket kept him as comfortable as it was possible for a sea-sick individual to be, and only his inner man sent forth premonitory throes.

This condition of things lasted until they reached the gay French capitol. Pasteur was on hand with encouraging words and an ample supply of virus, but Doctor Don's spirits had ebbed as his stomach had emptied, and in the same ratio. Something more potent than the hopeful smile of Monsieur was requisite to his improvement. Delilah, kind angel that she was, still clung away from him with the same wife-like tenderness that had characterized her conduct during the whole voyage, but the Doctor, who might otherwise have resented such demonstrative displays of affection, thought them only the promptings of maidenly modesty, won from Delilah by the peculiarly unhappy situation in which she was placed.

At length the day for his inoculation arrived, and as Delilah was not allowed to be present at the dangerous ordeal lest her delicate sensibilities be quite overpowered, she remained in her own apartment until her husband had departed, and then went to a matinee, attended by her late compagon de voyage, where she sat calmly through five acts of rapine and murder, and returned to her hotel (as averred by a servant that saw her enter) as blooming and serene as if Doctor Don were about to meet her, and clasp her close with two well arms, and tell her that they had dreamed the tragic hydrophobic tale already known to the reader. That her calm exterior was not indicative of the condition of her mind, may be readily inferred from the following note which Doctor Don found an hour afterwards upon the table in their apartment. It read:—

Dear Don:—You are a goose to love me, for I love some one else. I met him on the voyage over, and he is just awfully splendid. I only married you to get away from Egypt, but you'll forgive me, won't you? Perhaps you might have made me love you in time, but you had to go and let that horrid dog give you the hydrophobia, and then you were seasick all the way over when I had been planning to have such an immensely good time—but no matter now. As Mark Twain says:—

> "Of all sad words of tongue or of pen
> The saddest are these—it might have been"

Mark is my favorite poet.

Now, Don, good-by, for I am going to leave you. No doubt you'll be glad of it. I haven't forgotten how I frightened you when I asked you to come to Paris. You won't have to pay my fare home and I hope that will be some consolation. We are going to Egypt (oriental Egypt) too awfully funny isn't it to come from the place you're going to. Ta-ta. BUMBLE-BEE.

P. S. I really hope you'll get better, and find some one who will love you as I never could, but don't get the hydrophobia next time. I should be very glad to hear from you, but my lovey says I musn't give my address. If I do he will think I am frivolous. DELILAH.

After reading this affectionate cologne stained epistle, Doctor Don siezed his revolver and vowed to follow them, but suddenly recollecting that he had neither money nor pass, and that Egypt was far away, he wrote out a prescription for enough morphia to end his career. Just as he was about to shuffle off this mortal coil, he was impressed with a vague idea that it might interfere seriously with his profession, and also with the efficacy of Pasteur's miracle, and in the name of science, he took just poppy balm enough to give him a good night's rest, and the following day he went out on the Boulevard, to mourn for his lost bride in a handsome phaeton and all the pretty girls he met had occasion to remark his woe begone smiles, and the frequency with which he made use of his handkerchief.

It is not yet time for Pasteur's decision regarding the success of his experiment on Doctor Don, but doubtless it will be favorable, and Don will be sure to receive a warm reception when he returns to Egypt, for the dog having failed to receive the money promised under contract for his share in the transaction, has developed another species of madness, and given his testimony in court that he never was hydrophobially mad. He has also brought proof that he could not bite if he would, as he is entirely lacking in the natural ivory requirisite to that performance, and has never had the impression of his gums taken for a new set, but this is said to be a dodge of the lawyer, who had his teeth extracted after he bit the doctor (knowing the lawyer, we haven't any doubt on the subject.) Her Penalty.

BY VELA VANSE.

But why not, father?

Ella, you know as well as I do the reason why I do not wish you to marry Granger. What is the use of my repeating it?

Will is as well and strong as anybody and likely to live as long.

But, Ella, can I not convince you that he is liable to have the same disease that his father and mother died of. Come, dear, won't you be reasonable?

Father, I shall marry Will Granger or no one, and Ella Mansfield rose from her chair by the window and faced her father in sullen defiance.

Then, by heaven, you shall marry no one. Go to your room, instantly, and the hitherto pleading father became the stern Judge Mansfield.

After his daughter had quitted the room he paced up and down the pretty parlor until his anger had somewhat cooled. Then he sat down at the table and hastily wrote a few lines to his sister, residing in a neighboring state, to expect his daughter and himself the following Saturday. Placing the letter in his coat pocket he went into the hall for his hat and gloves. He paused at the door as if uncertain what to do, and then after a moment's thought ran upstairs to his daughter's room. Turning the handle of the door he entered the room. Ella Mansfield sat at her table evidently writing a letter, for she held a pen in her hand and her writing desk was before her. She looked up as her father entered and hastily shut her writing desk. Mr. Mansfield took the key from her door, and merely saying, I think it best that you should keep your room until you come to your senses, he passed out, locked the door, and putting the key in his pocket left the house.

Ella Mansfield was just eighteen, very pretty, and as she had never known what it was to feel a mother's restraining influence, she had grown up a spoilt child.

The Judge had humored her in all her wishes, and although not rich by any means, yet he was well able to give his only child all the luxuries that she craved. They lived in a large manufacturing town where Judge Mansfield's residence was the finest to be seen for miles around. Ella had plenty of admirers, but of them all young Will Granger seemed to be the favored one. He was superintendent of one of the spool mills, unexceptional in character and liked by all.

Why then had Judge Mansfield refused him when he came to him asking the hand of his daughter in marriage? Not because he was afraid that he could not support his daughter, but because he knew Will Granger's parents; because he knew

FARM TALK.

I was pleased when I read my friend King's reply to my criticism of his remarks on fertilizers, made at the Farmers' Institute meeting held at Ipswich, to know that he was not correctly reported. I could not believe he would, with his extensive knowledge of agriculture, make such a sweeping statement against the fertilizing properties of barn cellar manure. His reputation as a farmer of superior judgment, has always been admitted by all who have the honor of his acquaintance. What the farmers of Essex County want to determine is, which is the best for enriching the soil, rendering it more productive and remunerative to the owner. Phosphates or animal manure, which, when used alone for a number of years, will leave the land in the best condition to produce large crops of hay. Before the advent of phosphates of any description the farmers used all the manure they could obtain, made by horses and cattle, thrown into the barn cellar, to be thoroughly worked over by the hogs. If not enough of this material could be obtained, they bought salt mud taken from the muscle beds found in the rivers in and around Salem. The fertilizing properties contained in the salt mud together with the rotten muscles, made an exceedingly good manure, and one much sought after by the farmers at that time. It was applied upon light, dry soil, from ten to twelve cords per acre, spread broadcast and ploughed in. This muscle mud was used principally for growing onions and the various root crops. It was slower in its action upon the crops than animal manure.

Before wealthy gentlemen commenced buying farms for summer residences and cultivation, barn manure was plenty and could be bought for from three to five dollars per cord, according to quality and situation. When these gentlemen farmers began buying manure they took all they could get hold of, paying whatever price was asked; making it very difficult for the market gardeners and other farmers to obtain the requisite amount to meet their own requirements. Then Peruvian guano, that most powerful adjunct was introduced into the market, selling from sixty to eighty dollars per ton, and considered cheap at that price. Five hundred pounds was a sufficient quantity for an acre of potatoes planted in the drill. This stimulant would produce fine crops at the expense of impoverishing the land where it was applied alone. A limited supply of leached wood ashes and a foreign substance known as Barnilla could be obtained of the soap manufacturers in and around Danvers, now Peabody.

About this time the commercial fertilizers were compounded and put upon the market. Year after year these phosphates have become more numerous, until at last the exigencies of the case demanded that we should have a manufacturer of bone fertilizers in our own town. Without one moment's delay, the right man for this place was forthcoming in the person of our genial friend Ames, one who has always proved himself equal to any emergency where a "nickel" is pending. As "tall oaks from little acorns grow," and "large streams from little fountains flow," even so has our friend's enterprise in the manufacture of the very best phosphate in the market, grown from less than one hundred tons a year up to nearly or quite one thousand tons. The farmers are appreciating his efforts in their behalf.

It is without doubt for the interest of the man who hires all the land he cultivates, to purchase phosphates entirely, his only object being to grow as large crops as he can, at the least possible expense, without any regard to the future condition of the land. Not so with the man who owns the farm he occupies. He has a different object in view. He is looking forward from his cultivated crops to the time for sowing down his land to grass, when he expects to fill his barns to repletion with his bountiful harvests of hay. To accomplish his purpose he uses freely fertilizers that will enrich, not impoverish, the soil. He finds that which he so much desires in the barn cellar, made by horses, cattle and hogs, not from their pulverized bones and muscles, to be adulterated with meadow mud, ground oyster shells and phosphate rock. Here my friend King may possibly find a solution to the mystery, "why the same land does not produce such heavy crops as it did fifty years ago." Quite a large proportion of the manure used by the farmers at the present time is the refuse of the tan yards, worth but little more than the expense of drawing. Who wonders that the land deteriorates treated with such materials for a dressing?

We remember a field belonging to one of our neighbors that had been used for growing onions, and manured from the barn cellar of its owner. When this field was laid down to grass it produced from a measured half acre, at the first cutting, over forty-two hundred pounds of thoroughly dried hay, weighed upon the town scales near the square. A good second crop was taken from the same land in the Fall. Use commercial fertilizers alone, and you will have to look for your heavy crop of hay, as the philosopher of old did for an honest man, with a lighted lantern in the day time. In closing let me say I am glad this discussion was opened, for I have learned that my friend was not so regardless of the truth in his statements as the reporter made it appear. I had charity for him all the time, knowing him to be a luminary of the greatest magnitude in the agricultural firmament before whose brilliancy we lesser lights pale into insignificance.

ONE OF THE FARMERS.

WEST PEABODY.

LECTURE BY HON. WARREN BROWN ON "THE HAY CROP."

The speaker said the selection of land adapted for the raising of hay should receive the first consideration of the farmer and stock raiser. The soil should be neither very wet or dry, and naturally wet land should be properly drained. All obstructions, such as boulders, bushes and trees, should be removed from the hay field. In preparing land for grass, thorough ploughing and pulverizing are requisite to success. In breaking up new land, turn the sod under in the fall, and allow it to remain in this condition through the winter, that the action of frosts may mellow it. In the spring cross plough and harrow thoroughly, using first a disk, afterward a smoothing harrow. In manuring, apply to the land if moderately dry, by using a manure spreader, six cords of finely mixed, well rotted animal manure and one hundred bushels of unleached hard wood ashes to the acre. If the land is moist or wet apply 1500 pounds of pulverized bone with above quantity of manure and harrow it in in both cases. The speaker formerly used 500 pounds of Peruvian guano with above quantity of manure with good results; but guano having greatly depreciated in quality, he does not now make use of it. He did not consider it profitable to apply commercial fertilizers alone to grass land; nor the ploughing in of green forage crops for plant food; neither did the farmer get back in value of manure the cost of cotton seed consumed by his cattle; that there was little or no value in spent tan ashes; he would rather pay double price for dry than for leached ashes. He preferred unleached hard wood ashes to any other fertilizer.

In seeding, great care should be taken in getting good clean seed; he used a seed glass to determine the quality. Grass seed can be sown on any day of the year. For fall seeding, August and not later than the 10th of September are good months for seeding wet land to get a good stand. Timothy, Red-top and Clover mixed make the best hay, and should be sown by using the Calhoun broad cast seed sower, going in both directions to ensure an even catch. The proportions of each are, one and one-half pecks Timothy, ten pounds Clover and one bushel Red-top, or three pounds of hulled Red-top to an acre. The lecturer preferred the hulled to the unhulled, as the latter was of a chaffy orature, much wild seed being with it. He liked the old method of seeding down with grain, and used oats in preference to other kinds. After sowing the seed should be brushed in and the land rolled down. As regards Hungarian, Twitch and orchard grasses, the former is not desirable to have, since in proportion to its value it impoverishes the land beyond all other grasses. Concerning the two latter various opinions exist as to their value; he would rather not have them on his farm. Clover will stand the drought better than other grasses, the rootlets being larger and extending deeper into the soil; he thought it was a mistake in farmers not sowing more of it. After land is seeded to grass, weed it and have a good clean field.

In haying time he would not have any other work going on, but would concentrate his men and teams upon the harvesting of this crop. He used the improved machinery and tools, had the mowing machine, horse rake, hay tedder and horse pitch fork. The speaker did not believe in very early or late cut hay. Timothy should be cut in bloom; Clover when the heads turn. He commenced haying the last of June or the first of July. In cutting and curing,—in cutting the grass he used Walter A. Woods mower; would start his machine as soon as the dew was off in the morning, and mow until the dew fell at night, and continued to do so in good weather until the grass was all down. He tedded the mown grass several times during the day with the Bullard Tedder, and every afternoon would rake into windrows, using the Tiger horse rake, and put into cocks of about one hundred pounds each, making them as high as possible. These he allowed to stand for three or four days until cured, and then put them into the barn. He never opened the hay unless sure of getting it in the same day. In unloading the hay in the barn he used the Wellis Harpoon horse pitch fork. Grass land in good condition yields from two to two and one-half tons per acre.

In top dressing land. He top dressed his land in the spring with three cords of manure to the acre, using the manure spreader; did not regard it of any permanent benefit only for one year. In preparing land for ensilage corn, he would apply six cords of manure to the acre using the spreader and plow it in; then furrow out and use 300 pounds of commercial fertilizer in the drill. He used Blunt's prolific seed corn; could not raise field corn for less than fifty cents a bushel shelled.

Mr. Brown has a large farm at Hampton Falls, seventy acres being in grass, and from which he cuts over one hundred tons of the best quality of English hay, all of which he sold at his barn this season at $16 per ton. He keeps fifty head of stock and feeds with salt hay, ensilage and brewer's grain given in due proportions. He sells his milk at the door. Mr. Brown is not only a practical farmer and a politician of note, having served as State Senator for several terms and at the present time being on the Governor's staff, with an unholy hankering for the office of His Excellency, but also ranks high as a sportsman, being a great shot, trapper and angler. At the time when crows heads and woodchuck tails were legal tender in New Hampshire, a certain aspirant for gubernatorial honors, not having become wealthy from being patriotic, and believing an imposing residence would be favorable to his chances as a candidate, undertook to accomplish his purpose by a "wholesale slaughter of the innocents." Accordingly he commenced operations upon a gigantic scale, and to such an extent did success crown his efforts that the State Legislature, in order to prevent the treasury from becoming totally bankrupt, repealed the law awarding bounty for such game. The would-be-governor succeeded, however, in gaining his point, and a large mansion was built "from bounty received for crows heads and woodchucks tails." On one occasion our friend shot into a large flock of crows; not a feather was ruffled, but the air was full of legs. He picked up fifteen bushels of them showing what the harvest would have been had he aimed a little higher, the bounty being five cents a head. At another time he went a fishing and tumbled into the Piscataqua in trying to land a fish. After he got ashore he pulled salmon trout out of his boot legs, one after another, until he had one hundred and fifty weighing from one to three pounds each. This gentleman once had an extraordinary cow which he was fattening. He gave her four quarts of salt three times daily and no other feed. The cow would lay down, get up, stretch, chew her cud, drink water and give three cans of fresh milk a day until she finally was turned for beef.

One of my children, a girl about nine years old, had a very bad discharge from her head and nose of a thick, yellowish matter, and was growing worse. We had two different physicians prescribe for her, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise in three days there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was apparently cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

That sense of extreme weariness indicates disordered blood. Ayer's Sarsaparilla purifies and invigorates.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

THE BOSTON & MAINE RAILROAD

SWEARS

SIX THOUSAND, SIX HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX (6696) represents the exact number of cases of Rubber Goods received by us so far for this season's trade in our Wholesale and Retail Departments, as sworn to by the Freight Agent of the Boston and Maine R. R. Co., over whose line our goods are delivered. And this immense quantity—more than all the retail boot and shoe stores in Lynn, combined, could use in five years' time—is but a fraction of what we shall need to meet the demands of our Wholesale and Retail trade this present season.

Sworn Statement of the Boston & Maine R. R. Co.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, ESSEX, ss.

I, F. A. Barnard, Boston & Maine R. R. Co.'s Freight Agent, on oath do depose and say that I have delivered over this road six thousand six hundred and ninety-six cases of rubber goods to Wellman Osborne on this season's trade.

F. A. BARNARD, Freight Agent B. & M. R. R. Co.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this fourteenth day of December, A. D. 1885.

THOMAS B. KNIGHT, Justice of the Peace.

IS IT POSSIBLE

That the other dealers, obliged to buy from the jobbers and pay the jobbers' profits, and weighed down by high rents, can compete with the only dealer in Lynn who buys everything direct from the manufacturers, has but one rent to pay—three of his four stores being on his own premises—and who is the only Lynn dealer using rubbers in quantities large enough to enable him to deal directly with the rubber companies and avail himself of the large discounts they offer to jobbers?

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE!

Remember that where others make bare assertions, unsupported by any testimony or anything worthy to be called the shadow of a fact, we give the sworn statement of the Boston & Maine R. R. Co., and can produce, if necessary, all of our way bills to silence the doubts of the most incredulous.

WE CHALLENGE

Any other Lynn dealer, be he retailer or self-styled wholesaler, on forfeit of $1000, to produce absolute proof that he has at present received one-fifth as many rubber goods as we have, the proceeds to be given to the LYNN CITY HOSPITAL. Here is a glorious opportunity to benefit the most deserving institution in the city. We make the offer in good faith, and give the talkers a chance to show the courage of their conviction by accepting the challenge, or

FOREVER AFTER HOLD THEIR PEACE.

REMEMBER

That in the past we have had undisputed possession of the field, and when we say that no other dealer can offer the inducements we do, we do not speak idle words, but are backed up by a record in the past unequalled by any, and a stock in the present inexhaustible in quantity and variety, and of the best makes in the country. We are splendidly equipped to beat our record of former triumphs.

When the First Snow Flies,

No matter what price others offer, we, as a matter of course,

ALWAYS BEAT THEM.

WE ARE SELLING

Best Makes.	Our Prices.	Others' Prices
Men's Dull Finish Boots,	$2.25	$2,85

The above prices are absolutely as low as the other dealers can buy the same for from the jobbers and we are giving the people the benefit of wholesale prices.

Now for those who wish for cheaper rubbers and serviceable ones, we have in jobs and drives of perfect and slightly blemished goods, the following:

CRUSHERS OF HIGH PRICES!

Men's Prime Rubber Boots, perfect,	$1.65	Men's Imitation Sandals, perfect,	33c
Boys' Prime Rubber Boots, "	1.45	Women's Imitation Sandals, "	21c
Youths' Prime Rubber Boots, "	1.10	Men's Buckle Arctics, "	85c
Misses' Prime Rubber Boots, "	.85

It must be borne in mind that these slightly imperfect rubbers are not to be confounded with the Tar rubbers with which the market is flooded, and which are made expressly as cheap rubbers out of old rubber ground up, and barely held together with a liberal mixture of cold tar. These rubbers are made by the best companies in the country, out of good stock, and for service, but in the process of manufacture have been subject to some slight blemish which does not affect their wear in the least. They are as much better than the afore-mentioned Tar rubbers as a fine beaver overcoat, with a slight imperfection hardly noticeable, is better than a shoddy coat made up of ground-up material.

NO JEW RACKETS HERE.

When we advertise prices, we abide by them, and do not have to say to every custemer, "Out of your size, "Have some next week," etc. We do not do business that way, We have just what we advertise, and in abundance, and customers do not leave our stores dissatisfied, nor feel obliged to buy a higher priced article if they do not wish it.

WELLMAN OSBORNE,

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

WE LEARN that the proposition of Chief Engineer Tibbetts to reduce the number of men in the fire department, by making one company of fifteen men run both steamers, does not meet with favor among the firemen. They say, and we think justly, that it will cripple the fire department. It is now in good condition, composed of men who have done good service in years past, and most of them, particularly the two steamer companies, men of long experience in the town. A case is instanced of the fire Sunday night. Our fire department is a volunteer one, and it cannot be expected that at all times every man will be able to respond to a fire. Sunday night it is said that many firemen were not present; and if it had been a large fire this absence would have been particularly manifest. What then might happen if the number of men is still further reduced?

The matter of running one steamer to a fire, and keeping the other in reserve until called for, is a good one. Yet the men belonging to the reserve steamer report, and we are informed are expected to report, at every fire. They are ready to take hold wherever needed, and to be stationed wherever they may be assigned by the engineers. It is better for the town to have a few more men at the small sum which the firemen get for their services, than to run any risk of weakening the department. If the Gamewell system of fire alarm is put in, Hose 5 will not be expected to respond except in case a second alarm is given, unless the fire be in that part of the town. At an ordinary fire, then, the fire department will be twelve men short. If, then, the force is still further reduced by nine men, the department will consist of twenty-one men less than at present, except in cases where the second alarm is given and the South Peabody department called. While it has been said with truth that a delay of a few moments makes an infinite difference in the handling of a fire, it may be as truly said that the loss of a few men at the beginning of a fire may work equally serious results. While the advocates of the fire alarm claim that the time saved in locating accurately a fire will be of great advantage to the town, it is equally of service to the citizens that the number of men shall be large enough to ensure the speedy extinguishment of the fire. We don't believe our citizens want to run the risk of any experiments in this direction, or to take for granted the opinion of the Chief Engineer that by the reduction of the force the fire can be as properly handed. It is far better to have too many firemen than too few. The want of an experienced fireman at the proper time and place is worth ten times the little amount of $30 a year which is paid to him by the town for his services.

IT HAS been suggested to us, and we think the suggestion a good one, that the town reduce the number of fire engineers, instead of reducing the number of men in the department. It is claimed that a chief engineer and two assistants can handle a fire in better shape, than under the present arrangement. There are now too many "bosses." There would be less difficulty about repairs—a smaller number of engineers, like a small committee, being more likely to work together. We give the suggestion for what it is worth, and commend it to the judgment of our Board of Selectmen.

THE BUSINESS to come before the town at the adjourned meeting is of considerable importance, and more than the usual amount was referred to the committees to be considered by them and referred to the meeting which comes next Monday evening. The report of the finance committee, with the large number of articles referred to them, is to be considered and the reports of the special committees, to whom were referred the alterations at the Central station and the automatic fire alarm, besides several matters relative to drainage and the extension of water privileges. We learn that the committee on Fire Alarm will report in favor of the Gamewell system which is used almost exclusively in our large cities. It provides for boxes in different portions of the town, from which an alarm is to be rung in. The fire can be at once located, and it is probable that in connection with this notification at the Central Fire Alarm station, some arrangement will be suggested for informing the citizens of the town of the locality of the fire. An alarm will be given at once at the pumping station, so that the Engineer will start the pumps at once, thus giving the department all the water that is needed besides the advantage from the pumps. There is little question as to the need by the town of a good system of fire alarm; we trust it will be favorably considered in the town meeting.

A public hearing was given Monday afternoon, in the Selectmen's room, by the Finance Committee, on the petition of Rev. W. Spaulding and others on the proposed cemetery at West Peabody. Mr. Spaulding said that Cedar Grove Cemetery was laid out for the use of the whole town, but it was of no great service to West Peabody. During the first ten years no lot had been purchased there by West Peabody people, and there were only two or three now, out of 193 sold. There had been four interments in Cedar Grove Cemetery from West Peabody out of some 600 made there. The average death rate of West Peabody was ten or twelve a year. For the last sixty years there had been about 150 deaths in West Peabody, and only four interments in Cedar Grove Cemetery. It does not serve the purpose for which it is intended. The reason is not far to see. The distance is long. It is nearer to either cemetery in Peabody. There is also a considerable expense. The people come to town for coaches, which have a distance of ten miles each way to go, if the interment is made in Cedar Grove. The lots in Cedar Grove were sold at $25.00 each at first, but two during the past year had sold at $130—and the average price was $80. This price would shut off four-fifths of the West Peabody people who have no means to purchase lots at that price. They need facilities for laying away their dead which shall not cover such an expense. For this reason the primitive method of laying the dead in private burial places has been adopted. There are two or three thousand graves on the farms of West Peabody; some of these private cemeteries have been not only abandoned but lost. Generation after generation has been buried here. For two hundred and fifty years the dead have been laid away in nooks and corners of farms. Some of these lots would not be abandoned, but many of them would, if there was a public cemetery.

Mr. Spaulding had in mind a lot close by the station, belonging to Miss Emily Taylor, which contained ten acres. Five of these was open land, the rest lightly wooded, mostly with oak. The wood was worth $200, but he would advise leaving the most of it, making it pleasanter. It was free from stone, and half of it would need no grading—the other half very little. The south side falls abruptly to a meadow, than which there was no better place for a row of tombs, if it was desired. It can be purchased for $650 including the woodland. Parties in West Peabody had said that they would be glad to purchase it at that price. It would be necessary to fence in about thirty rods, either with an iron fence or with wood covered with asphaltum. He thought $100 would cover that. It would cost $150 more to grade and lay out four rows of lots. It would cost $400 to have a receiving tomb and $300 for a hearse. It would be a convenience to have both the hearse and the tomb, but the people of West Peabody would not insist upon that. They would be content with the land and the grading.

J. G. Walcott and others spoke favorably of the matter, covering about the same ground as Mr. Spaulding. The hearing lasted about two hours.

The entertainment given by the Merry Workers of the Universalist Church, last evening, was a decided success, the vestry being crowded to its fullest capacity. The two farces were capitally presented and reflect much credit upon those having the matter in charge.

Miss Fannie Jackman, residing corner of Tremont and Wallis streets, gives a birthday party to her young schoolmates this afternoon.

MUSICAL NOTES.

At the next Monday evening meeting of the Unity Club an essay on the great musical composers will be given by Mrs. F. C. Ferguson. The essay will be illustrated by vocal and instrumental selections from the several composers. Miss Dodge will render the instrumental portions of the programme, and Frank W. Stanley, Miss Emma Rice and Mrs. J. P. Fernald will sing selections from Mozart, Handel, Mendelssohn and others. Miss Rice will sing "But the Lord is mindful of his own," from Elijah, and Mrs. Fernald will sing "Come unto Him" from the Messiah.

Andrews, Moulton & Johnson were given leave to withdraw on their petition for a license to give a concert in Mechanic Hall on Sunday night by the aldermen.—Sunday Globe.

That is really too bad. A concert on Sunday evening by the Salem Aldermen would be a rich treat. It certainly would draw.

The last concert in the course of entertainments by the Salem Cadet Band was given by the full Cadet Band itself. The concert was in every respect equal to anything given by that band, and we understand that the course has been a financial success to the band. Among the selections rendered by the band was an army hymn composed by Geo. Peabody, Esq., of Salem, which is very highly spoken of.

A memorial tablet of Italian marble has been placed upon the western wall of Grace Church, in Salem, in memory of Dr. J. F. Tuckerman, for so many years director of the music in that church.

Mr. Fred C. Blake took the place of Mr. Eri Littlefield in the choir of the Baptist church last Sunday.

If sufficient encouragement is given this week, Mr. Phippen will give a course of three chamber concerts at Academy Hall, on the afternoons of April 27 and May 4 and 7. The price of the course ticket is only $1, and we should suppose every seat would be taken in a musical community like that of Salem and vicinity. Mr. Phippen will have the assistance of Miss Gertrude Franklin and Miss Louise Gage, as well as Mr. Giese and Mr. Campanari as instrumentalists.

All things end at last. Now it is "The Mikado," the predestined and foreordained close of his career on the Hollis street stage being set for Saturday evening, the 27th inst. The great success attains to-morrow evening its 150th consecutive representation in this city. Dainty little statuettes of the never to be forgotten "three little maids from school" are to be presented on this interesting occasion to every lady who holds a coupon check for this anniversary performance. Then, and on every other "Mikado" night, there is likely to be a very brilliant audience.

Miss H. Louise Laine of Boston, formerly of this town, has received a call to teach voice culture in the South Wertina University near Austin, Texas, but has declined the position.

A sacred concert will be given in the South Peabody church next Wednesday evening, by the chorus choir of the First Methodist Church, of Lynn, under the direction of J. E. Aborn. Miss Grace Delnow will give several readings in connection with the concert. Among the choruses will be the Gloria from Mozart's 12th Mass. Miss Ethel Clark will sing "Angels ever bright and fair," and Miss Fannie Alley "He was despised," from the Messiah. The programme is certainly a fine one, and should attract not only our South Peabody friends but people from other parts of the town as well.

There is some talk of getting together a number of our amateur singers and actors and producing the Mikado. This would make a hit and there is plenty of talent in town if it could be concentrated.

Miss Katie F. Linehan was the organist at St. John's Church this morning, when a sermon was preached by an Irish priest.

The Peabody friends of Mr. Ira Nador at No. 64 Market street, Lynn, will be pleased to know that he is doing a very prosperous business and is at present remodeling his store. The store is sixty feet deep with a kitchen in which are set tanks to keep ice cream. In the basement is a large refrigerator which holds thirty tons of ice. Close to the refrigerator is a machine run by water power for freezing ice cream. In the rear of the store is a bakery and confectionery manufactory. The former is in charge of Mr. Carlo Baracehim, who was employed in a similar position for the famous Delmonico of New York for a number of years. His son has charge of the confectionery department. Mr. Nador's store is being finished in imitation of cherry and when completed will be one of the most attractive stores in the city. He at present has one of the finest confectionery teams on the road and has another in process of construction. Mr. Nador makes a specialty of furnishing ice cream for private parties, and attends to all kinds of catering.

SPARKS.

Sunday night shortly before midnight as officers Sweeney and Barnaby were coming down Foster street they smelled smoke as of burning leather, and thinking that there must be a fire in some of the factories in the neighborhood of the Square they started to investigate, but just as they got on the Square the cry of fire was raised by some one on Lowell street, near the engine house. The officers then started for the bells and in a short space of time the apparatus and firemen were at work putting solid streams into the building on Railroad Avenue, owned by C. Warren Osborn and occupied by William Reardon as a manufactory of glove kid leather, the whole front part of the inside of the building appearing to be in flames, although it had not broken through on the outside, and owing to the prompt work of the firemen, it did not break out, but was soon extinguished. The fire was probably caused by a kerosene lamp, which was left burning on the top of the boiler, becoming heated, and the body, which was of tin becoming unsoldered, allowing the oil to take fire, setting an upright which communicated the fire to the floor timbers and then run to the finishing room above where it was discovered in good season to prevent a hot fire. As it was the damage was about $4000, of which about $500 will be on machinery, belts, shafting, etc., and the balance on building and stock in process of finish of which there was quite a large amount. The whole was fully covered by an insurance of $6500, of which $2000 was in the Home Insurance Co. of New York, through Mackintire's Salem agency. $2500 on stock, tools, etc., belonging to William Reardon and others in the agencies of Geo. P. Daniels and T. H. Johnson of Salem and $2000 on boiler, machinery, etc., through the agency of O. B. Chadwick & Co., in the Phenix of Brooklyn and the Franklin, $1000 in each. The whole department with the exception of Hose 5 were present, but only Steamer 2, H. & L., Hose 1 and 4 were worked. The fire was discovered by a young man by the name of Ward. The fire was promptly handled and well stopped so that only a short delay need be occasioned in the work at the factory. Mr. Reardon was flooded at the time of the freshet and now this fire coming gives him about all the bad luck that should fall to one man's lot in a season. The alarm was a poor one, not more than half the members hearing it.

Thursday noon at 11.45 o'clock an alarm was given for a slight fire in the boiler room at the Upton glue works in South Peabody. The department were quickly on the ground, but their services were not required as the factory brigade were able to handle it. The flames drove the man who blew the whistle, away from the whistle rope.

As the hook and ladder truck was turning from Lowell street into Foster street, last Thursday noon, on the occasion of the alarm from Upton's glue works, a lady who was crossing Foster street at the crossing became bewildered and stopped, and but for the prompt action of Lewis J. Foan, who caught her in his arms and carried her back to the sidewalk, would have been run over. As it was Mr. Foan was struck with the end of one of the ladders as the carriage swung around.

William Brown of Hose 1, a splitter at T. E. Proctor's currying shop, while sharpening his knife Tuesday forenoon, received a bad cut on the middle finger of his right hand. Dr. Foster took three stitches in the wound.

Assistant Foreman A. A. Carleton, of H. & L. 1, has taken a position on the Salem & Danvers road as a conductor.

President Stover, of the Gamewell company, was in town yesterday afternoon, in consultation with the committee on electric fire alarm.

Daniel Low's store in Salem is to Essex County what Tiffany's is to New York, a leader in introducing what is new and beautiful in silver and gold. This spring he is opening many original designs in bridal silver, and those wishing to purchase can here find as large an assortment of fine goods as in most of the stores in Boston and at much less price. Also about twenty new styles in ladies' gold watches, with new chains, charms, etc. His specialties should be seen before purchasing.

If District Attorney Hurlbut wants a re-election the coming fall, he should have it. We hear intimations that the Democracy would not work very hard to assure this, but be that as it may, it is the plain duty of every temperance man to vote for him. The Republican nomination should go to him without fail. He is as fully as deserving of the votes of both parties as is Register Mahoney. We hope to see him appointed, if the bill for solicitor general is passed. —Cape Ann Breeze.

The very desirable store Nos. 250 to 254 Essex street, until recently occupied by the Wilmot Clothing Co., is undergoing a thorough renovation preparatory to the reception of as fine and complete a stock of clothing, hats, caps, and gents' furnishings as was ever shown in this vicinity. The new firm which has secured these commodious quarters, is Kent & Boynton, both young men, popularly and deservedly known to the local trade, and since Mr. Wilmot's lease ran out they have had a force of men engaged at work preparing the rooms for their use. The ceilings have been entirely replaced. A large workroom has been added at the rear, where the firm propose to manufacture their own goods, and the salesrooms have been entirely refitted with French plate mirrors of handsome design, while other improvements worthy of note have been made. The firm propose to keep on hand the finest stock of ready-made clothing to be found east of Boston, and, in addition to this, a line of material for custom work not often met with. The new house will be open for business on Thursday morning next, but in the evening for the inspection of goods only, at which time a concert will be given by the Salem Cadet Band.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Alonzo P. Phillips, for sixteen years a resident of this place, died last Saturday. Mr. Phillips was a man of rare good sense and marked ability, and the entire neighbornood will feel its loss through his death. He was born in Rowley, Mass., May 2, 1804. He lived in Rowley until he was 21 years of age, when he went to Peabody, Mass., then to Danvers. He was engaged for many years in the manufacture of boots and shoes. About 1867 he retired from business and travelled two years in the West. In 1870 he purchased the Alfred Daniels place in Medway, where he has since resided. Mr. Phillips was a prominent anti-slavery man, having identified himself at an early age when the movement was more than unpopular. He was a personal friend of Wendell Phillips and Wm. Lloyd Garrison and has taken an active part in sustaining their acts and ideas. He was also a strong temperance man and a life long total abstainer. He always took a great deal of interest in the affairs of this town, although never holding any office. The past few months he has gradually failed and death was not unexpected. Rev. R. K. Harlow, his pastor, officiated at the funeral services, which were held at the house on Wednesday afternoon. The interment took place in Oakland cemetery.—Milford Gazette.

The camp fire to be held next Wednesday, the 24th, by Post 50 G. A. R., promises to be a big affair. Fearing that the small town hall would not accommodate the large company expected, the committee have voted to hire the rink for the supper. Department Commander Tobin and staff, Past Dept. Commanders Cogswell, Patch and Evans, and other prominent comrades are expected. W. A. Smith is making preparations for an entertainment to be given in the large town hall, which will be preceded by several brief speeches. Visiting posts will be received at Post 50 headquarters. Music will be furnished by the Salem band and fireworks will illumine the line of march to the hall. The Chelsea post is expected to turn out one hundred men and will be accompanied by its drum corps.

The Trustees of the Peabody Institute held their annual meeting last Monday evening, and elected the following officers:—President, Francis H. Appleton; Secretary, George M. Foster; Treasurer, George H. Poor; Finance Committee, Dr. C. C. Pike, Frank E. Farnham, Geo. J. Winchester, Thos. Carroll, Merritt Cook; Building Committee, G. M. Foster, G. Fred Osgood D. P. Grosvenor. J. D. McKeen was elected janitor. The following were chosen Lyceum and Library Committee for the ensuing year:—G. Fred Osgood, A. W. Littlefield, Frank C. Merrill, L. P. Osborne, S. S. Littlefield, Geo. M. Foster, Charles A. Weare, S. E. Cassino, W. G. Dix, P. H. O'Conor, Willard Cook, R. F. Walker.

The school committee organized last Thursday evening with the choice of J. W. Hudson Chairman and G. Fred Osgood Secretary, with sub committees the same as last year. Mr. C. R. Bill was elected music teacher for the balance of the school year. They also voted to give public musical, writing and drawing exhibitions to show the proficiency of the pupils. Miss Rollins, second assistant at the high school, resigned her position to take effect the close of the term.

We desire to call the attention of our readers to the new advertisement of Geo. A. Collins. Mr. Collins has built up a trade in this town which is constantly increasing. Mr. Hanson, the manager of the store, is an affable, courteous gentleman, and our readers will find everything in his store just as represented. His regulator is corrected daily by the standard time in Cambridge, and Mr. Hanson cordially invites our readers to call at any time and have their watches regulated.

S. M. Sayford, the well known evangelist, has very lately written to a friend an interesting account of his work in the South. He is following up the labors of Moody and Sankey, visiting the several points of their work. He lately left Memphis, where he achieved good results, and is now beginning his work at Houston, Texas. He writes that it is a somewhat difficult field, but there are signs of a good work being done there. He was to stay till the 14th.

Mr. W. C. Morse, late cutter in the dressmaking department of Almy, Bigelow & Washburn, and Miss A. D. Crain, late with W. G. Webber & Co., have taken rooms at 237 Essex street, where they will be pleased to see their friends.

Union Post 50 G. A. R. will attend the bazar of Post 90 of Danvers, this evening.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Michael Ahearn fell from a ladder at the grease factory of Matthew Lynn, on Crowninshield street, last Thursday, and broke a rib.

Mr. H. C. Wilson, the hack driver, reports that as he was returning from Salem with his coupe early last Thursday morning, he was stopped on Main street by two men, one of whom took hold of the horse's head. He threatened the man with the consequences if he did not let go, and at the same time whipped up the horse. He reported to the police a few minutes later.

A loaded market wagon was deprived of one wheel by the railroad track on Central street, last Friday, and the load came to grief.

Milo Martinus, who was employed by Julyn the ice man, and had his hand caught between a large pair of iron ice tongs and the beam of one of the runs a few weeks ago, has gone to the Hospital to have the end of the finger amputated.

Two children called at the house of a well known resident on Washington street, last Thursday, and asked for something to eat. They were being fed in the kitchen and the servant girl left the room for a moment. When she returned she missed a silver salt shake from the table, and on searching the children it was found in a pocket of one of them.

Several of our business men ordered letter heads of a travelling agent who showed them excellent samples, but furnished a very inferior job in quality. They refused to take it in several instances.

Mr. Charles Nevers on Franklin street continues to enjoy very poor health. Last Thursday while attending the wants of her husband Mrs. Nevers met with an accident and sprained her ankle.

John Valente fell near the old hotel Monday and his knee was so badly injured that he had to be helped to the horse car, which he took for home.

Mrs. Kate Gallagher recently bought some oranges of a peddler and ate quite heartily of them. Shortly afterwards she was suffering great pain and at first her physician did not know the cause. On examining the oranges it was found that they had been frozen on the tree and had thus poisoned the lady. It is said that oranges which have been plucked from the trees and then frozen are harmless, but if frozen on the branches it is apt to poison those who eat them.

A sewing machine agent took one of his machines to the home of a farmer not two miles from Lowell street, last Friday, and tried to force it on the family. The man left it and told the family they could use it till called for. But the farmer didn't look at it that way and sat the machine outside the fence bounding his land, and there it remained through the rain of Saturday and remained out till Monday when it was taken away by the agent, who at first was going to fight but was quickly calmed down when the farmer told him that fighting was in his line of business and the agent could have all he wanted to take away.

Some one other than the owner wheeled off a wheel-barrow last Friday belonging to Dan Sweeney, which was left in front of his house. It was painted green and was a little the worse for wear.

A junk dealer named Brennan collected a lot of junk of Mr. Michael Lewis, and the woman thinking there was something more than rags in his bag, opened it and found the fellow had taken a large copper kettle.

William, the 18 year old son of John Walsh, formerly of this town, was killed by a fall from a trapeze in the gymnasium of the Holy Cross College in Worcester, last Saturday.

The New Directory of Salem, Peabody, Beverly, Danvers and Marblehead for 1886, has been published by Sampson, Murdock & Co., and is for sale at Stevens' bookstore, 16 Main street. It is No. 22 of the series, and the third that comprises all the five places. Beside the names of 4,635 inhabitants of Peabody, it has Business Directory, Street Directory, Town Officers, Societies, etc., with a fine colored map of Salen and Peabody. The other departments of the work appear to be complete and reliable, and an important feature in all the departments, is the plan of giving telephone numbers in connection with names of all who use this valuable invention. The book contains 1000 pages, and sells at the low price of one dollar. The separate Directory of Peabody may be obtained for Fifty cents.

Mr. Calvin Peirce is building two large store houses 20x30 feet for Mr. A. L. Ames at his rendering works on Liberty street. One is attached to the phosphate building and the other where the schooner knocks away the glue building. So much is loaded in the old store house that the floor has settled.

There is a band of Gypsies encamped on their old camp ground at Brown's pond.

The proposed new railroad cuts through some very choice building lots in this section of the town.

A missionary meeting was held at the church last Sunday evening when reports were read from the different fields of labor, which were very interesting.

The Ladies Aid Society will meet at the house of Mrs. Samuel Brown on Lynnfield street, next Thursday afternoon. Supper will be served at half past six.

Mr. J. E. Trask, who has been quite sick for the past week, is able to be out again.

Mr. J. C. Keazer had to kill one of his valuable setter dogs last Saturday on account of his love for poultry.

Mr. Chas. H. Richardson of Wolfboro, N. H., has been stopping here with his mother the past week.

The house of Mrs. John Giles on Lynn street, has been extensively repaired, much to the improvement of the same.

A hearing was given yesterday at the State House on the petition of the Revere Water Co. to take water from Humphrey's Pond. The Revere Water Co. did not understand, as they claimed, the claim which the town of Peabody had on the water of that pond. The petition of the company was opposed by Messrs. Saltonstall, Ives and Appleton, members of the Water Board and Selectmen of this town, and Henry Wardwell as town counsel.

A new law has been issued on the B. & M. railroad that all baggage men shall punch the tickets for all baggage checked, and shall only check the baggage to the station mentioned in the ticket. Another new regulation is that the conductor instead of punching a ticket, and returning it to a passenger to stop over, he must give the passenger a check for the balance of the ride.

On the quarter of twelve train last Monday was a distinguished individual who was on his way North, and he was pointed to by the passengers as a great man. It was said to be G. P. Morosini of New York, well known as the late partner of Jay Gould. He was a fine looking man, with large frame, solidly built, with sparkling eyes, steel gray hair and commanding presence.

Mr. Ernest M. Carpenter will go to New Bedford on Monday to assist in establishing the new clothing house which the Naumkeag Clothing Company of Salem is to open in that city. The new store is to open March 24, and will be known as the "Wamsutta" and will be in charge of Mr. Oscar Gallup, and Mr. John T. Bartlett.

It has been discovered that in footing up the totals, the tellers, at the recent election, got the vote of T. D. Crowley and J. H. Crowley confused, and the election was given to the latter, when it really belonged to the former. The corrected returns give T. D. Crowley 673 and J. H. Crowley 416 and the moderator will probably rectify the mistake at the adjournment.

in time. Kidney diseases may be prevented by purifying, renewing, and invigorating the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. When, through debility, the action of the kidneys is perverted, these organs rob the blood of its needed constituent, albumen, which is passed off in the urine, while worn out matter, which they should carry off from the blood, is allowed to remain. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the kidneys are restored to proper action, and Albuminuria, or is prevented. Ayer's Sarsaparilla also prevents inflammation of the kidneys, and other disorders of these organs. Mrs. Jas. W. Weld, Forest Hill st., Jamaica Plain, Mass., writes: "I have had a complication of diseases, but my greatest trouble has been with my kidneys. Four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla made me feel like a new person; as well and strong as ever." W. M. McDonald, 46 Summer st., Boston, Mass., had been troubled for years with Kidney Complaint. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, he not only of the curse that rested upon the Granger's.

When he walked out from the Judge's office, though outwardly calm, yet in his inmost soul Will Granger was cursing the day he was born.

Why should I be thus afflicted? Why in my health and strength should this hated evil come between me and my heart's desire? By heaven, it shall not, she shall be mine if—what am I saying? I believe I shall go mad. I must throw off such feelings. I must go back to my work and give up all thoughts of Ella, my love, my love, and looking up and about him he perceived that he had wandered far away from his home and that a drizzly rain had set in with the darkness, and he hastened back to his lodgings with a firm resolve to be a man and cast aside all thoughts of home or happiness for himself. Work, work, shall be the means of drowning all my former dreams.

After the interview with Granger, the Judge had hastened home to plead with his daughter. The result we have seen. Day after day he pleaded, coaxed and threatened his daughter, but in vain. Ella from her long confinement began to grow thin and pale. They were now at his sister's in L——. She was a spinster and had all the sternness of the Mansfield's in her vinigary make up.

I always said you'd have trouble with that girl, John, and now I hope you'll believe me. It almost seemed as if her knitting needles clicked out, I told you so! I told you so!

Meanwhile, where was Will Granger? The night before they went to her aunt's he had yielded to his unconquerable desire to see her once more, if only a glimpse at the window, and walked up and past the house, once, twice, and the third time a little note fluttered to his feet. He did not look up, but picking up the little white messenger walked rapidly away.

He did not stop until he had reached his own room and then he feverishly tore open the little note which told him of her forced confinement and their proposed departure for L——. It said:

"I shall see you dear Will the first chance I get, and then we can arrange for our marriage. For I shall marry no one but you, Will, and until I see you believe me always,

Your own loving Ella."

It was a wretched little cottage, with only two little rooms barely furnished but scrupulously neat. Before the scanty fire crouched a man who must have been a fine specimen of manhood in his youth, but now his thin, gray hair hung down over a long thin neck; his claw like hands were never still, and the feet that once stood strong and firmly on the ground, now twisted and turned in all directions, in obedience to that dread disease, St. Vitus' dance.

From the inner room came a woman who might have been pretty once, but sorrow had added lines to that pretty face of long ago, had changed curling brown hair to an early gray, and the light step to a listless, dragging movement. In one corner, with his chin touching his drawn-up knees, sat a boy about twelve years of age, the very counterpart of his father, and a victim to the same dread disease.

This was Will Granger in his home.

Fourteen years had passed since he placed a ladder at the window of pretty Ella Mansfield's room, and fled with his bride to a far off town. For awhile all went well. He obtained work, and had nearly paid for a little house of their own, when the first signs of that dreaded curse came upon him.

Three children were born to them, two of whom were laid in their narrow little beds when babes. The other, when he reached his sixth year became a victim to the cures.

Granger lost his place as foreman, and went from bad to worse until they reached this little hovel. Here with the assistance of his wife, who really did the greater part of the work, and his half-idiotic son, the once prosperous superintendent eked out a scanty living.

It was a great blow to Judge Mansfield to find his daughter had gone. He returned to his home, taking Miss Jane Mansfield with him to keep house. People said they never saw him laugh after his daughter disappeared. He put his soul into his business, and as the villagers said, 'made money hand over fist.' After a time his sister died, and he was left alone with only hired servants about him. Of the grand house only the rooms actually necessary were used. The others were locked up, and the once beautiful house looked ghostly and deserted.

But let us go back to that other home, the home of Mansfield's daughter. Here they lived until Will Granger sickened and died, but Ella Mansfield with her old pride would not seek her father.

What would be the use; he would probably turn me from the door. I have made my bed and will lie in it till I die, I suppose; and she planted her garden, and took fine washing to do, until at last her strength gave out, and she lay on her bed 'sick unto death'. Then she wrote a few feeble lines to her father, telling him she was dying, praying for forgiveness, and leaving her boy, her helpless son to his care.

The pleading missive was laid on the Judge's plate, two days after it was dated. He took it up, read it, and electrified the old housekeeper by rushing from the table, donning his ulster, and, saying he would not be home for a couple days, hastened from the house. The train seemed to the man to creep while the thoughts went surging through his brain. Two days, Oh my God, two days. How this train creeps. Shall I get there in time. Poor Ella! Will I come? oh Ella if you knew how I have missed you, and the tears trickled down his quivering cheeks.

He reached the station, inquired the way, and almost ran, so great was his fear that he would be too late. Conveyance there was none, and the mile and a half seemed a thousand. At last he spied the cottage, and the tears came to his eyes again at the thought of his daughter dying in that hovel, while he—oh the thought was maddening. He lifted the door-latch and entered the room.

A half-grown lad came shuffling to the door of the inner room, his face twitching and the tears rolling down his poor little cheeks, as he told the gentleman how the mother wouldn't speak to him but m—m—moaned all the time, sir.

Lifting the head of the dying woman, he poured some wine between the tight lips, and soon the eyelids moved and she looked up into the face bending over her. The eyes lit up with a glad look of recognition. Father—forgive, and take care of Johnnie—he is named for you—kiss me father—Johnnie good-bye, and she was gone. Ella Granger was buried in the little churchyard by the side of her husband, and before many months Johnnie was laid beside her.

Judge Mansfield lives on at the old home, waiting for the summons that will come soon. This little story of a woman's folly is not meant for a romance, but is a true story of the beginning and ending of one woman's life.

Every day adds to the great amount of evidence as to the curative powers of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Letters are continually being received from all sections of the country, telling of benefits derived from this great medicine. It is unequalled for general debility, and as a blood purifier, expelling every trace of scrofula or other impurity. Now is the time to take it. Made by C. I. Hood & Co., Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists. (F)

It is hoped that the back bone of winter is broken.

ANXIOUS MOTHER.—Your fear as to cough mixtures containing opiates is natural, but Prof. Williams, ex-State Chemist of Delaware, who analyzed Red Star Cough Cure, states that it contains neither morphia nor opium, and is wonderfully efficacious. Give it to your children, by all means. Only 25 cents.

This is regular "may" weather. It may rain or it may not rain.

Backache is almost immediately relieved by wearing one of Carter's Smart Weed and Belladonna Bachache Plasters. Try one and be free from pain. Price 25 cents.

FORTY-EIGHTH VOLUME

THE NEW YORK

SUNDAY MERCURY.

Unprecedented Attractions for 1886.

In addition to Wilkie Collins' great serial (just commence and back numbers of which can be urnished to all new subscribers who desire it), arrangements have been made for

A New Novel by Mrs. Oliphant,

to be commenced in April, as well as

A Brilliant Romance by William Black,

to follow in the month of July, together with

Another Sterling Story by Miss Braddon.

And, besides the works of these distinguished authors on the other side of the Atlantic, new stories have been secured from the following noted American writers:

FRANCIS HODGSON BURNETT,
FRANK R. STOCKTON,
CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK,
J. T. TROWBRIDGE,
EDWARD EVERETT HALE,
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS,
ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS,
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD,
SIDNEY LUSKA—

and others of distinguished fame, making altogether an unprecedented combination of talent unequaled by any of the leading magazines of the metropolis,

MUCH ADO,

By FRANCIS HODGSON BURNETT,

Author of "That Lass O' Lowries'" "Through One Administration," "A Fair Barbarian," etc., etc.

In presenting these superior attractions, the New York Sunday Mercury will not lose any of those varied and attractive features which, for nearly Fifty Years, have made it a welcome guest to a Hundred Thousand Families throughout the length and breadth of the land. It will continue as heretofore to make which it will furnish more accurately than any of the so-called dramatic journals—mere trade papers, which have no influence with the theatrical profession and no circulation among the people.

All the Best Humorists of the Country,

Including Bill Nye, F. E. Huddle, Opie P. Reed, Elie Adams, Alex. E. Sweet, are regular contributors to the New York Sunday Mercury, which far surpasses in merit and variety any humorous paper in the world.

The same attention will be paid as heretofore to all the

Live Sensations of the week,

and in fact, those who subscribe for the New York Sunday Mercury will have a combination of first-class reading matter such as no other paper in the country can present. In fact the New York Sunday Mercury offers all the literary features of

A First-class Magazine, The New Features of a Leading Daily, and the Combined Attractions of a Family Newspaper.

The New York Sunday Mercury for 1886 will be mailed, postage free, to subscribers in any part of the United States for $2 per annum, or $1 for six months. Sample copie sent free to any address

The Little Boot.

MARY CLEMMER AMES.

Dumpy, stubby and old,
The funniest little boot,
With mended toe and flattened heel,
Ever worn by a little foot.
Within the children's room
The widowed mother stands,
Still smiling down with misty eyes
On a little boot in her hands.

Carefully laid away,
With a mother's yearning care,
Are toys with which the children played,
The clothes they used to wear.
With loving, longing heart
Her gaze is backward cast,
As she softly lifts the little boot
From the stillness of the past.

She sees a little boy
Thrust out his chubby foot,
And hears his happy laugh and shout
At sight of his first boot,
And trudging down the road,
Stubbing grass, and leaves, and roots,
She sees again the solid form
Of the little man in boots.
A conqueror that day,
He made the soft airs ring;
Amid the shoeless lads at school,
The boy in boots was king.

O the stillness of the room
Where the children used to play!
O the stillness of the empty house
Since the children went away!
And this the mother-life—
"To bear, and love, and lose,"
Till all the sweet sad tale is told
In a pair of little shoes,
In a single broken toy,
A flower pressed to keep
All fragrant still the faded life
Of one who fell asleep.

The boy who wore the boot!
While his mother's eyes are dim,
Amid the world's unequal strife
How fareth it with him?
Are the feet of manhood strong
For manhood's sacred race,
His hand outstretched, securely, calm,
To clasp its utmost grace?
With love her heart o'erflows,
With love her eyes are dim,
She softly wraps the little boot,
And sends it far to him.

Beside his twilight fire
The eyes of manhood scan
The ancient boot—the far-off boy
Talks through it to the man.
The hard world's vexing road
The boy's boot never pressed;
The boy knew not of manhood's pain,
Nor felt its need of rest.
The man sees all things changed—
The earth, the heaven above;
One thing alone remains the same,
To him—his mother's love.
The battered little boot
He takes as from her hand,
And seems all sweetest, purest things.
Better to understand.

Dumpy, stubby and old,
The funniest little boot,
With mended toe and flattened heel,
Ever worn by a little foot!
Yet the boot is a hand to bind
The man to his innocent past,
To hold his faithful heart of hearts
To life's first love—and its last!

Aimer, C'est Oublier.

M. E. W. IN LIFE.

As I strolled on the beach with the fair Isabella—
We were friends of long standing, I'd known her a week—
Was it love or the shade of her gorgeous umbrella
That fluttered in crimson across her soft cheek?

Hope tugged at my heart-strings and made me audacious,
For when coquetry blooms like a Provencal rose,
It is surely a sign that she means to be gracious,
And bless with sweet favor some one of her beaus.

So I set me to wooing, both blithely and bravely,
Caught in mine a small hand in a brown gant de suede,
Snatched a kiss from her lips, and was begging her suavely
To leave out my heart from the list of betrayed.

When she stopped me. "I'm sorry," she murmured, discreetly,
"But you see—I'm engaged?" and pretended to sigh,
While a swift recollection upset me completely—
"Great Heaven!" I gasped, "I forgot. So am I."

The Place for a Boy to Be,

I send him away in the morning,
When the sun is low in the east,
And he does not mind our parting,
Does not mind it in the least.
For in the schoolroom I tell him,
Is the place for a boy to be,
So we say good-by with many a smile,
And he throws back a kiss to me.

But, oh! at last in the evening,
When the sun is low in the west,
I see him coming home to me,
My dearest and my best;
I forget what I say in the morning,
And I think we both agree
That in mother's lap by the fireside
Is the place for a boy to be.
—New Orleans Chronicle.

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M]

After the Booth season in New York and Philadelphia—after weeks of constantly changed tragedy bills—the Boston Museum company returns this week at the home stage. It is Sardou's celebrated drama, Diplomacy, that will reintroduce these players. Annie Clark is cast for the Countess Zeka, Blanche Thompson as Dora, Mrs. J. R. Vincent as the Marquise, Charles Barron as Beauclerc, J. B. Mason as Julian, Alfred Hudson as Baron Stein, Charles Kent as Count Orloff, William Seymour as Algie Fairfax. Diplomacy has not for several seasons been represented on the Museum stage.

At the Park Irish drama holds sway, The Ivy Leaf. Mr. W. H. Power's piece has met with high favor as an interesting story of love, villainy, and the final triumph of virtue on "the ould dart." A child's rescue from the talons of an eagle and a leap for life from a tower will probably be accounted among the most striking effects. The cast introduces J. P. Sullivan as Murty Kerrigan, F. E. Dunbar, May Woolcott (the much-vexed sweetheart of Murty), W. H. Power, Grattan Phillips and Delia Power, as well as other favorites.

Long awaited, The Black Hussar comes at last to Boston. The Black Hussar, which has won favor from audiences in many places, has the advantage of new stage settings and an array of costly costumes. Mark Smith appears as the colonel of the gallant hussars, disguised as an army chaplain. De Wolf Hopper, whose clever comedy acting and singing here last season will readily be recalled, is the magistrate; the role of the factotum finds an interpreter in George C. Boniface, Jr.; and A. W. Maflin is assigned the character of the tragedian. Hackenback's fair daughters are personated by Mlle. Louise Lablache, who has won plaudits on the Italian opera stage, and by Marie Jansen, Madame Mathilde Cottrelly's Barbara is one of the very best performances of this accomplished lady. A very large chorus will give effect to the opera, which with its "Read the Answer in the Stars" and other taking numbers, seems assured a prosperous fortnight at the Boston Theatre.

John P. Savage, the favorite singer, as well as Gus Kammerlee, have been engaged to appear in Denman Thompson's Old Homestead, at the Boston Theatre in April. Much taking music is to be introduced in the course of the representation.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for April is an exceedingly interesting number containing articles to please all tastes. "The Protestant Sisterhoods of New York," will attract much attention, as it refers especially to the Sisters of St. Mary, whose Convent of St. Gabriel at Peekskill has been much talked about recently. "Church going in Virginia in 1765," by John S. Patton, is a local article of great antiquarian interest. There are many other articles of present and future interest and the number is full of beautiful pictures which please all, young and old.

The Baby Pathfinder, issued by the publishers of the Pathfinder Railway Guide only two months, has scored a success unparalleled in the history of railway publications. This compact vest-pocket Guide, containing time tables of all New England roads, without the objectionable feature of alternate pages of advertisements, is sold for five cents per copy, and sent free to all subscribers who pay $2.50 per year for the large Guide. The "Baby" fairly bounded into public favor, the first edition exceeding 25,000 copies, giving it at once the largest circulation of any Guide in America.

The Musical Record (Boston, $1 a year) for March has for music: "Myosotis Waltzes," five pages; "Chiming Bell of Long Ago," by C. F. Shattuck; and "Sweet Dreams of Childhood," solo and chorus, by S. T. White. The reading matter is excellent, as usual, and the spicy "Major and Minor" is well gotten up.

The Musical Herald (Boston $1 a year) for March has for music: "Come unto me," quartet, by J. Michaelis; and Christ our Passover, by Wm. E. Chandler, dedicated to Rev. R. M. Woods, Hatfield, Mass., seven pages. There is also the usual amount of reading matter of an entertaining and instructive character, including an interesting article by Louis C. Elson on the History of German Song.

GREAT EGGSCITEMENT.—An exchange asks, "Why is it that eggs are not sold by the pound instead of by the dozen? The present custom, absurd and ridiculous as it is, offers a premium on little hens and is a fraud of the first water on the purchaser. The eggs of the large breeds weigh nearly two pounds to the dozen, and of the small breeds but little over one. In the name of the lordly Asiatic, whose deep, rich crow awakes us every morning, we protest. The eggs from his harem are genuine, sixteen ounces to the pound, two pounds to the dozen—all wool and a yard wide, worth 100 cents on the dollar; whilst the eggs of the little non-setters, that fly over the highest tree tops, are a fraud and delusion. You have to eat two for one and pay twice for the proper amount of albumen. Let us do away with this flat egg business and buy and sell eggs by the pound."

DENTAL NOTICE.

To the thousands who are suffering from the ill effects of badly decayed teeth, we would beg leave to inform them that with Our Method of Administering the New Vegetable Vapor all teeth can be removed without pain. Since we first began using the Vapor, we have used over 15,000 Gallons, administering it to thousands who have come from all parts of Essex County to have their teeth removed, and in no case has there been any ill effects from its use. We have given it to the most delicate and sensitive woman as well as the hardy man; to the child of 5 years, or the adult of 75. We have given the Vapor to hundreds of the most nervous people, who have for years dreaded having their decayed teeth removed. And we can say that one and all have gone away with the happy thought that their teeth were removed without pain. We can refer to hundreds of our patients who have taken Gas, Ether or Chloroform who declare that the Vapor has no equal as an anæsthetic. We charge No Extra for administering this Anæsthetic Our prices remain the same as with gas. FINE GOLD FILLING A SPECIALTY.

Headache, Nausea, Dizziness, and Drowsiness. They stimulate the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels, to healthy action, assist digestion, and increase the appetite. They combine cathartic, diuretic, and tonic properties of the greatest value, are a purely vegetable compound, and may be taken with perfect safety, either by children or adults. E. L. Thomas, Framingham, Mass., writes: "For a number of years I was subject to violent Headaches, arising from a disordered condition of the stomach and bowels. About a year ago I commenced the use of Ayer's Pills, and have not had a headache since." W. P. Hannah, Gormley P. O., York Co., Ont., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for the last thirty years, and can safely say that I have never found their equal as a cathartic medicine. I am never without them in my house." C. D. Moore, Elgin, Ill., writes: "Indigestion, Headache, and Loss of Appetite, had so weakened and debilitated my system, that I was obliged to give up work. After being under the doctor's care for two weeks, without getting any relief, I began taking Ayer's Pills. My appetite and strength returned, and I was soon enabled to resume my work, in perfect health."

Grown-Up Land.

Good morrow, fair maid, with lashes brown.
Can you tell me the way to Womanhood Town?

Oh, this way and that way—never a stop;
'Tis picking up stitches grandma will drop.
'Tis kissing the baby's troubles away,
'Tis learning that cross words never will pay,
'Tis helping mother, 'tis sewing up rents,
'Tis reading and playing, 'tis saving the cents,
'Tis loving and smiling, forgetting to frown,
Oh, that is the way to Womanhood Town.

Just wait, my brave lad—one moment, I pray;
Manhood Town lies where—can you tell the way?

Oh, by toiling and trying we reach that land,
A bit with the head, a bit with the hand,
'Tis by climbing up the steep hill Work,
'Tis by keeping out of the wide street Shirk,
'Tis by always taking the weak one's part
'Tis by giving the mother a happy heart,
'Tis by keeping bad thoughts and actions down,
Oh, that is the way to Manhood Town.

And the lad and the maid ran hand in hand
To their fair estates in the Grown-up Land.

A LOUD CALL TO THE POETS.—We invite the attention of Massachusetts poets to a noble theme. The bones of a mastodon were lately found in a peat meadow at Shrewsbury, near Worcester. As the Hon. George Frisbie Hoar viewed these interesting relics he is said to have wept bitterly. They reminded him of his early manhood. "How time flies," said the good old man. "All, all are gone, the magalonyx and the megatherium, the mastodon and the mylodon. None of my playmates is left but John Sherman; why I can remember when mastodons were as common as grasshoppers. I never thought in those days that I should live to see a democratic President."

This preadamite weeping over the bones of a friend younger than he, but whom he has survived, seems to us a theme worthy of a Massachusetts poet's genius.

THE CHRYSANTHEMUM.—It is the distinguishing merit of the chrysanthemum that its hardy blossom lights up the later days of autumn when the tenderer flowers have snuggled into their winter retreats. It is largely on this account that the Orientals esteem the plant. With their habit of attaching meanings to flowers they give the chrysanthemum the attributes of strength and bravery because it faces the rude winds of winter and flourishes when others wither and die. Hence it is adopted as the royal emblems in Japan, and is highly honored both there and in China. —Washington Star.

Where Hours go Merrily.

Polo teams from J. A. Lord Jr.'s shop and A. B. Clark's shop played a game at the rink last Friday evening and was won by the former 4 to 3. Richward Ware referee.

Those who saw Hi Henry and his famous minstrels last season will be pleased to learn that he is to appear again Saturday evening in the Town Hall. The company is stronger this year than last, and includes all the best specialists of last year. The company have been playing to crowded houses everywhere. They give a grand parade and concert at noon, lasting an hour, in their new uniforms and with full band. Get your tickets early at Spaulding's as there is assured a good house.

Masconomo Tribe of Red Men will meet to-morrow evening and work the adoption on one candidate. The "war dance" will begin about 8 o'clock, and the one hundred or more braves in charge of Sachems, Prophets and Sagamores will be let out on the poor candidate, and if he survives the ordeal all traces of the war paint will be removed and the fire quenched.

The masquerade party last Wednesday evening at Ashland Hall was attended by about one hundred and was a thorough success. The costumes were varied and it was almost impossible to detect the parties so well were they disguised. About 2 o'clock the party broke up having enjoyed a pleasant evening.

Last Wednesday evening Holten Lodge I. O. O. F., to the number of nearly 90, paid a fraternal visit to West Lynn Lodge. They left the square in three special cars shortly after seven o'clock, but owing to waits on turnouts and the keeping of the second car in quarantine by the health officers, till it was aired of its tobacco smoke, they did not reach their destination till half past eight. They found West Lynn Lodge waiting for them and after a few speeches of welcome they presented the following very pleasing entertainment for their visitors:

Overture, Piano Duet.	Messrs Williams and Flagg.
Character Song.	J. W. Van Blarcom.
Reading, Selected.	Geo. W. Townsend.
Harmonica Solo.	Isaac E. Averill.
Song.	Geo. B. Roberts.
Tableau, (Scene 1st) "Orpheus going to the Lodge,	G. W. Curtis.
Violin Solo.	Master John B. Bee.
Humorous Song,	J. W. Van Blarcom.
Piano Duet,	Miss Williams and Flagg
Tableau (Scene 2), "Orpheus at home"	G. Warren Curtis.
Reading, Selected.	Geo. W. Townsend.
Song.	Geo. B. Roberts.
Violin Solo.	Master John B. Bee.
Tableau, (Scene 3), "Orpheus at home,"	Geo. W. Curtis
Harmonica Solo.	Isaac E. Averill.
Character Song.	J. W. Van Blarcom.
Piano Duet,	Miss Williams and Flagg.
Afterpiece.	"A Troublesome Servant."
Ben Butler (a crusty old Man.	Geo. W. Gilmore.
Handy Andy (Colored Servant)	Wm. Gilmore.

The entertainment was followed by a banquet to which every one did justice. After adjourning to the Lodge room the quartette of Holten Lodge furnished some fine vocal music and several of the brothers entertained West Lynn lodge with appropriate remarks and selections. The company returned home about 1.30 o'clock.

There will be no better entertainment offered us this season than that by Hi Henry's Premium Minstrels on Saturday night. It is divided into three departments. The first embracing genuine minstrelsy, songs, choruses, jokes, and obligate solos in a first part setting of elegance and splendor. The second department embraces a rapid succession of new startling specialties; introducing the wonderful soprano, Ellsworth Cook. The great comedians Donnelly and Carleton. The musical challenge wonder, Tom English. Orke, the Egyptian Juggler. The delightful solos of Hi Henry. The Premium Quartette in beautiful selections, and other sensations. The third department is the Par Excellence of all minstrelsy and embraces one hour of genuine opera in superb costumes of velvet, plush and diamonds, terminating in a scene of unparalleled splendor, a grand tout ensemble by knights in silver sheen shields, banners, medalions, varigated colors of silks, satins and plushes. The scintillations of fabulous diamonds, enhanced by prismatic colored fires with full chorus and grand instrumental accompaniment. This will be the event of the season. Reserved seat tickets are on sale at Spaulding's drug store.

A select party of ladies and gentlemen, seven couples in number, went on a "straw ride" they called it last Wednesday evening to Topsfield. They secured a large furniture wagon, filled it with fresh straw and piled in. Their destination was the home of a worthy young couple in that town whom they gave a complete surprise. A supper was furnished and the gastronomic exercises were followed by the giddy pleasures of Terpsichore. They arrived home about two o'clock the next morning.

Remember the Peabody Dramatic Club appears at town hall this evening assisted by Mr. Hal Newton Carlye in "The Long Strike." It will be a fitting way to celebrate St. Patrick's night.

Arrangements are being perfected to bring the Edith Stanmore Combination here for two nights. She is a brilliant young actress, and should take well.

A number of the Peabody members of the Naumkeag Grocers Association were present at a re-union and supper at the Essex House, Salem, last Thursday evening.

There will be a very exciting race at the rink next Saturday evening between Fred W. White, the champion short distance skater, and James W. Turner, the well known boy skater, for a purse of $25. The race will be a five mile one and will be called at 9.30. Prices as usual.

Orville at the rink on the 27th instead of the 24th.

The Edgewood Club of the Baptist Society are rehearsing a farce for the coming fair to be given next month. A silk quilt is also being made.

Mr. Lewis Nevers, the popular assistant manager of the rink, will be tendeerd a complimentary benefit at the rink on Wednesday evening, March 31st. The first of the evening will be devoted to skating to be followed by an attraction consisting of acts of contortion by Ed. McLaughlin, assisted by Master McManus in club swinging and clog dancing. The Fowler, Crowell Combination, who are at the rink tonight, will also be present and introduce their specialties in fancy skating and bicycle riding. Master Johnnie Goss will also appear in his imitations on the bones. It is expected there will also be other talent. Music will be furnished by the Salem Brass Band, and dancing will continue till 10.30 o'clock.

MESSRS EDITORS.—During the winter of 1884-85, Post 50, ways and means means Committee, deemed it advisable to adopt some means to increase their funds. There being considerable opposition to a fair, it was decided to give six entertainments, one at the Town Hall and five in the Peabody Institute, and the result was a net profit of eight dollars. During the summer months of 85' various attractions were offered, but the expenses were large, and connected with them was a good deal of risk, and the chances were more than even for a small profit. How to increase the funds was a puzzler to the committee, who were reminded of the story told by President Lincoln, at the famous interview on the Steamer River Queen, at Hampton Roads, between Lincoln and Seward, and the Rebel Peace Commissioners, Stephens, Hunter, and Cambell. Hunter said that the states, always accustomed to an overseer, and to work upon compulsion, suddenly freed, as they would be if the South should consent to peace on the basis of the Emancipation Proclamation, would precipitate not only themselves, but the entire southern society into irremediable ruin, no work would be done, nothing would be cultivated, and both blacks and whites would starve! Said the President: I waited for Seward to answer that argument, but as he was silent, I said, Hunter, you ought to know a good deal better about this matter than I, for you have always lived under the slave system. I can only say, in reply to your statement of the case, that it reminds me of a man in Illinois by the name of Case, who undertook, a few years ago, to raise a very large herd of hogs; it was a great trouble to feed them, and to get around this, he planted an immense field of potatoes, and when they were sufficiently grown, he turned the whole herd into the field, thus saving not only the labor of feeding, but also that of digging the potatoes; one day he was counting his hogs, when a neighbor came along. Well, well, said he, Case, your hogs are doing well just now, but here in Illinois the frost comes early, and the ground freezes a foot deep; then what are you a going to do; this was a view of the matter Case had not taken into account, he scratched his head, and stammered, Well, it may come pretty hard on their snouts, but I don't see but that it will be "Root Hog or Die."

It was voted as a last resort, to hold a Fair, which was very successful and gave to the Post a net profit of Eighteen Hundred Thirty Five Dollars. In conclusion, Messrs Editors, allow me in behalf of the Comrades of Post 50, to tender their sincere thanks to everybody who by word or deed, assisted in making the Fair a Success.

Yours Truly
WM. F. SUMNER,
Sec. & Treas. of Fair Com.

Dr. A. P. Lighthill, Boston, Mass.

Dear Sir.—It affords me great pleasure to inform you that the cure you performed for me by ridding me of catarrh and Asthma 13 or 14 years ago has been lasting and from that time to the present has proved to be what you predicted—a permanent cure.

Yours respectfully,
O. W. UPHAM.

Labor and Capital.

Labor is a valuable merchantable commodity, just as much as leather, lumber, boots and shoes, flour and grain. Capital goes out to purchase labor, just as it goes out to purchase any of these things. Labor and capital enter the markets of the world precisely as leather, lumber and capital do; the one seeking to sell at the highest rates, and the other to purchase at the lowest. The principle is precisely the same that we all recognize and practice daily in all our business transactions little and great. All property being produced through labor, every reduction in the price of the latter, curtails its power to consume, stops the sale of goods, reduces all values and dividends, thus eventually killing the home market.

A comprehension of the simplest truths of political economy would dispel the senseless hostility which now exists between capital and labor, and teach manufacturer and artisan the important precept that the highest interests of both depend upon a just regard for the rights of each. When both parties distinctly perceive that neither can permanently flourish upon the ruin of the other, and the acts of injustice are sure ultimately to injure the transgressor, then proprietors would be willing to divide their profits with the hands which helped to earn them, and workmen would consent to adjust differences with their employers by the cheap and peaceful agency of arbitration. But arbitration should be voluntary not compulsory, every industry and every branch of industry should have its own specially appointed judges. It is not presumed that a clergyman could decide upon the questions arising and intimately connected with the "morocco manufacture," or an editor or lawyer to decide upon those connected with the leather traffic, or a woolen or cotton mill. If each issue should be treated as a distinct one, then it naturally follows that each should have its own distinct board of arbitration. During periods of business depression as now exists, which no experience has provided against, sympathetic and impatient persons lose faith in the corrective power of natural laws, and easily adopt the often exploded theory that the legislature can and should reform whatever is out of joint in State or National industries.

If the labor unions could be so directed as to raise the standard of efficiency among workmen, they would meet with favor from all members of the community high and low, as with the increased efficiency the condition of the workmen would be improved in every respect. Thus a law would have its advantages which would prohibit mechanics from setting up shop for themselves until a certain number of years has been spent in learning a trade. The want of something of this sort is diminishing daily the number of good mechanics in every branch of human labor which requires intelligence and skill. As an insurance against the damage by strikes an allowance to the hands of a portion of the profits would presumably be a cheap and wise investment. But even if capitalists are at present unmindful of the claims of justice and humanity, public sentiment being one of the strongest social forces the new system will be eventually introduced by the growing requirements of popular opinion. Workmen may have a moral as well as a legal right to combine to fix the price of their labor, provided they do not encroach upon any of the rights of others. This combination is merely a question of policy between labor and capital. M. W. G.

A BOY'S GRACE AT TABLE.—The following incident is vouched for by parties well acquainted with the boy, now a young professor in one of our large cities. He was the son of a clergyman, and though only five years old, bright and clear beyond his years. It was at a dinner given by his mother for a few intimate friends. Master W—— was allowed his usual place at table, but becoming unruly, was, by way of punishment, transferred to a side table, whither nurse had removed his little plate, knife and fork by mamma's order.

No sooner was the little fellow seated in his high chair again than, bowing his head and clasping his hands on his soiled bib, he lisped, with apparent reverence and great gravity, "Oh, Lord, I thank Thee that Thou hast prepared a table for me in the presence of mine enemies." It was with difficulty that the "grown-ups" kept their smiles from becoming audible.

A report of the Poor—Poore family gathering at Andover, in September, 1884, has been printed in pamphlet form, and shows careful preparation. The list of those who attended is complete and a family necrology is added.

The Little Boot.

MARY CLEMMER AMES.

Dumpy, stubby and old,
  The funniest little boot,
With mended toe and flattened heel,
  Ever worn by a little foot.
Within the children's room
  The widowed mother stands,
Still smiling down with misty eyes
  On a little boot in her hands.

Carefully laid away,
  With a mother's yearning care,
Are toys with which the children played,
  The clothes they used to wear.
With loving, longing heart
  Her gaze is backward cast,
As she softly lifts the little boot
  From the stillness of the past,

She sees a little boy
  Thrust out his chubby foot,
And hears his happy laugh and shout
  At sight of his first boot,
And trudging down the road,
  Stubbing grass, and leaves, and roots,
She sees again the solid form
  Of the little man in boots.
A conqueror that day,
  He made the soft airs ring;
Amid the shoeless lads at school,
  The boy in boots was king.

O the stillness of the room
  Where the children used to play!
O the stillness of the empty house
  Since the children went away!
And this the mother-life—
  "To bear, and love, and lose,"
Till all the sweet sad tale is told
  In a pair of little shoes,
In a single broken toy,
  A flower pressed to keep
All fragrant still the faded life
  Of one who fell asleep.

The boy who wore the boot!
  While his mother's eyes are dim,
Amid the world's unequal strife
  How fareth it with him?
Are the feet of manhood strong
  For manhood's sacred race,
His hand outstretched, securely, calm,
  To clasp its utmost grace?
With love her heart o'erflows,
  With love her eyes are dim,
She softly wraps the little boot,
  And sends it far to him.

Beside his twilight fire
  The eyes of manhood scan
The ancient boot—the far-off boy
  Talks through it to the man.
The hard world's vexing road
  The boy's boot never pressed;
The boy knew not of manhood's pain,
  Nor felt its need of rest.
The man sees all things changed—
  The earth, the heaven above;
One thing alone remains the same,
  To him—his mother's love.
The battered little boot
  He takes as from her hand,
And seems all sweetest, purest things.
  Better to understand.

Dumpy, stubby and old,
  The funniest little boot,
With mended toe and flattened heel,
  Ever worn by a little foot!
Yet the boot is a hand to bind
  The man to his innocent past,
To hold his faithful heart of hearts
  To life's first love—and its last!

Aimer, C'est Oublier.

M. E. W. IN LIFE.

As I strolled on the beach with the fair Isabella—
  We were friends of long standing, I'd known her a week—
Was it love or the shade of her gorgeous umbrella
  That fluttered in crimson across her soft cheek?

Hope tugged at my heart-strings and made me audacious,
  For when coquetry blooms like a Provencal rose,
It is surely a sign that she means to be gracious,
  And bless with sweet favor some one of her beaus.

So I set me to wooing, both blithely and bravely,
  Caught in mine a small hand in a brown gant de suede,
Snatched a kiss from her lips, and was begging her suavely
  To leave out my heart from the list of betrayed.

When she stopped me. "I'm sorry," she murmured, discreetly,
  "But you see—I'm engaged?" and pretended to sigh,
While a swift recollection upset me completely—
  "Great Heaven!" I gasped, "I forgot. So am I."

The Place for a Boy to Be,

I send him away in the morning,
  When the sun is low in the east,
And he does not mind our parting,
  Does not mind it in the least.
For in the schoolroom I tell him,
  Is the place for a boy to be,
So we say good-by with many a smile,
  And he throws back a kiss to me.

But, oh! at last in the evening,
  When the sun is low in the west,
I see him coming home to me,
  My dearest and my best;
I forget what I say in the morning,
  And I think we both agree
That in mother's lap by the fireside
  Is the place for a boy to be.

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M]

After the Booth season in New York and Philadelphia—after weeks of constantly changed tragedy bills—the Boston Museum company returns this week at the home stage. It is Sardou's celebrated drama, Diplomacy, that will re-introduce these players. Annie Clark is cast for the Countess Zeka, Blanche Thompson as Dora, Mrs. J. R. Vincent as the Marquise, Charles Barron as Beauclerc, J. B. Mason as Julian, Alfred Hudson as Baron Stein, Charles Kent as Count Orloff, William Seymour as Algie Fairfax. Diplomacy has not for several seasons been represented on the Museum stage.

At the Park Irish drama holds sway, The Ivy Leaf. Mr. W. H. Power's piece has met with high favor as an interesting story of love, villainy, and the final triumph of virtue on "the ould dart." A child's rescue from the talons of an eagle and a leap for life from a tower will probably be accounted among the most striking effects. The cast introduces J. P. Sullivan as Murty Kerrigan, F. E. Dunbar, May Woolcott (the much-vexed sweetheart of Murty), W. H. Power, Grattan Phillips and Delia Power, as well as other favorites.

Long awaited, The Black Hussar comes at last to Boston. The Black Hussar, which has won favor from audiences in many places, has the advantage of new stage settings and an array of costly costumes. Mark Smith appears as the colonel of the gallant hussars, disguised as an army chaplain. De Wolf Hopper, whose clever comedy acting and singing here last season will readily be recalled, is the magistrate; the role of the factotum finds an interpreter in George C. Boniface, Jr.; and A. W. Maflin is assigned the character of the tragedian. Hackenback's fair daughters are personated by Mlle. Louise Lablache, who has won plaudits on the Italian opera stage, and by Marie Jansen, Madame Mathilde Cottrelly's Barbara is one of the very best performances of this accomplished lady. A very large chorus will give effect to the opera, which with its "Read the Answer in the Stars" and other taking numbers, seems assured a prosperous fortnight at the Boston Theatre.

John P. Savage, the favorite singer, as well as Gus Kammerlee, have been engaged to appear in Denman Thompson's Old Homestead, at the Boston Theatre in April. Much taking music is to be introduced in the course of the representation.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for April is an exceedingly interesting number containing articles to please all tastes. "The Protestant Sisterhoods of New York," will attract much attention, as it refers especially to the Sisters of St. Mary, whose Convent of St. Gabriel at Peekskill has been much talked about recently. "Church going in Virginia in 1765," by John S. Patton, is a local article of great antiquarian interest. There are many other articles of present and future interest and the number is full of beautiful pictures which please all, young and old.

The Baby Pathfinder, issued by the publishers of the Pathfinder Railway Guide only two months, has scored a success unparalleled in the history of railway publications. This compact vest-pocket Guide, containing time tables of all New England roads, without the objectionable feature of alternate pages of advertisements, is sold for five cents per copy, and sent free to all subscribers who pay $2.50 per year for the large Guide. The "Baby" fairly bounded into public favor, the first edition exceeding 25,000 copies, giving it at once the largest circulation of any Guide in America.

The Musical Record (Boston, $1 a year) for March has for music: "Myosotis Waltzes," five pages; "Chiming Bell of Long Ago," by C. F. Shattuck; and "Sweet Dreams of Childhood," solo and chorus, by S. T. White. The reading matter is excellent, as usual, and the spicy "Major and Minor" is well gotten up.

The Musical Herald (Boston $1 a year) for March has for music: "Come unto me," quartet, by J. Michaelis; and Christ our Passover, by Wm. E. Chandler, dedicated to Rev. R. M. Woods, Hatfield, Mass., seven pages. There is also the usual amount of reading matter of an entertaining and instructive character, including an interesting article by Louis C. Elson on the History of German Song.

Derangement of the liver, with constipation, injure the complexion, induce pimples, sallow skin, etc. Remove the cause by using Carter's Little Liver Pills. One a dose.

GREAT EGGSCITEMENT.—An exchange asks, "Why is it that eggs are not sold by the pound instead of by the dozen? The present custom, absurd and ridiculous as it is, offers a premium on little hens and is a fraud of the first water on the purchaser. The eggs of the large breeds weigh nearly two pounds to the dozen, and of the small breeds but little over one. In the name of the lordly Asiatic, whose deep, rich crow awakes us every morning, we protest. The eggs from his harem are genuine, sixteen ounces to the pound, two pounds to the dozen—all wool and a yard wide, worth 100 cents on the dollar; whilst the eggs of the little non-setters, that fly over the highest tree tops, are a fraud and delusion. You have to eat two for one and pay twice for the proper amount of albumen. Let us do away with this flat egg business and buy and sell eggs by the pound."

Ayer's Sarsaparilla is just what you want for a spring medicine—superior to all others.

DENTAL NOTICE.

To the thousands who are suffering from the ill effects of badly decayed teeth, we would beg leave to inform them that with Our Method of Administering the New Vegetable Vapor all teeth can be removed without pain. Since we first began using the Vapor, we have used over 15,000 Gallons, administering it to thousands who have come from all parts of Essex County to have their teeth removed, and in no case has there been any ill effects from its use. We have given it to the most delicate and sensitive woman as well as the hardy man; to the child of 5 years, or the adult of 75. We have given the Vapor to hundreds of the most nervous people, who have for years dreaded having their decayed teeth removed. And we can say that one and all have gone away with the happy thought that their teeth were removed without pain. We can refer to hundreds of our patients who have taken Gas, Ether or Chloroform who declare that the Vapor has no equal as an anæsthetic. We charge No Extra for administering this Anæsthetic. Our prices remain the same as with gas. FINE GOLD FILLING A SPECIALTY.

☞ Horse cars pass the door every hour and to all out of town patrons we pay car fare.

AYER'S
SUGAR
CURE

Headache, Nausea, Dizziness, and Drowsiness. They stimulate the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels, to healthy action, assist digestion, and increase the appetite. They combine cathartic, diuretic, and tonic properties of the greatest value, are a purely vegetable compound, and may be taken with perfect safety, either by children or adults. E. L. Thomas, Framingham, Mass., writes: "For a number of years I was subject to violent Headaches, arising from a disordered condition of the stomach and bowels. About a year ago I commenced the use of Ayer's Pills, and have not had a headache since." W. P. Hannah, Gormley P. O., York Co., Ont., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for the last thirty years, and can safely say that I have never found their equal as a cathartic medicine. I am never without them in my house." C. D. Moore, Elgin, Ill., writes: "Indigestion, Headache, and Loss of Appetite, had so weakened and debilitated my system, that I was obliged to give up work. After being under the doctor's care for two weeks, without getting any relief, I began taking Ayer's Pills. My appetite and strength returned, and I was soon enabled to resume my work, in perfect health."

I CURE FITS!

When I say cure I do not mean merely to stop them for a time and then have them return again. I mean a radical cure. I have made the disease of FITS, EPILEPSY or FALLING SICKNESS a life-long study. I warrant my remedy to cure the worst cases. Because others have failed is no reason for not now receiving a cure. Send at once for a treatise and a Free Bottle of my infallible remedy. Give Express and Post Office. It costs you nothing for a trial, and I will cure you.

Mr. George M. Foster, Cashier of the South Danvers National Bank, has been suffering for the past week with an accute attack of rheumatism and at times has been unable to use his lower limbs.

Rev. George Sexton, L.L.D., of London, will preach at the South Church next Sabbath morning, at 10.15. The committee are fortunate to secure so brilliant a preacher. It is hoped he can also preach in the evening.

The Marsh Good Will Soap team with the educated dogs, one of which rides horse back, was in town Thursday, distributing chromos and fancy cards to the school children.

Mr. Simon P. Buxton, the well known seed man, was at the railroad station Monday morning and said he was bound for New York in the interests of the Enos Electrical Railroad Company.

The installation of Rev. Mr. Hall as pastor of the South Church, has been postponed from the 6th to the 13th of this month. President Seelye, of Amherst College, is expected to preach the sermon.

At a recent meeting of the Essex South District Medical Society at the Boscobel Hotel, at Lynn, Dr. Charles G. Weston of this town read an interesting paper on the "Treatment of Diphtheria prior and subsequent to Tracheotomy."

The School Committee have elected Miss Annie J. Fairchild of Fairhaven, Mass., as second assistant of the Peabody High School. Miss Fairchild is a teacher of long experience in High School work, and the Committee are to be congratulated upon being able to secure her services.

As a slight recognition of the service done Mr. Daniel D. Stevens at the time of the recent accident at Pemberton's, Mr. and Mrs. Stevens have presented Peter B. Langley, the boy who stopped the machine, with an elegant copy of the Personal Memoirs of Gen. U. S. Grant.

Rev. Charles B. Steele, son of Rev. Dr. Steele, formerly of the Methodist church in this town, was united in marriage at the Methodist church in West Branch, Michigan, on March 4th, to Miss Lillian Van Metre. His many Peabody friends will be pleased to learn of his continued prosperity.

The three reporters of the daily papers have been squandering their wealth on the photographer, who has moved his little car on the "sand lot" on Central street, and as a result are showing a picture which would do credit to a rogue's gallery. The centre figure looks like the last rose of summer—between two thorns.

Mr. and Mrs. Royal Wilson have the sympathy of the community in their present bereavement, caused by the death of their three year old son, who died last Wednesday of pneumonia, after a brief illness. It was an unusually bright child and the home circle will miss his merry prattle. The funeral occurred on Friday.

We learn that Mrs. Nancy L. Sanborn of Haverhill, but formerly of this town, was united in marriage on the 7th at Grand Junction, Colorado, to Mr. E. W. Skinner of that place. Mr. Skinner is interested in large mining interests in Colorado. Mrs. Sanborn will be remembered as the house keeper of Mr. John F. Pickering for several years.

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW IN HIS LIBRARY

Our engraving of " Longfellow in His Library," of which the above cut is a miniature copy, is an accurate representation of the room which Longfellow used from 1837 until the time of his death, and it will undoubtedly be accepted as the favorite picture of the "American Popular Poet." The likeness is good; the attitude and expression happily betoken a mind deeply occupied in the task before him, and everyone who admires and appreciates the writings of the poet, will be pleased to see the appointments of the room in which he worked, together with a faithful portrait of him. Remember that this is no chromo, but a Superb Steel-plate Engraving, 24x32 inches in size.

The central figure is that of the Great Poet. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical. The artizan is in his workshop. Aside from from being the workshop of our immortal poet, it was the room in which Gen. George Washington made his headquarters, directly after the battle of Bunker Hill.

We shall offer this engraving till February 1st, on the following conditions

EVERY NEW SUBSCRIBER paying $2, in advance, for the PRESS, will receive a copy FREE.

Old Subscribers, in arrears, who will settle to date and pay one year in Advance, will receive a copy.

Subscribers who pay in advance can have the PRESS and engraving by paying $2.50.

Poet's Corner.

" Ostler Joe."

I stood at eve, as the sun went down, by a grave where a woman lies
Who lured men's souls to the shores of sin with the light of her wanton eyes.
Who sang the song that the siren sang on the treacherous Lurlei height.
Whose face was as fair as a summer day, and whose heart was as black as night.

Yet a blossom I fain would pluck from the garden above her dust—
Not the langorous lily of soulless sin, nor the blood-red rose of lust;
But a sweet, white blossom of holy love that grew in the one green spot
In the arid desert of Phryne's life where all was parched and hot.

In the summer, when the meadows were aglow with blue and red,
Joe, the ostler of the Magpie, and fair Annie Smith were wed.
Plump was Annie, plump and pretty, with a cheek as white as snow;
He was anything but handsome, was the Magpie's ostler Joe.

But he won the winsome lassie; they'd a cottage and a cow,
And her matronhood sat lightly on the village beauty's brow.
Sped the months and came a baby—such a blue-eyed baby boy.
Joe was working in the stables when they told him of his joy.

He was rubbing down the horses, and he gave them, then and there
All a special feed of clover, just in honor of the heir;
It had been his great ambition, and he told the horses so,
That the fates would send a baby who might bear the name of Joe.

Little Joe the child was christened, and, like babies, grew apace;
He'd his mother's eyes of azure and his father's honest face.
Swift the happy years went over, years of blue and cloudless sky;
Love was lord of that small cottage, and the tempests passed them by.

Passed them by for years, then swiftly burst in fury o'er their home;
Down the lane by Annie's cottage chanced a gentleman to roam;
Thrice he came and saw her sitting by the window with her child,
And he nodded to the baby, and the baby laughed and smiled.

So at last it grew to know him—little Joe was nearly four—
He would call the "pretty gempin" as he passed the open door,
And one day he ran and caught him and in child's play pulled him in,
And the baby Joe had prayed for brought about the mother's sin.

'Twas the same old wretched story that for ages bards have sung;
'Twas a woman weak and wanton, and a villain's tempting tongue;
'Twas a picture deftly painted for a silly creature's eyes
Of the Babylonian wonders and the joy that in them lies.

Annie listened and was tempted; she was tempted and she fell,
As the angels fell from heaven, to the blackest depths of hell.
She was promised wealth and splendor and a life of guilty sloth,
Yellow gold for child and husband, and the woman left them both.

Home one eve came Joe, the ostler, with a cheery cry of " Wife!"
Finding that which blurred forever all the story of his life.
She had left a silly letter—through the cruel scrawl he spelt.
Then he sought the lonely bedroom, joined his horny hands and knelt.

"Now, O Lord, O God forgive her, for she ain't to blame," he cried,
"For I owt ta seen her trouble and agone away and died.
Why a wench like her—God bless her!—'twas likely as her'd rest
With that bonny head forever on a ostler's ragged vest.

"It was kind o' her to hear me all this long and happy time,
So, for my sake please to bless her, though you count her deed a crime;
If so be I don't pray proper, Lord, forgive me, for you see
I can talk all right to 'osses, but I'm nervous like with Thee."

Ne'er a line came to the cottage from the woman who had flown;
Joe, the baby, died that winter, and the man was left alone.
Ne'er a bitter word he uttered, but in silence kissed the rod,
Saving what he told the horses, saving what he told his God.

Far away in mighty London rose the woman into fame,
For her beauty won men's homage, and she prospered in her shame.
Quick from lord to lord she flitted, higher still each prize she won,
And her rivals paled beside her as the stars beside the sun.

Next she made the stage her market, and she dragged Art's temple down
To the level of a show-place for the outcasts of the town;
And the kisses she had given to poor Ostler Joe for naught,
With their gold and costly jewels, rich and titled lovers bought.

Went the years with flying footsteps while the star was at its height;
Then the darkness came on swiftly and the gloaming turned to night.
Shattered strength and faded beauty tore the laurels from her brow—
Of the thousands who had worshipped, never one came near her now.

Broken down in health and fortune, men forgot her very name,
Till the news that she was dying woke the echoes of her fame,
And the papers in their gossip mentioned how an " actress " lay
Sick to death in humble lodgings, growing weaker every day.

One there was who read the story in a far off country place,
And that night the dying woman woke and looked upon his face,
Once again the strong arms clasped her that had clasped her long ago,
And the weary head laid pillowed on the breast of Ostler Joe.

All the past had he forgotten, all the sorrow and the shame;
He had found her sick and lonely, and his wife he now could claim.
Since the grand folks who had known her one and all had slunk away,
He could clasp his long lost darling and no man would say him nay.

In his arms death found her lying—in his arms her spirit fled,
And his tears came down in torrents as he knelt beside her dead.
Never once his love had faltered through her base, unhallowed life,
And the stone above her ashes bears the honored name of wife.

That's the blossom I fain would pluck to-day from the garden above the dust—
Not the langorous lily of soulless sin, nor the blood-red rose of lust;
But a sweet, white blossom of holy love that grew in the one green spot
In the arid desert of Phryne's life where all was parched and hot.

How I Brought The Baby-Carriage Home.

BY FREDERICK EDWARD McKAY.

I was sitting at the breakfast table in my country home, at the end of a pleasant summer season, with my wife opposite me; I was deep in the columns of my New York paper when Mrs. Tift made a remark.

Were you speaking to me, Annie? I inquired, looking up.

Yes, she replied thoughtfully, I was asking you if you would just as soon take the baby carriage home with you to the city this morning. It would save so much trouble and some expense from our moving next week; and it would not be very much bother to you. Would it?

Well, returned I, after some consideration, seeing 'tis you, Annie, I don't know but that I will. But I hope that none of my New York friends will happen to be on the line of route; and I laughed; and Annie laughed too.

Having finished my very early breakfast, I bade a hasty good-bye to Annie and the baby and started to catch the first train to Boston, trundling the baby carriage along before me. Few persons were out of bed; so no one but the milkman happened to stare at me on the village street. I felt rather awkward as I wheeled my charge up to the ticket office, purchased my ticket to Boston and passed on to the baggage room.

Please check this baby carriage to New York, I said.

We don't check baby carriages, replied the official.

Don't check baby carriages? I repeated, surprised.

No, sir, was the retort—Newport, did you say, sir? turning to the next man in line.

What was I to do? Baby carriages not checked! Just then a second baggage man passed by. Beckoning him to me, a whispered conversation ensued. A fifty cent piece changed hands, and the second baggage man, who seemed somewhat better natured than his fellow, took hold of the handles and softly rolled the carriage off.

When the train rushed in, I took my seat in the parlor car. After the train boy had passed around his books, candy and newspapers to his heart's content, and the train had sped over fifteen miles of fields and farms, we arrived at Boston, where I was to take the New York "Special."

Stepping from the train, I was met by someone from the baggage car with the transferred baby carriage. He handed it over to me with a knowing look.

It's all right. But you will find it a mighty hard job getting that carriage to New York—if that's where you're going, was his remark.

I am afraid you are right, I answered. I was beginning to grow somewhat vexed with the troublesome little vehicle already. I wheeled it out into the street. The hackmen were all out in front of the depot, yelling at the top of their voices, and I hired a hack for seventy-five cents. With the money I had given the baggage man for the transportation of the carriage this amounted to much more than it would have cost, already, to take the carriage to New York under ordinary circumstances. Nor could I tell how much more I should have to expend on it before we could part company.

Where shall I put the wagon? was the hack driver's question.

Can't you put it on top? I asked. On top he put it. I got inside, he whipped up the horses and we were off for my third depot. Inside the hack I had plenty of time to think of the trouble and expense saved by my taking the thing to New York. I opened the door and got out at the ——depot. The driver stepped down from his box, with a broad grin on his face (I suppose at the idea of a gentleman traveling with a baby carriage); he helped and I helped to get our freight down.

Again the carriage was not to be checked. This time I produced a dollar, without any hints, and it was set in a corner of the baggage car. Once more I seated myself in the train, bought a New York paper, made myself as comfortable as possible, and was whirled along to Newport. It was almost ten o'clock when we arrived there.

The baggage man duly handed the baby carriage down the plank and thrust it upon me in good order. I rolled it out along the platform with my own hands.

It was raining, not very heavily, but just enough to make the day disagreeable. I buttoned my coat and opened my umbrella (luckily I had brought it with me) and then the question was what to do with that carriage.

I wished particularly to call on a business friend at his home in Newport. Of course, I could not think of rolling my four-wheeled nuisance about that fashionable resort.

There was a grocery store opposite the station. I pushed the machine over across the street and under the awning, to keep it and me out of the rain. Many curious glances were aimed at me. The grocer came out to meet me; I explained my situation to him.

Certainly—wheel it right in, he said. He took hold of it; and it disappeared with him in the rear of the store. I of course gave him twenty-five cents, which with the fees I had paid before made a total of two dollars and fifty cents.

Leaving the store I took a horse-car which left me in front of Mr. X—'s door.

I accomplished my errand, had a luncheon and chat with him and his family and was driven down to the dock in his carriage. I had told him about my trouble with the baby carriage and he laughed a great deal about it. I got my tormentor on board the New York night-boat, strange to say without paying any fees. I secured a stateroom and went to bed early. I was tired. I looked at my watch on waking in the morning, sprang up and found that we were steaming up North River.

I hurriedly dressed and went down into the room where the baggage is kept to see if my carriage was all right. We were almost at the wharf, now, and to my alarm, I could not discover the little machine anywhere.

I asked an officer whom I saw standing there if he had seen it.

Seen a baby carriage? he replied quickly; Yes, if you look behind those trunks you will find it.

I managed to look,—sure enough there it was. But I could not imaging how I was to get it out for the trunks were a small mountain about it. Fortunately there was a window back and another dollar had helped to get that window open and the object of our labor half way out when the captain passed by.

What is this, Mr. Mifflin, inquired he sharply.

I was helping this gentleman to get his baby carriage out, sir.

And how do you know that it is his carriage, Mifflin? Put them trunks and that carriage back.

It was intolerable. I walked over to the captain, explained matter in detail to him and—finally—he gave in and told the mate to go ahead, which he did. At last carriage and I stood on the dock in New York. I wheeled it (by this time it had a broken handle and was covered with dust and dirt) up to the Fourth avenue surface line. I hailed the first car that went by. The driver looked at my wheeled companion and went on without a word. The next that passed was more civil and stopped; but when I told him that I wanted him to take me and my carriage along with him, he said No, sir. The company wouldn't allow it.

I was by this time mad— not vexed, but mad. I crossed to another street and leaving the baby carriage around the corner stopped a stage. It was empty.

Driver, I said, I want you to come down and help me to get a big bundle on top of your stage. I'll pay you well for your trouble.

He did not come down at first but when I repeated the hint of pay he complied. We went around the corner and I showed him the carriage.

Is this the bundle he asked. Yes it is, I confessed,—Will you take it? Well, yes, but when we are almost up to ——Street you must get off with it.

We got the perambulator up on top and rumbled off, I sitting above with the driver. He was quite a nice man and told me all sorts of things—about the cold days last winter and the little sum of money he had saved up. You had better get down now, sir, he said finally,—but you might step inside and hold the carriage on the steps for two blocks yet. The Superintendent won't see you then.

I did as directed. I passed four or five of my friends on their way down to business. They bowed and I noticed that they smiled and turned around to look at me and my blue and white charge projecting out of the stage. But the end was near. I saw my house, jumped from the stage, hurried down the cross street, rolled the carriage down into my basement and rang the bell. Bridget came to the gate.

Bridget I said, Take that carriage up to the spare room, lock the door and don't let me see it again as long as I live; so saying I slammed the gate and started for my bedroom.

When I wrote an angry letter to Annie a day or two after, I figured up the total expenses that my wheeled freight had been to me. The bill was as follows:

First baggage man,	$ .50
Hack driver,	.75
Second baggage man,	1.00
Obliging grocer,	.25
Mr. Mifflin,	1.00
Stage,	.50
Repairing handle,	1 60
Total,	$5.60

From the above history and bill other owners of baby carriages will do well to take warning.

SPARKS.

Last Thursday evening, about 6.30 o'clock, the need of some different system of fire alarm from the present one was forcibly shown when the department were called out for a fire in Poole's Hollow and went racing toward Dublin as fast as horse flesh would take it, in answer to the blowing of the whistle on the currying shop of R. H. Brown & Co., thinking the fire was in that section when in reality it was in the old Jacobs morocco shop in the rear of Main street. The fire was discovered by some one passing by and the alarm was given from the whistle of the above named firm. When first seen the flames were coming up through the building near the boiler in the part occupied by William F. Murphy, but by the time Hose 4 reached the spot the fire was running through the whole roof of the irregular shaped buildings, and the prospect was that the whole concern would be food for the fire fiend, but so promptly did the firemen work that in a very few minutes the whole place was surrounded with streams of water and the fire was being drowned out. The buildings being old and saturated with oils created a dense smoke which beat down to the ground making it difficult for the firemen to see or breathe, but they stuck to their post and soon had the pleasure of conquering the fiery foe. Hose 4 got the first water on the fire taking their streams directly into the burning building where they were nearly suffocated by the heavy smoke. Hose 2, 1, 3, 5, and Steamer 2 were soon at work, and Steamer 1 was sent for, locating on Walnut street and running a line across the railroad to the back of the building doing good execution. Steamer 2 sat at the hydrant in front of Sutton's wool shop on Main street, and worked with four lines of hose. Eight or nine streams were thrown on the fire. At 7.30 o'clock the fire was out and by 8 o'clock the apparatus had left the spot.

The building was owned by James A. Gillis, of Salem, and was leased by A. B. Clark, who sub-let it to William F. Murphy who carried on the glove kid business and to William Sutton manufacturer of sheep skins. The building was taxed for $1200, upon which was an insurance of $3000 through the agency of Geo. P. Daniels of Salem, divided between the Rochester German Exchange of New York and North American of Boston. The loss on building and machinery has been adjusted for $976. William F. Murphy had about 500 dozen skins in process of finish and with the damage to his machinery the loss will be about $2000, upon which was an insurance of $2900 placed by H. A. Brown of Salem in the following companies:—London, Liverpool and Globe, stock $1000, machinery $400; Howard, $1000 on stock and materials; City of London, $500 on stock. William Sutton's loss was about $100, wholly by water, and was covered by $4500 in the following companies:—On stock—Hartford, $1000; Phœnix of Hartford, $1500; Phœnix Assurance of London, $2000; through the agency of O. B. Chadwick & Co. The fire caught in the finishing room of Murphy's part from a stove used to heat irons used in the business, and spread through the upper lofts of the building. T. F. Murray of H. & L. 1 received a cut on one hand by a blow from an axe struck when the smoke was so thick that it prevented seeing where the blow was to fall. The horse and steam cars were delayed for a time by the lines of hose across the tracks. The vacuum chamber of Steamer 2 was burst just as the fire was all out but was repaired by the next night. The rekindling of the fire about midnight called out a squad from Hose 4 with ladders and buckets. The fire was well handled and great praise was bestowed on engineers and firemen. About twenty years ago the boiler of this old factory exploded and three men lost their lives.

The fire at the Harris tannery next to the old Jacobs factory took place one year ago yesterday morning, Mch. 23d.

Hose 4 was called out about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon by a slight fire in the house of Charles Ford on Pierpoint street, where a lot of clothes fell on a stove causing a great smoke. The alarm was given but was not taken up at the Central Station.

The insurance on the railroad avenue fire has been adjusted by the payment to C. Warren Osborn of $432 on the building, $400 on machinery and to Henry C. Torr on stock the sum of $2232.14, although the appraisers estimated the loss at $3176.94, but by a defect in the policy he only received the first named sum making his direct loss nearly $1000. William Reardon's loss on stock $1300, and on machinery and tools $110. Work has been resumed at this shop.

Last Thursday evening Hose Company No. 4 gave one of their famous clam chowder parties at which the members of the company and about a dozen invited guests sat down. The chowder was prepared by the old veteran fire sharp Horace G. Upton, and was one of his best, and was partaken of with a relish, more especially as the firemen had just got through work at the Jacobs fire. After supper the party retired to the hall above where speeches were made by Chief Engineer Tibbetts, Engineers Johnson and Reed, Foreman Moreland of Hose 4, Miller of H. & L. 1, Hooper of Hose 3, ex-foreman Cummings of Steamer 2, and ex-engineer Peirce, Messrs. Dole, Linehan, Foan and others. Vocal and instrumental music was rendered by members of the company, and the party broke up about midnight.

Hose 3 drew the owl clock at the Lynn G. A. R. fair, valued at $6.50, on ticket 32580. It will be put up at the Hose house as a trophy.

4000 feet of hose was wet at the old Jacobs fire.

Two weeks from to-night the sixth annual ball and concert of the "Three Ones and a Two" will be held in the town hall. Tickets to the concert and ball are selling well and the prospects are that there will be a large attendance, and that many out of town firemen will be present.

William H. Hall, who died of pneumonia Monday morning, was for many years an active member of Steamer 1, serving as clerk of the company. He made friends wherever he was and was always a strong friend of the firemen.

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW IN HIS LIBRARY

Our engraving of "Longfellow in His Library," of which the above cut is a miniature copy, is an accurate representation of the room which Longfellow used from 1837 until the time of his death, and it will undoubtedly be accepted as the favorite picture of the "American Popular Poet." The likeness is good; the attitude and expression happily betoken a mind deeply occupied in the task before him, and everyone who admires and appreciates the writings of the poet, will be pleased to see the appointments of the room in which he worked, together with a faithful portrait of him. Remember that this is no chromo, but a Superb Steel-plate Engraving, 24x32 inches in size.

The central figure is that of the Great Poet. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical. The artizan is in his workshop. Aside from from being the workshop of our immortal poet, it was the room in which Gen. George Washington made his headquarters, directly after the battle of Bunker Hill.

We shall offer this engraving till February 1st, on the following conditions

EVERY NEW SUBSCRIBER paying $2, in advance, for the PRESS, will receive a copy FREE.

Old Subscribers, in arrears, who will settle to date and pay one year in Advance, will receive a copy.

Subscribers who pay in advance can have the PRESS and engraving by paying $2.50.

Poet's Corner.

"Ostler Joe."

I stood at eve, as the sun went down, by a grave where a woman lies
Who lured men's souls to the shores of sin with the light of her wanton eyes.
Who sang the song that the siren sang on the treacherous Lurlei height.
Whose face was as fair as a summer day, and whose heart was as black as night.

Yet a blossom I fain would pluck from the garden above her dust—
Not the langorous lily of soulless sin, nor the blood-red rose of lust;
But a sweet, white blossom of holy love that grew in the one green spot
In the arid desert of Phryne's life where all was parched and hot.

In the summer, when the meadows were aglow with blue and red,
Joe, the ostler of the Magpie, and fair Annie Smith were wed.
Plump was Annie, plump and pretty, with a cheek as white as snow;
He was anything but handsome, was the Magpie's ostler Joe.

But he won the winsome lassie; they'd a cottage and a cow,
And her matronhood sat lightly on the village beauty's brow.
Sped the months and came a baby—such a blue-eyed baby boy.
Joe was working in the stables when they told him of his joy.

He was rubbing down the horses, and he gave them, then and there
All a special feed of clover, just in honor of the heir;
It had been his great ambition, and he told the horses so,
That the fates would send a baby who might bear the name of Joe.

Little Joe the child was christened, and, like babies, grew apace;
He'd his mother's eyes of azure and his father's honest face.
Swift the happy years went over, years of blue and cloudless sky;
Love was lord of that small cottage, and the tempests passed them by.

Passed them by for years, then swiftly burst in fury o'er their home;
Down the lane by Annie's cottage chanced a gentleman to roam;
Thrice he came and saw her sitting by the window with her child,
And he nodded to the baby, and the baby laughed and smiled.

So at last it grew to know him—little Joe was nearly four—
He would call the "pretty gempin" as he passed the open door,
And one day he ran and caught him and in child's play pulled him in,
And the baby Joe had prayed for brought about the mother's sin.

'Twas the same old wretched story that for ages bards have sung;
'Twas a woman weak and wanton, and a villain's tempting tongue;
'Twas a picture deftly painted for a silly creature's eyes
Of the Babylonian wonders and the joy that in them lies.

Annie listened and was tempted; she was tempted and she fell,
As the angels fell from heaven, to the blackest depths of hell.
She was promised wealth and splendor and a life of guilty sloth,
Yellow gold for child and husband, and the woman left them both.

Home one eve came Joe, the ostler, with a cheery cry of "Wife!"
Finding that which blurred forever all the story of his life.
She had left a silly letter—through the cruel scrawl he spelt.
Then he sought the lonely bedroom, joined his horny hands and knelt.

"Now, O Lord, O God forgive her, for she ain't to blame," he cried,
"For I owt ta seen her trouble and agone away and died.
Why a wench like her—God bless her!—'twas likely as her'd rest
With that bonny head forever on a ostler's ragged vest.

"It was kind o' her to hear me all this long and happy time,
So, for my sake please to bless her, though you count her deed a crime;
If so be I don't pray proper, Lord, forgive me, for you see
I can talk all right to 'osses, but I'm nervous like with Thee."

Ne'er a line came to the cottage from the woman who had flown;
Joe, the baby, died that winter, and the man was left alone.
Ne'er a bitter word he uttered, but in silence kissed the rod,
Saving what he told the horses, saving what he told his God.

Far away in mighty London rose the woman into fame,
For her beauty won men's homage, and she prospered in her shame.
Quick from lord to lord she flitted, higher still each prize she won,
And her rivals paled beside her as the stars beside the sun.

Next she made the stage her market, and she dragged Art's temple down
To the level of a show-place for the outcasts of the town;
And the kisses she had given to poor Ostler Joe for naught,
With their gold and costly jewels, rich and titled lovers bought.

Went the years with flying footsteps while the star was at its height;
Then the darkness came on swiftly and the gloaming turned to night.
Shattered strength and faded beauty tore the laurels from her brow—
Of the thousands who had worshipped, never one came near her now.

Broken down in health and fortune, men forgot her very name,
Till the news that she was dying woke the echoes of her fame,
And the papers in their gossip mentioned how an "actress" lay
Sick to death in humble lodgings, growing weaker every day.

One there was who read the story in a far off country place,
And that night the dying woman woke and looked upon his face,
Once again the strong arms clasped her that had clasped her long ago,
And the weary head laid pillowed on the breast of Ostler Joe.

All the past had he forgotten, all the sorrow and the shame;
He had found her sick and lonely, and his wife he now could claim.
Since the grand folks who had known her one and all had slunk away,
He could clasp his long lost darling and no man would say him nay.

In his arms death found her lying—in his arms her spirit fled,
And his tears came down in torrents as he knelt beside her dead.
Never once his love had faltered through her base, unhallowed life,
And the stone above her ashes bears the honored name of wife.

That's the blossom I fain would pluck to-day from the garden above the dust—
Not the langorous lily of soulless sin, nor the blood-red rose of lust;
But a sweet, white blossom of holy love that grew in the one green spot
In the arid desert of Phryne's life where all was parched and hot.

How I Brought The Baby-Carriage Home.

BY FREDERICK EDWARD MCKAY.

I was sitting at the breakfast table in my country home, at the end of a pleasant summer season, with my wife opposite me; I was deep in the columns of my New York paper when Mrs. Tift made a remark.

Were you speaking to me, Annie? I inquired, looking up.

Yes, she replied thoughtfully, I was asking you if you would just as soon take the baby carriage home with you to the city this morning. It would save so much trouble and some expense from our moving next week; and it would not be very much bother to you. Would it?

Well, returned I, after some consideration, seeing 'tis you, Annie, I don't know but that I will. But I hope that none of my New York friends will happen to be on the line of route; and I laughed; and Annie laughed too.

Having finished my very early breakfast, I bade a hasty good-bye to Annie and the baby and started to catch the first train to Boston, trundling the baby carriage along before me. Few persons were out of bed; so no one but the milkman happened to stare at me on the village street. I felt rather awkward as I wheeled my charge up to the ticket office, purchased my ticket to Boston and passed on to the baggage room.

Please check this baby carriage to New York, I said.

We don't check baby carriages, replied the official.

Don't check baby carriages? I repeated, surprised.

No, sir, was the retort—Newport, did you say, sir? turning to the next man in line.

What was I to do? Baby carriages not checked! Just then a second baggage man passed by. Beckoning him to me, a whispered conversation ensued. A fifty cent piece changed hands, and the second baggage man, who seemed somewhat better natured than his fellow, took hold of the handles and softly rolled the carriage off.

When the train rushed in, I took my seat in the parlor car. After the train boy had passed around his books, candy and newspapers to his heart's content, and the train had sped over fifteen miles of fields and farms, we arrived at Boston, where I was to take the New York "Special."

Stepping from the train, I was met by someone from the baggage car with the transferred baby carriage. He handed it over to me with a knowing look.

It's all right. But you will find it a mighty hard job getting that carriage to New York—if that's where you're going, was his remark.

I am afraid you are right, I answered. I was beginning to grow somewhat vexed with the troublesome little vehicle already. I wheeled it out into the street. The hackmen were all out in front of the depot, yelling at the top of their voices, and I hired a hack for seventy-five cents. With the money I had given the baggage man for the transportation of the carriage this amounted to much more than it would have cost, already, to take the carriage to New York under ordinary circumstances. Nor could I tell how much more I should have to expend on it before we could part company.

Where shall I put the wagon? was the hack driver's question.

Can't you put it on top? I asked. On top he put it. I got inside, he whipped up the horses and we were off for my third depot. Inside the hack I had plenty of time to think of the trouble and expense saved by my taking the thing to New York. I opened the door and got out at the ——depot. The driver stepped down from his box, with a broad grin on his face (I suppose at the idea of a gentleman traveling with a baby carriage); he helped and I helped to get our freight down.

Again the carriage was not to be checked. This time I produced a dollar, without any hints, and it was set in a corner of the baggage car. Once more I seated myself in the train, bought a New York paper, made myself as comfortable as possible, and was whirled along to Newport. It was almost ten o'clock when we arrived there.

The baggage man duly handed the baby carriage down the plank and thrust it upon me in good order. I rolled it out along the platform with my own hands.

It was raining, not very heavily, but just enough to make the day disagreeable. I buttoned my coat and opened my umbrella (luckily I had brought it with me) and then the question was what to do with that carriage.

I wished particularly to call on a business friend at his home in Newport. Of course, I could not think of rolling my four-wheeled nuisance about that fashionable resort.

There was a grocery store opposite the station. I pushed the machine over across the street and under the awning, to keep it and me out of the rain. Many curious glances were aimed at me. The grocer came out to meet me; I explained my situation to him.

Certainly—wheel it right in, he said. He took hold of it; and it disappeared with him in the rear of the store. I of course gave him twenty-five cents, which with the fees I had paid before made a total of two dollars and fifty cents.

Leaving the store I took a horse-car which left me in front of Mr. X—'s door.

I accomplished my errand, had a luncheon and chat with him and his family and was driven down to the dock in his carriage. I had told him about my trouble with the baby carriage and he laughed a great deal about it. I got my tormentor on board the New York night-boat, strange to say without paying any fees. I secured a stateroom and went to bed early. I was tired. I looked at my watch on waking in the morning, sprang up and found that we were steaming up North River.

I hurriedly dressed and went down into the room where the baggage is kept to see if my carriage was all right. We were almost at the wharf, now, and to my alarm, I could not discover the little machine anywhere.

I asked an officer whom I saw standing there if he had seen it.

Seen a baby carriage? he replied quickly; Yes, if you look behind those trunks you will find it.

I managed to look,—sure enough there it was. But I could not imaging how I was to get it out for the trunks were a small mountain about it. Fortunately there was a window back and another dollar had helped to get that window open and the object of our labor half way out when the captain passed by.

What is this, Mr. Mifflin, inquired he sharply.

I was helping this gentleman to get his baby carriage out, sir.

And how do you know that it is his carriage, Mifflin? Put them trunks and that carriage back.

It was intolerable. I walked over to the captain, explained matter in detail to him and—finally—he gave in and told the mate to go ahead, which he did. At last carriage and I stood on the dock in New York. I wheeled it (by this time it had a broken handle and was covered with dust and dirt) up to the Fourth avenue surface line. I hailed the first car that went by. The driver looked at my wheeled companion and went on without a word. The next that passed was more civil and stopped; but when I told him that I wanted him to take me and my carriage along with him, he said No, sir. The company wouldn't allow it.

I was by this time mad— not vexed, but mad. I crossed to another street and leaving the baby carriage around the corner stopped a stage. It was empty.

Driver, I said, I want you to come down and help me to get a big bundle on top of your stage. I'll pay you well for your trouble.

He did not come down at first but when I repeated the hint of pay he complied. We went around the corner and I showed him the carriage.

Is this the bundle he asked. Yes it is, I confessed,—Will you take it? Well, yes, but when we are almost up to ——Street you must get off with it.

We got the perambulator up on top and rumbled off, I sitting above with the driver. He was quite a nice man and told me all sorts of things—about the cold days last winter and the little sum of money he had saved up. You had better get down now, sir, he said finally,—but you might step inside and hold the carriage on the steps for two blocks yet. The Superintendent won't see you then.

I did as directed. I passed four or five of my friends on their way down to business. They bowed and I noticed that they smiled and turned around to look at me and my blue and white charge projecting out of the stage. But the end was near. I saw my house, jumped from the stage, hurried down the cross street, rolled the carriage down into my basement and rang the bell. Bridget came to the gate.

Bridget I said, Take that carriage up to the spare room, lock the door and don't let me see it again as long as I live; so saying I slammed the gate and started for my bedroom.

When I wrote an angry letter to Annie a day or two after, I figured up the total expenses that my wheeled freight had been to me. The bill was as follows:

First baggage man,	$ .50
Hack driver,	.75
Second baggage man,	1.00
Obliging grocer,	.25
Mr. Mifflin,	1.00
Stage,	.50
Repairing handle,	1 60
Total,	$5.60

From the above history and bill other owners of baby carriages will do well to take warning.

SPARKS.

Last Thursday evening, about 6.30 o'clock, the need of some different system of fire alarm from the present one was forcibly shown when the department were called out for a fire in Poole's Hollow and went racing toward Dublin as fast as horse flesh would take it, in answer to the blowing of the whistle on the currying shop of R. H. Brown & Co., thinking the fire was in that section when in reality it was in the old Jacobs morocco shop in the rear of Main street. The fire was discovered by some one passing by and the alarm was given from the whistle of the above named firm. When first seen the flames were coming up through the building near the boiler in the part occupied by William F. Murphy, but by the time Hose 4 reached the spot the fire was running through the whole roof of the irregular shaped buildings, and the prospect was that the whole concern would be food for the fire fiend, but so promptly did the firemen work that in a very few minutes the whole placewas surrounded with streams of water and the fire was being drowned out. The buildings being old and saturated with oils created a dense smoke which beat down to the ground making it difficult for the firemen to see or breathe, but they stuck to their post and soon had the pleasure of conquering the fiery foe. Hose 4 got the first water on the fire taking their streams directly into the burning building where they were nearly suffocated by the heavy smoke. Hose 2, 1, 3, 5, and Steamer 2 were soon at work, and Steamer 1 was sent for, locating on Walnut street and running a line across the railroad to the back of the building doing good execution. Steamer 2 sat at the hydrant in front of Sutton's wool shop on Main street, and worked with four lines of hose. Eight or nine streams were thrown on the fire. At 7.30 o'clock the fire was out and by 8 o'clock the apparatus had left the spot.

The building was owned by James A. Gillis, of Salem, and was leased by A. B. Clark, who sub-let it to William F. Murphy who carried on the glove kid business and to William Sutton manufacturer of sheep skins. The building was taxed for $1200, upon which was an insurance of $3000 through the agency of Geo. P. Daniels of Salem, divided between the Rochester German Exchange of New York and North American of Boston. The loss on building and machinery has been adjusted for $976. William F. Murphy had about 500 dozen skins in process of finish and with the damage to his machinery the loss will be about $2000, upon which was an insurance of $2900 placed by H. A. Brown of Salem in the following companies:—London, Liverpool and Globe, stock $1000, machinery $400; Howard, $1000 on stock and materials; City of London, $500 on stock. William Sutton's loss was about $100, wholly by water, and was covered by $4500 in the following companies:—On stock—Hartford, $1000; Phœnix of Hartford, $1500; Phœnix Assurance of London, $2000; through the agency of O. B. Chadwick & Co. The fire caught in the finishing room of Murphy's part from a stove used to heat irons used in the business, and spread through the upper lofts of the building. T. F. Murray of H. & L. 1 received a cut on one hand by a blow from an axe struck when the smoke was so thick that it prevented seeing where the blow was to fall. The horse and steam cars were delayed for a time by the lines of hose across the tracks. The vacuum chamber of Steamer 2 was burst just as the fire was all out but was repaired by the next night. The rekindling of the fire about midnight called out a squad from Hose 4 with ladders and buckets. The fire was well handled and great praise was bestowed on engineers and firemen. About twenty years ago the boiler of this old factory exploded and three men lost their lives.

The fire at the Harris tannery next to the old Jacobs factory took place one year ago yesterday morning, Mch. 23d.

Hose 4 was called out about 4 o'clock Thursday afternoon by a slight fire in the house of Charles Ford on Pierpoint street, where a lot of clothes fell on a stove causing a great smoke. The alarm was given but was not taken up at the Central Station.

The insurance on the railroad avenue fire has been adjusted by the payment to C. Warren Osborn of $432 on the building, $400 on machinery and to Henry C. Torr on stock the sum of $2232.14, although the appraisers estimated the loss at $3176.94, but by a defect in the policy he only received the first named sum making his direct loss nearly $1000. William Reardon's loss on stock $1300, and on machinery and tools $110. Work has been resumed at this shop.

Last Thursday evening Hose Company No. 4 gave one of their famous clam chowder parties at which the members of the company and about a dozen invited guests sat down. The chowder was prepared by the old veteran fire sharp Horace G. Upton, and was one of his best, and was partaken of with a relish, more especially as the firemen had just got through work at the Jacobs fire. After supper the party retired to the hall above where speeches were made by Chief Engineer Tibbetts, Engineers Johnson and Reed, Foreman Moreland of Hose 4, Miller of H. & L. 1, Hooper of Hose 3, ex-foreman Cummings of Steamer 2, and ex-engineer Peirce, Messrs. Dole, Linehan, Foan and others. Vocal and instrumental music was rendered by members of the company, and the party broke up about midnight.

Hose 3 drew the owl clock at the Lynn G. A. R. fair, valued at $6.50, on ticket 32580. It will be put up at the Hose house as a trophy.

4000 feet of hose was wet at the old Jacobs fire.

Two weeks from to-night the sixth annual ball and concert of the "Three Ones and a Two" will be held in the town hall. Tickets to the concert and ball are selling well and the prospects are that there will be a large attendance, and that many out of town firemen will be present.

William H. Hall, who died of pneumonia Monday morning, was for many years an active member of Steamer 1, serving as clerk of the company. He made friends wherever he was and was always a strong friend of the firemen.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."
CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."
EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.
R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.
Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

WEST PEABODY.

On Friday evening March 12th, Mr. Edwin O. Foster of the Telegram, read an essay before the Farmer's Club, on "Ancient Footwear" of various nations, which he evidently had gathered from some history relating to the subject. The editor gave sufficient references to the Bible, to prove he was "well up" in the teachings of the good book, and also gave one the impression that he would have made a better divine than journalist. However that may have been, the rustics present listened with open-eyed wonder to a description of the old time craftsmen and their method of producing corns upon the "human hoof; from the time Eve went bare-foot," down to the time when the angel Gabriel, a Crispin, being hustled out of Eden by the bouncers, for "corning" of the Heavenly hordes, blew his horn and summoned to his aid the ancestors of our Philosopher; whereupon the shoe and leather business received its first impetus. Labor organizations being unknown in those days, the firm of "Gabriel and Ingraham" flourished beyond their most sanguine expectations of success; hence the wealth and prosperity of the descendants of that famous business house. Blue was the prevailing color of the foot-wear worn in those days, and in dyeing such large quantities of leather, the blood of vast numbers of workmen were imbued with that hue; consequently the blue blooded aristocracy of Peabody, and of the world, can trace their origin to hides, tan and logwood dyes.

THAT TRIP TO WASHINGTON.

On Wednesday morning Feb. 17th, two old codgers, hailing from a certain portion of Essex County, were seen in Boston, on their way to the National Capital, by one of our well-known citizens, who describes their appearance as follows. One of them had on a billy-cock hat, a short coat, and long legged boots with pant legs tucked in; from each side pocket of the coat there protruded the neck of a champagne cider bottle, and from the breast-pocket a Police Gazette showed itself; in each hand was grasped a heavy valise, and under one arm an embrella was snugly stowed away, while to the other clung a gaudily dressed female, with banged hair, and high heeled boots. The other had on a plug hat, a roundabout jacket, and brogans upon his feet; he also carried two valises, an umbrella and had a young lady upon his arm. Both of these parties were smoking cheroots, and seemed a little unsteady in their gait, so much so, that a doughnut would jump from their pockets at nearly every step. Our informant did not have time to watch the movement of the quartette any longer, although had he done so, some rich developements no doubt would have been brought to light. The fun had just commenced; the trip was in its infancy; the graybeards were on a tearing racket, away from home, and home influences; it was once in a lifetime, now or never; and who is the wretch that would interfere with the pleasures of the hoary heads? Go it, "ye horny fisted sons of toil;" who p it up; paint everything red that you come to, and when you return to the fireside, give wise counsel to the young, that they may guard against the follies, snares, and pitfalls, you have encountered in a journey to the City of Magnificent Distances.

Winter has been called the ruler of the inverted year, and when he lays his icy hand on nature, all things acknowledge his power. But he has lost much of it now. St. Jacobs Oil, the conqueror of pain, drives away rheumatism, and the people are happy.

The next sensation will be a spring bonnet.

Ayer's Pills are purely vegetable, perfectly safe, do not gripe, and are a splendid tonic.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The cantata of Ruth, with Miss Sopha C. Hall and Mrs. Abbie B. Hervey of Boston as soloists, will be given in the Town Hall, Ipswich, this evening. The concert is given under the auspices of the Agawam Musical Union.

Preparations are being made by Prof. Bill for a grand concert of the school children of the town at some future date.

The musical entertainment announced for last Monday evening's meeting of the Unity club, was postponed on account of the death of Mr. Hall. It will be given next Monday evening at a special meeting of the Club. It will consist, as we stated last week, of a sketch of the different composers by Mrs. F. C. Ferguson, with illustrations of a vocal and instrumental nature by Miss Dodge, Miss Nellie M. Bartlett, Mr. F. W. Stanley, Miss Emma Rice, Mrs. J. P. Fernald and others.

Mr. Eri Littlefield was unable to sing in the Baptist choir last Sunday on account of a severe cold.

With the prestige of having attained the longest run in the annals of Boston—161 consecutive performances—"The Mikado" will say good-by to his subjects and friends at the Hollis Street Theatre Saturday evening next. It may be regarded as a foregone conclusion that during these last "Mikado" nights here the pretty theatre will be attended by great throngs. It is certain that the representation will continue to merit the great public favor which has been accorded the first production at Manager Rich's house, giving it at once the strongest hold on public regard.

For the last week of their stay in this city Mahn's opera company announce "The Mikado." They have sung the work in other cities with much success and a good deal of interest naturally is felt in this proposed production. Tellula Evens will be the Yum Yum, and she is said to be brightly original. Alice May's Katisha has been very warmly praised, and Charles J. Campbell may be expected to prove a good looking as well as tuneful Nanki Poo. The opera is to be prettily staged, and as the members of the company are familiar with the opera a smooth performance is to be anticipated.

Miss Lizzie Webb Cary, Messrs. J. H. Ricketson and A. D. Saxon are engaged at the festival to be held at Little Rock, Arkansas, May 17, 18 and 19.

"The Black Hussar" is one of the most delightful entertainments offered in this city for years, and the McCaull Opera Comique Company are having a full harvest of patronage with its presentations at the Boston Theatre. This is the last week of the opera here, owing to previous engagements for the appearance of this favorite company in other cities. There are so many good things about "The Black Hussar" that its success is easily explainable.

The opening of Kent & Boynton's new clothing establishment last Thursday was a grand success. Throngs of people visited the store all day and in the evening, admiring the changes which have been made in the arrangement of the store, and the new and choice goods to be found there. Mr. Boynton's long experience as manager of Wilmot's in Salem will enable him to cater to the wants of the people in this vicinity in ready made clothing, and with newer goods and of a finer quality, selected especially for this season's trade, the firm cannot fail to please the public. Mr. Kent brings to Salem the benefit of many years successful experience in Brockton, and will have charge of the custom tailoring department, which it is proposed to make an important adjunct to the business of the firm. All the goods will be made up in their store, and customers can rely upon being furnished with the best of materials, made in the best manner known to the tailoring art. In the evening of Thursday, the Salem Cadet Band gave an excellent concert, and a lunch was served in landlord Davis' best style at the Essex House, to which the firm and a few invited guests did ample justice. The new firm is now ready for business, and starts off with every augury for a prosperous career.

It may be a little early to talk of the selection of a Congressman from this district, but as we received information from a reliable source that certain politicians in Salem have already commenced to put in some work among the rural districts, a word about what they are doing would not be out of place. Knowing as they do that General William Cogswell comes nearest to representing the mass of the people, and therefore has the best chance for the nomination, these politicians are trying to head off the General by talking up quietly the names of George B. Loring and N. A. Horton, and it is proposed to secure as many delegates as possible for these gentlemen, and in the convention "pool their issues" against General Cogswell. Quite a number of prominent Republicans "have been seen" already. We are afraid their little scheme will die young. It was started to early in the spring.

The Old Columbian Fire Club.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—As you appear to be favorably disposed regarding the publication of articles containing reminiscences of the past, I will venture to send you a brief history of the first organized Fire Club in the ancient town of Danvers. Having in my possession the book containing the written records of the meetings of the club during its natural life, I will copy short extracts therefrom, together with the by-laws and regulations by which the members of the club were governed. I will first give the list of members at the time of of its organization:

Gideon Foster, Sylvester Osborn, David Daniels, Edward Southwick, Sylvester Procter, Fitch Pool, Jas. Brown, Steph. Low, Nathaniel Garland, Ebenezer Shillaber, Richard Osborn, Joseph Osborn, John Upton, Jr., Enoch Poor, George G. Smith, Henry Saunders, Daniel King, Richard Smith, Curtis Searl, Benjamin Jacobs.

George Southwick, Clark Wilson, James Silver, William Silver, Joseph Torrey, Jonathan Dustin, Elijah C. Webster, Solomon McIntire, Martin Nye, Caleb Smith, Ward Poole, Elijah Upton, Squires Shove, Jonathan Howard, J. S. Felton, Joseph Shed, Abner Sanger, Arch Putnam, Henry Cook, Stephen Osborne, Joseph Hoyt, Asa Sawyer, Lewis Allen, Isaac Elliot, Andrew Nichols, Sylvester Osborne, Jr., Benjamin Goodridge, Benjamin Wheeler, Oliver Saunders, Nathaniel J. Sawyer, Charles Martin, Eben S. Upton, Levi Preston, Jr., John W. Proctor, Daniel Osborne.

It will be seen by the above list, particularly the first twenty names, that their roll contained a goodly share of the patriotism, wealth and character of the town. Heading that list we find that fearless general, who led his company of minute men upon that memorable morning, April 19, 1775, to Lexington, where he nobly fought the enemy, having seven of his own men killed and as many more wounded in the conflict. Following him on the role we find all the different trades and occupations represented by men of sterling integrity and worth. The record of the first meeting for organization is as follows:

At a meeting of the Fire Club in Danvers, November 26, 1804.

Voted, Gideon Foster, Moderator.

Voted, Richard Osborne, Clerk.

Voted, George G. Smith, Gideon Foster and Joseph Osborne a committee to draft rules and regulations for the future government of said club.

Voted, That this club shall be known by the name of the Columbian Fire Club.

Voted, That twenty-five cents be assessed on each member to defray the present expenses.

Voted, To make choice of a committee of three members, to procure buckets and have them painted, and that Sylvester Osborne, Fitch Poole and Henry Saunders be the committee.

Voted, That this meeting be adjourned to the third day of December.

At the adjournment of the Columbian Fire Club, December 3d, 1804, it was voted to accept the articles presented by the committee on rules and regulations. They also voted that the clerk be a committee to procure the articles and the ladder. Voted, That twenty-five cents be assessed on each member.

It was voted that, as a number of persons have been mentioned as desirous of joining this club, that Major Eben Shillaber, David Daniels and Stephen Low be a committee to admit such persons as they may think proper, before the January meeting, not exceeding seven in number.

Voted, That Major Eben Shillaber, David Daniels and Stephen Low be a committee to procure the bags for the club, and have them marked.

The organization of the club was completed and the members settled down to meet the stern realities of a fireman's life. At the annual meeting held January 7th, 1805, at the house of Mr. Richard Kimball, Gideon Foster was re-elected moderator and Richard Osborne clerk, and the following appears on the records:

Voted, That the watch word be "Relief."

Paid Richard Kimball for supper $15, also paid Mr. Kimball for spirits and room $4.00.

Voted, That the supper at the future annual meetings shall be on the table precisely at eight o'clock.

Voted, That $5.00 be assessed on each member to defray the expenses of the club.

It will be seen by their record that at the annual meeting the annual supper was eaten and well washed down. At the annual meeting January 6th, 1806, Richard Kimball was paid $24.00 for the club's supper. At this meeting Richard Smith was fined twenty-five cents for neglecting his book; also fifty cents for not giving the watch word. At the next annual meeting George Southwick furnished the supper at an expense of $19.00 to the club. At the annual meeting the watch word

THE BOSTON & MAINE RAILROAD SWEARS

SIX THOUSAND, SIX HUNDRED AND NINETY-SIX (6696) represents the exact number of cases of Rubber Goods received by us so far for this season's trade in our Wholesale and Retail Departments, as sworn to by the Freight Agent of the Boston and Maine R. R. Co., over whose line our goods are delivered. And this immense quantity—more than all the retail boot and shoe stores in Lynn, combined, could use in five years' time—is but a fraction of what we shall need to meet the demands of our Wholesale and Retail trade this present season.

Sworn Statement of the Boston & Maine R. R. Co.

COMMONWEALTH OF MASSACHUSETTS, ESSEX, ss.

I, F. A. Barnard, Boston & Maine R. R. Co.'s Freight Agent, on oath do depose and say that I have delivered over this road six thousand six hundred and ninety-six cases of rubber goods to Wellman Osborne on this season's trade.

F. A. BARNARD, Freight Agent B. & M. R. R. Co.

Subscribed and sworn to before me this fourteenth day of December, A. D. 1885.

THOMAS B. KNIGHT, Justice of the Peace.

IS IT POSSIBLE

That the other dealers, obliged to buy from the jobbers and pay the jobbers' profits, and weighed down by high rents, can compete with the only dealer in Lynn who buys everything direct from the manufacturers, has but one rent to pay—three of his four stores being on his own premises—and who is the only Lynn dealer using rubbers in quantities large enough to enable him to deal directly with the rubber companies and avail himself of the large discounts they offer to jobbers?

IT IS IMPOSSIBLE!

Remember that where others make bare assertions, unsupported by any testimony or anything worthy to be called the shadow of a fact, we give the sworn statement of the Boston & Maine R. R. Co., and can produce, if necessary, all of our way bills to silence the doubts of the most incredulous.

WE CHALLENGE

Any other Lynn dealer, be he retailer or self-styled wholesaler, on forfeit of $1000, to produce absolute proof that he has at present received one-fifth as many rubber goods as we have, the proceeds to be given to the LYNN CITY HOSPITAL. Here is a glorious opportunity to benefit the most deserving institution in the city. We make the offer in good faith, and give the talkers a chance to show the courage of their conviction by accepting the challenge, or

FOREVER AFTER HOLD THEIR PEACE.

REMEMBER

That in the past we have had undisputed possession of the field, and when we say that no other dealer can offer the inducements we do, we do not speak idle words, but are backed up by a record in the past unequalled by any, and a stock in the present inexhaustible in quantity and variety, and of the best makes in the country. We are splendidly equipped to beat our record, of former triumphs.

When the First Snow Flies,

No matter what price others offer, we, as a matter of course,

ALWAYS BEAT THEM.

WE ARE SELLING

Best Makes.	Our Prices.	Others' Prices
Men's Dull Finish Boots,	$2.25	$2,85
Men's Pure Gum Boots,	2.75	3.50
Boys' Dull Finish Boots,	1.75	2.25
Men's Buckle Arctics,	1.20	1.60
Women's Buckle Arctics,	.85	1.15
Men's S. A. Alaskas, Fleece Lined,	.85	1.10

Men's Imitation Sandals,	.45	.60
Women's Imitation Sandals,	.30	.40
Misses' Imitation Sandals,	.25	.35

The above prices are absolutely as low as the other dealers can buy the same for from the jobbers and we are giving the people the benefit of wholesale prices.

Now for those who wish for cheaper rubbers and serviceable ones, we have in jobs and drives of perfect and slightly blemished goods, the following:

CRUSHERS OF HIGH PRICES!

Men's Prime Rubber Boots, perfect,		$1.65	Men's Imitation Sandals, perfect,		33c
Boys' Prime Rubber Boots,	"	1.45	Women's Imitation Sandals,	"	21c
Youths' Prime Rubber Boots,	"	1.10	Men's Buckle Arctics,	"	85c
Misses' Prime Rubber Boots,	"	.85

It must be borne in mind that these slightly imperfect rubbers are not to be confounded with the Tar rubbers with which the market is flooded, and which are made expressly as cheap rubbers out of old rubber ground up, and barely held together with a liberal mixture of cold tar. These rubbers are made by the best companies in the country, out of good stock, and for service, but in the process of manufacture have been subject to some slight blemish which does not affect their wear in the least. They are as much better than the afore-mentioned Tar rubbers as a fine beaver overcoat, with a slight imperfection hardly noticeable, is better than a shoddy coat made up of ground-up material.

NO JEW RACKETS HERE.

When we advertise prices, we abide by them, and do not have to say to every customer, "Out of your size, "Have some next week," etc. We do not do business that way. We have just what we advertise, and in abundance, and customers do not leave our stores dissatisfied, nor feel obliged to buy a higher priced article if they do not wish it.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,

Editors and Publishers

WE ARE glad that the appropriation for police was carried with so little opposition. The amount is none too large. We believe, as we have said, in the enforcement of law—all laws, and while we think the work of enforcing the liquor law will be easy this year, the town should have as many, and even more officers than at the present time.

At the same time we are in sympathy with the motion made in the town meeting that the officers be selected from the list of elected constables. We do not say this on account of the work of any particular officer, but because of the principle involved. We recognize, also, the right of the Selectmen to make these appointments, but when twenty-three constables are chosen by the town, it would seem as if our Board could select from that number the regular police. The wishes of the voters in town ought to be respected in this matter, and when an officer who has been on the police force, and a known applicant for the position again, is not elected constable, the Selectmen ought certainly to consider the matter carefully before violating the expressed desires of the voters of the town.

We do not say this because of a particular case, or because of the late appointments, entirely. It is not a new thing. It has been done before a number of times, and it has always merited and received deserved censure in many quarters. We have nothing personally to say against any of the appointments. They may be good police officers, and we think they are. But that is not the point. It is whether or not the citizens of the town have any rights which our Board of Selectmen are bound to respect.

Mr. William H. Hall, one of our well known and respected citizens, died at his home on Lowell street last Monday morning of congestion of the lungs. He was about 43 years of age and leaves a wife and one daughter to mourn his decease. Mr. Hall had a good war record. He enlisted in Company A. 50, Reg. Mass. Vols., in Sept. '62, and was mustered out in Aug. '63. He re-enlisted in Company C50th Regiment in July, '64, and was mustered out Nov., '64. He was a prominent Mason, a member of Aamity Lodge and a Knight Templar. He was also a member of Union Post 50, G. A. R. He held the respect of the entire community and all extend sympathy to the bereaved family. His funeral will take place to-morrow afternoon at 2.30 o'clock.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the South Church at its semi-annual election last Thursday evening chose the following officers:—President, Arthur F. Poole; Vice Pres., Frances M. Henshaw; Sec., Annie S. Thorndike; Treas., Horace K. Foster; Lookout Committee, J. K. Cole, Augusta S. Wilson, Fannie W. Osborne, Daniel A. Goodrich, Hattie S. Thatcher; Prayer Meeting Committee, Peter J. Frye, Louise E. Osborne, Anna R. Thatcher, Mary E. Poole, Nathan Poor; Social Committee, Nellie T. Allen, Eliza E. Jacobs, Grace M. Stevens, Mrs. Peter Frye, Bena E. Raymond; Flower Committee, Annie W. Poole, Lucy M. Osborne, Helen E. Brown, Mary H. Poole.

Angus Morrison, who formerly worked at Dole & Osgood's, is now located in Colorado and wants to get home.

Adjourned Town Meeting.

The adjourned town meeting last Monday evening was the liveliest we have had for years, not so much on account of the magnitude of the questions involved, or the discussion of them, as from the fact that the time of the meeting was an innovation upon the custom of the town. It was known that the movement in favor of the evening session was to give the laboring men an opportunity to participate in the doings without being compelled to leave their work, and those who had anticipated a large gathering of voters were not disappointed. The Selectmen had wisely decided to hold the meeting in the large hall, which was well heated and comfortable.

Shortly after seven, the moderator, Sidney C. Bancroft, Esq., called the meeting to order, and the first man on his feet to address the chair was Chas. A. Weare. Mr. Weare stated that he was not present at the previous meeting, and was not acquainted with the arguments presented in favor of departing from the ancient custom of the town in holding the adjourned meeting in the evening. He therefore moved that when this meeting adjourn, this evening, if the business be not completed, it adjourn to meet Tuesday morning at 9 o'clock. This brought the advocates and opponents of the evening meetings directly in opposition, and the fun began at once. The moderator declared Mr. Weare's motion defeated; the vote was doubted and a show of hands was called for by the moderator; the motion was declared lost by 156 to 232. Mr. Clark called for a division of the house, and the moderator stated that if any considerable number of voters thought there might be persons voting who were not entitled to vote, he should consider it his duty to divide the house. This course was insisted on, and the moderator proceeded to divide the house, those present who wished to vote in the affirmative passing to one side of the hall, and those wishing to vote in the negative to the other. Each side then passed in front of the chair and were counted, giving any voter an opportunity to challenge the vote of any person whose right to vote was doubted. The Selectmen took seats on the stage with the check lists; one vote was challenged but the gentleman's name was found on the check list, the announcement being received with deafening applause. The result of the division of the house was announced to be 224 in the affirmative and 270 in the negative, and Mr. Weare's motion was declared lost.

A motion was then made that when this meeting adjourn it be to meet at 7 o'clock Tuesday evening, which was carried. Mr. Weare then moved to adjourn this meeting at 9.45; an amendment was proposed making it 10, and both were voted down, and the meeting voted to adjourn at 11 o'clock P. M.

The moderator then stated that an error arose at the counting of the vote for constable; and the town clerk explained how the error was brought about. That the tellers in transferring the votes to the paper containing the summary, had given James H. Crowley votes belonging to Timothy D. Crowley, and the moderator declared that Timothy D. Crowley was elected.

The following persons were elected to fill the vacancies; Pound Keeper, Geo. A. Needham; Fence Viewer, A. L. Ames; Surveyor of lumber, E. B. Balcom; Field Drivers, John Motley, Peter Larkin. William R. Fifield resigned as constable, and the moderator declared that a ballot was necessary. A motion was made to re-consider the vote of the previous meeting, whereby the town voted to elect 23 constables. This was carried, and the town voted to make 22 constables the number elected, and there was then no vacancy. Dr. Pike resigned as member of the Board of Health, and it was voted to elect a member of that Board to fill the vacancy, Tuesday evening.

The report of the committee relating to the culvert of Strong Water Brook was then read. The report is as follows:

The committee to which was referred the subject matter in relation to the culvert over Strong Water Brook, on the private way leading from Main street to the Harris tannery, have considered the matter and taken legal advice concerning the same; and while they do not feel justified to recommend that the town perform the work of enlarging a culvert on private premises, nor willing to admit the liability of the town for damages that might accrue in case the culvert is not enlarged, yet in consideration of the fact that the town, by enlarging the bridge across Main street, has increased the rapidity of the flow of water through these private premises, thus in a measure necessitating the enlargement of this culvert, we would suggest, whether as a matter of fair dealing, it would not be advisable for the town to bear some portion of the expense necessary to be incurred to facilitate the flow of water through these premises; and in order to bring the matter before the town for consideration, we recommend that the sum of $125 be appropriated for the purpose of enlarging said culvert, to be paid to the parties interested, whenever they shall have so enlarged the same.

(Signed) Board of Selectmen.

This report was accepted and $125 was appropriated, 216 voting in the affirmative.

The report of the committee to whom was referred article 36, relating to the laying of a drain pipe through Harris street, was read. The report stated that in order to carry off the surface water it is not necessary to lay a drain pipe through that street, however convenient it might be for the owners of property on the street to empty their sewage into; but think that, at a small expense, the drainage might be very much improved by raising the sidewalk and taking down the grade of the gutter in other places. They therefore recommended that $75 be appropriated, and this report was accepted, 283 voting in the affirmative.

The committee to whom was referred the 37th article, relating to the rebuilding of the bridge which crosses Lynn street near County street, and grading the sidewalk on the northerly side of Lynn street, reported that they had examined the bridge and found it somewhat out of repair; and consider it incapable of carrying off the water which should flow through it at certain seasons of the year; they therefore recommend that the same be rebuilt, and if possible laid lower than it now is; and that a sum not exceeding $150 be appropriated. In regard to the sidewalk, they think it needs grading, but do not consider it expedient to recommend a special appropriation for this purpose, but would recommend that so much money as may be needed to put the sidewalk in good condition be taken from the appropriation for sidewalks and edgestones. This report was accepted and $150 appropriated, 164 voting in the affirmative.

The report of the committee relating to a drain on Washington street, to carry off the water that flows from Dustin street, was read. The committee recommended the laying of an 18 inch pipe on the northerly side of Washington street from the terminus of the stone culvert on Foster street, to a point opposite Dustin street, also an intersecting pipe running across Washington street to Dustin street, and that $300 be appropriated. This report was accepted, 114 voting in the affirmative.

The report of the committee to whom was referred article 38, relating to the construction of a covered drain on Washington street, to carry away the drainage of Sherman, Hancock and Dalton streets, recommended that instead of a covered drain the gutter from near Dalton street to the entrance of the covered drain near Sherman street be properly graded and paved; and that edge stones be placed on the side of the gutter so far as it may be necessary for the proper construction of the same, and that $200 be recommended for that purpose. This report was accepted, 143 voting in the affirmative.

The report of the committee to whom was referred article 30 and 31, regarding water pipes in Center Street Court and Maple Hill, was read by D. S. Littlefield. It recommended that the matter be referred to the water board, and that no further action of the town is necessary.

The committee on the Automatic Fire Alarm then reported that they were unanimous in recommending that the town adopt the system known as the "Gamewell Automatic Fire Alarm;" and appropriate a sum not exceeding $3500 for the purpose.

Mr. S. F. Blaney, of the committee, said that he was added to the original committee with Mr. Farley, and they did not profess to be a committee of experts, but did the best they could in examining the different systems of fire alarm. They adopted the Gamewell system on general principles; it is reliable and furnishes to every property holder the means of locating a fire. It cheapens the insurance and saves the first five or ten minutes, which is the most valuable. Mr. Blaney instanced the large number of places where the system was in use, and in process of construction, and said that it had never been taken out. He referred to a report of a special committee of the town of Brookfield, substantiating all that had been said in reference to this system. He had made inquiries regarding other systems but had found no encouragement; they are not reliable. It seems to be generally admitted that the Gamewell system is the best and the only one, if we are to have any. Some six years ago the town put in high service water; since that time the water board and fire department had been on the most intimate terms. He had labored with the ex-chief and the present chief to provide some way by which the pumping station could be notified in case of fire, so that six or seven pounds extra pressure could be applied. The disposition of the engineers was good, but their attention was so engrossed, and other necessities of so much importance that it was not done. There had been cases where, had it not been for himself, the engineer at the pumping station would not have been notified. It was now proposed that every alarm should be known at the pumping station, and the town served to the fullest capacity. This would relieve the officers of any responsibility. It can be introduced to a limited extent for less money than the committee recommend, but they desired to have the matter fully canvassed, and requested the Gamewell managers to give an estimate of the outside amount which would fully equip the town, and they told this committee, finally, if the town would authorize a responsible committee and appropriate $3500, they would guarantee a perfect system of fire alarm. It was the intention to cover almost the entire territory. They would have a box at West Peabody, at the Poor House, at Pike & Whipple's, at Elm street, in Dublin near the school house, at Poole's Hollow, at the Monument, the Square, on Foster street, in the "Kingdom," — some seventeen boxes, and cover about sixteen miles of wire with a whistle on the pumping station, and a striker on one of the town bells. Mr. Blaney said the committee had asked Mr. Stover, of the Gamewell system, to be present, and he was ready to answer any question desired.

Mr. Stover did not wish to take up the town's time—thought the matter was pretty well covered by Mr. Blaney. He referred to the fact that this system was no experiment, and was continuing his remarks in a very gentlemanly manner, when Mr. Edgar Upton objected to his continuing.

Mr. Franklin Osborne desired to know about the cost of maintainance. Mr. Stover said it ought not to cost over $100 or $125 a year, including batteries.

George O. Peirce desired to know just what arrangements had been made. Mr. Tibbetts said it was proposed to have 17 miles of wire, 17 boxes, including two indicators, one gong on the chief's house, one whistle and one striker.

Mr. Peirce said that some years ago an attempt was made to introduce this system, and it was understood that indicators were to be placed in all the houses.

Mr. Blaney said he had given this matter his best labor, and had tried to cover the whole town at the most reasonable price that could be obtained. If there was anything he had not found out about this business, he wanted it brought out, and let us have enough appropriated to do it well, or drop it.

Mr. Peirce said he wanted to act understandingly in the matter. If we are going to start, he wanted to start right. He thought more had been offered the town at a previous time—and for less money.

Mr. Tibbetts denied this, and Mr. Peirce appealed to Mr. Reed who did not respond, and calls for "question" were heard. The vote was then taken and the report of the committee was accepted by a vote of 270 in the affirmative and 12 in the negative.

Mr. Peirce moved that a committee of five be appointed by the chair to carry out the recommendations of the committee.

Mr. Upton amended by moving that a committee of five be appointed to nominate a committee of five, to carry out the vote. This was carried and the chair said he would appoint the committee during the evening.

The committee to whom was referred the matter of alterations in the Central Fire Station reported as follows:

The committee have made a complete examination of the premises and find the condition of the stables at the Central Station to be such as to require a change. The stalls, as at present arranged, are inconvenient, both for general use and for fire service. The horses stand with their backs to the apparatus rooms, and the stable room being limited, there is great confusion and delay when the horses are turned into the floor at once. A new floor is absolutely needed, as it is now in a dangerous condition the floor timbers being partially decayed. This should be attended to at once, and your committee would recommend that the necessary repairs and proposed alterations be made at the same time, and to carry out the same the committee would recommend that $880 be appropriated, and the Board of Engineers be a committee to take charge of the work.

This report was accepted by a vote of 179 in the affirmative and 4 in the negative.

The report of the trustees of the Peabody Institute was then accepted.

The report of the Finance Committee was then read by the chairman, C. Warren Osborn, Esq.

Mr. Spaulding moved that article 40th of the warrant, referred to the finance committee, be considered first. The report was as follows: This was agreed to and Mr. Spaulding said that we could not make bricks of straw. He had seen the lady owning the lot and she would sell it for $650, and will not sell it for less. The town might as well vote no cemetery as to vote that the land be purchased for $500. The land would cost $650, and it would cost $350 to fence and grade it. He would move to amend the report of the committee by making the appropriation $1000. It was useless to argue the need of a cemetery at this late day.

Jonathan King had been acquainted with that portion of the town for years. The recommendations of the finance committee were wise, and sufficient. They did not need more than two acres. The town is not in a condition to purchase woodland. There had been few deaths there. The speaker had been longer acquainted with that territory than Mr. Spaulding.

Mr. Spaulding said he would not ask for $1000 if a less sum seemed available. It cost $300 to purchase a gate for Cedar Grove—they only asked $50. It cost $500 for a right of way to Cedar Grove—they asked nothing. It cost $1200 to build a road to Cedar Grove; $250 to fence one side, and $500 to survey a few acres. It cost $1000 to make a few avenues there—they only asked 20. It cost $900 for a hearse which had not been seen three times in West Peabody. It cost hundreds of dollars to create a forest in Cedar Grove—they only asked that the forest in West Peabody be allowed to remain. The speaker then advanced the same arguments used before the committee, and which were published in the PRESS last week. He closed by repeating that they should have no cemetery if only $500 was appropriated.

Mr. C. W. Osborn said the finance committee agreed with Mr. Spaulding that there should be a cemetery in West Peabody. He stated that a hearing had been given and there was no opposition. Mr. Spaulding was present and gave the figures as $250 over and above the cost of the land. Some of the committee had visited the lot, and were satisfied that it was poor land and not fit for cultivation.

J. Fred Ingraham said he lived in West Peabody, and had the honor to be one of the signers to the petition. He thought the people of West Peabody thought as much of their dead as in other parts of the town. He could not understand why Mr. King should oppose giving the West Peabody people a burial ground, nor why he should wish to skip it down to a 7x9 piece.

Mr. King said he had not opposed the cemetery, and the remarks of Mr. Spaulding regarding the expense of Cedar Grove were no argument in favor of the necessity of one in West Peabody. If we had made one mistake let us not make another. He was in favor of a cemetery in West Peabody, but there were some private burial grounds there whose owners would never allow their dead to be removed. This he knew. He thought the amount recommended by the finance committee sufficient.

S. F. Blaney had visited the land; at first he thought it was not a very good lot, but after he had looked about, he had no idea that it was so hard to find a place elsewhere. He thought the town could not do better than to secure it.

Mr. W. P. Clark desired to know if a portion of the land could be purchased. Mr. Spaulding replied that he did not think it could.

Mr. D. S. Littlefield said that he had visited the place, as a member of the finance committee. He had no doubt that the piece of land could be purchased for the amount recommended by the committee.

Mr. Spaulding's amendment, by substituting $1000 for $750, as the appropriation, was accepted.

Mr. Spaulding moved that these names be substituted for the names recommended by the committee: B. H. Taylor, Elbridge Mansfield, David G. Upton, John Hackett, William E. Sheen, Thos. C. Durkee, Willard Spaulding, and that they carry out the provisions of the vote. This was agreed to.

On motion of Frank E. Farnham article 15, relating to the appropriation for a day and night police, was considered.

W. J. McCarthy moved an amendment to the report of the committee that the Selectmen be instructed to employ as police officers only such men as were elected constables by the town.

Mr. Farnham hoped the motion would not prevail. It was intended to cut off the services of some of the most valuable officers.

Mr. Osborn said the finance committee had considered all this; he thought the Selectmen ought to have the chance to appoint the best men, and not be hampered by any vote.

Mr. McCarthy's amendment was declared lost by a vote of 150 yeas, 192 nays. A division of the house was called for, and a repetition of the early evening proceedings followed. By the division of the house, Mr. McCarthy's amendment was lost by a vote of 126 to 161.

Mr. Lyons then rose to speak and did not see any reason why the night police should not have as much pay as the day force. Some discussion then arose as to the pay of the police, and how much it would amount to, in the midst of which Mr. Upton, prompted by a would-be legal gentleman, raised several points of order, and made several motions which were declared out of order by the moderator. Finally, the moderator told the gentleman that while he had sometimes, in the exercise of his power as moderator, advised with the town, when some important measure was at stake, he did not consider it his duty to do so on a question of parliamentary law. He should decide that Mr. Upton was out of order, and that there could be no appeal from the decision of the chair.

C. WARREN OSBORN.

Mr. Lyons then continued (it being but a few minutes before 11 P. M.) and moved that the pay of the night police be $800.

Mr. Farnham said if the motion of Mr. Lyons was made in sincerity, he certainly should vote for it.

Mr. Lyons' amendment was carried, and the recommendation of the committee—$6500—was appropriated for police.

Mr. Upton moved to reconsider, and it was lost. This prevents any future motion to reconsider. At 11 P. M. the meeting adjourned.

TUESDAY EVENING.

The meeting was called to order by the Moderator and the consideration of the report of the Finance Committee was proceeded with. Article 9 recommendation was adopted, viz:

Article 9. To determine what sum of money shall be raised by taxation for the usual and necessary expenses of the town, when it shall be paid into the treasury, and the rate of interest to be charged on delinquent taxes.

It is advised that the town raise by taxation the sum of ninety-five thousand dollars, together with such sums as may be required to pay the state and county taxes for the present year; and also whatever appropriations may be made at the adjourned meeting to be held on the 22 inst., beyond the appropriations recommended in this report and that it be raised and paid into the treasury as follows: all taxes shall be due NET CASH on the 12th day of October, 1886, and on all taxes not paid on or before that day, interest shall be charged from that date until paid, at the rate of six per cent. per annum; and it shall be the duty of the collector to issue his summons to all persons whose taxes remain unpaid on the first day of January, 1887, requiring immediate payment of same with interest due thereon, together with twenty cents for such summons, and in all cases where persons duly summoned by him shall neglect to pay within thirty days, he shall enforce payment according to law, in such cases made and provided.

Article 11 was adopted:

Article 11. To appropriate money for the payment of state aid to soldiers and their families.

It is recommended that the treasurer be authorized to hire money for the payment of state aid.

It was then moved that article 42 be taken up. The report of the committee regarding this matter was viz:

Article 42. To see if the town will appropriate money for the purchase of land, a hose carriage and hose, and for building a hose house, the same to be located in that part of the town known as "Dublin," agreeably to the petition of Newman Perkins and others.

The committee recommend that the matter be referred to a special committee to investigate the matter further, and report to the town at some future time.

It was moved that the special committee be appointed by the chair and consist of five, and that they report at some future time. This was amended that the committee be nominated from the floor, but after some difficulty in obtaining nominations, it was reconsidered and a committee of three was appointed by the chair to retire and nominate a committee of five. They consisted of W. P. Clark, H. P. Reed, Thomas Carroll. The chair also announced the committee of five to nominate a committee of five to carry out the vote of the town regarding an Automatic Fire Alarm. This committee was E. W. Upton, Thos. F. Lyons, S. F. Blaney, George O. Peirce, John F. Morland.

Article 12 was then adopted. It was as follows:

Article 12. To determine what compensation shall be paid to town officers and firemen, the ensuing year.

It is advised that the town clerk be paid a salary of eight hundred dollars, and all fees received by him shall be paid into the treasury; to town treasurer a salary of three hundred dollars; to the treasurer of the sinking funds a salary of one hundred dollars; to the collector of taxes a salary of five hundred dollars; to the overseers of the poor, the salary of the chairman, three hundred dollars, and the salary of assistant overseers, twenty-five dollars each; selectmen and assessors, three dollars per day of labor; moderator, five dollars per day, and town officers, not otherwise provided for, two dollars and fifty cents per day, and an appropriation of four thousand five hundred dollars is recommended.

For firemen it is advised that there shall be paid to one steam fire engine company, and which shall keep up and maintain a full company of fifteen men, the sum of four hundred and fifty dollars; to the Hook and Ladder Co., which shall keep up and maintain a full company of fifteen men, the sum of four hundred and fifty dollars, and to each hose company, which shall keep up and maintain a full company of twelve men, there shall be paid the sum of three hundred and sixty dollars, and poll taxes paid by firemen shall be refunded, and also those for the year 1885. The chief engineer shall be paid seventy-five dollars, and each assistant engineer, forty dollars per year.

The engineers shall be required to see that all the companies keep up the full number of active men, and no company shall be entitled to the sum named unless it shall have fulfilled the required duties to the satisfaction of the board of engineers, and for any deficiency in the number of men, proportionate deduction shall be made.

For lights and fuel for Hose Companies Nos. 2, 3, 4 and 5, two hundred dollars.

For general expenses of fire department the committee recommend an appropriation of sixty-eight hundred dollars.

For hydrants they advise an appropriation of five hundred dollars, and for hose, eight hundred dollars.

Article 13 was then carried.

Article 13. To determine the manner of repairing the highways, and the amount of money to be appropriated therefor.

It is advised that wards 1, 2, 3, 8, 9, be placed under the charge of H. A. Besse, as surveyor, and who shall give his personal attention to the same and devote his entire time and service during the year to the duties of his office, and who shall have the horses belonging to the town and the apparatus for the repair of roads under his charge, and see that one pair of the horses are kept within one-third of a mile of the steam fire engines, and the others within convenient distance of same, for use in case of fire, and that he be paid a salary of one thousand dollars per year; and they also advise the appointment of James B. Newhall as surveyor of ward 4, and John G. Walcott surveyor of wards 5, 6, 7, 10, 11, 12 and 13, and that these surveyors receive the same pay per day when employed, as is allowed Mr. Besse.

It is advised that nine thousand dollars be appropriated for the repairs of highways and bridges, to be apportioned to the several wards by the selectmen and they also recommend for edgestones and sidewalks an appropriation of one thousand dollars.

It was also voted, on motion of Mr. McCarthy, that nine hours constitute a day's work for the laboring men on the roads on Saturday. It was also voted that citizens and tax payers shall be preferred by the town in giving employment on the roads. Mr. McCarthy then moved that the pay of the day laborers on the road be $2.00 per day.

Mr. Osborn said he had been on the finance committee off and on, for many years, and if the town would, as a whole, adopt the recommendations of these committees, they would make no mistake. The town had already added some $6000 to the recommendations of the committee. It is not the rich man, but the man of moderate means who would feel this increase most.

Mr. Spaulding had been on the finance committee off and on for many years. That is, he had been one year on and all the rest off. He was in favor of $2.00 a day because he thought the men earned it. The shoveler loses often one day in six on account of the weather. Many other people receive pay for every day whether they work or not. The laborer gets pay for his living work. Many of these laborers have families to support.

Mr. Lyons said that this question of an increase in the pay of the workingmen on the roads was a difficult one. What is to become of the old men? He favored an increase of ten per cent.

Mr. Quinlan thought the laboring man worked harder than the Moderator or Selectmen, and $2.00 a day was not unreasonable or unjust.

Mr. Upton desired the matter left with the Selectmen, that if the men were worth $2.00 they should be paid that amount. Mr. Spaulding did not think it proper that the laboring man or the road surveyor should be in charge of the Selectmen.

Mr. Upton's motion was lost, and it was voted that the men be paid $2.00 per diem. It was moved to reconsider and lost, that it might be settled once for all.

The nominating committee reported the following to carry out the wishes of the town on an automatic fire alarm:—John H. Tibbetts, Horace A. Southwick, Thomas Carroll, Geo. F. Osgood, S. S. Littlefield.

It was also voted to proceed to ballot for the vacancy existing on the Board of Health, and the polls were kept open ten minutes.

Mr. O'Keefe then had the vote reconsidered whereby the town voted to refer the report of the committee on Center street court to the water board.

Mr. Lyons wished to know if the water board had decided to put the water in.

Mr. Littlefield stated that they had not, and stated the objection of the board. That it was a distance of 400 feet through a ledge and Mr. O'Keefe was the only applicant. They had tried to make arrangements with Mr. O'Keefe to have the pipes run through another piece of land, but without avail. He thought the water might be put through Center street.

Mr. O'Keefe was willing to pay 4 1-2 per cent. on the investment, and thought Mr. Littlefield had a personal spite against him.

Mr. Spaulding could see that the rules of the water board require some exceptions, and believed that the water works should be extended all that was possible.

Mr. Blaney said this was a fair matter for the consideration of the town who would have the bills to pay. Mr. O'Keefe had been extended the same privilege that every man in the town had. If the town wished for the works to be self supporting they could not consistently vote to carry out this request, but the water board would gladly carry out any appropriation the town should make. Mr. Blaney was sorry the matter was opened. There was no occasion for the personal feeling, and both the speaker and Mr. Littlefield disclaimed any spite in the matter.

Mr. W. P. Clark thought the town did wisely in referring the matter to the water board, and it was at last so referred.

The recommendation regarding the lighting of the streets was adopted, viz:

Article 14. To appropriate money for lighting the streets.

Your committee recommend that thirty-two hundred dollars be appropriated for this purpose.

Mr. Lyons moved to reconsider that part of article 12th relating to the one steamer company of fifteen men, which was agreed to; and he moved that the portion of the article read, "to two steamer companies of twelve men each the sum of $360 each.

Mr. Osborn presumed it was of no use to say anything, but he desired to state the reasons for the action of the finance committee. The change was made at the earnest advice of the chief engineer. As it is now, one engine only is called out, except in special cases; in effect one company had to respond only half the time; 24 men only serve six months. The opinion of the chief was acquiesced in by the other engineers, and they thought it better to have one company of fifteen men for both steamers. He thought the discipline would be better. Then we have chosen these engineers and we should listen to their advice and counsel. Nor should we listen to the firemen or newspapers, so much as the chief engineer.

Mr. Tibbetts said the matter had been considered and they had concluded that it was better to make one company of the two, as one company would not be called out except at the second alarm. He would not insist on fifteen men; he would make it eighteen men or even twenty; only make it one company.

Mr. Spaulding believed in the most efficient fire department. The fire alarm was a good thing, although it would not benefit West Peabody; but it was of no value without engines well manned. We have two steam engines. It is said that we have but one pair of horses; we might "on a pinch" get another pair. Who appoints the engineers? [a response, the Selectmen] The speaker would give more for the judgment of the firemen in this matter than that of any engineers appointed by this Board of Selectmen. He believed in being strong handed—with an efficient fire department and the full number of men. He did not favor the saving of the small sum of $270—in this way.

Mr. Lyons' motion to substitute was adopted, and the appropriation changed from $6800 to $7200—the sum as last year.

The following articles were then adopted in toto:

Article 17. To determine in what manner the money arising from the surplus dog fund and the town's portion of the income of the Massachusetts School Fund shall be disposed of.

It is advised that this money be appropriated as additional for the support of schools.

Article 18. To see if the town will authorize the town treasurer to hire money.

On this article your committee advise the following votes: Voted, That the town treasurer be authorized with the approval of the selectmen to hire money in anticipation of the taxes of the current year and to issue notes of the town therefor, and the debts of the town incurred under the authority of this vote, are hereby made payable from said taxes. Voted, That the town treasurer be authorized to hire money with the approval of the selectmen, to renew, replace, or pay any existing loan or loans, and to issue notes or bonds of the town therefor.

The recommendation of the committee to appropriate $500 for Cedar Grove Cemetery was then considered.

Mr. Spaulding opposed the appropriation. He told of the large expense which it cost the town to lay out this cemetery. There were two or three hundred trees which cost as many dollars. Not five of them were worth a penny. They have been sixteen years dying, and there is scarcely a road in the cemetery that is passable. There had not been perpetrated so stupendous a folly since the landing of our fathers on Plymouth Rock. There had been $1200 expended the past year on one-sixth of an acre, and it is not done yet. Lots are being sold at $70 less than the cost price to the town. They are grading the ledges at the rate of $8000 an acre. He moved that a committee of seven be appointed by the chair to examine Cedar Grove and report to the town, and that the appropriation be laid over until they report.

Mr. Osborn said the cemetery was bought in 1869. It cost a deal of money, he admitted. It was done at a time when everything was high. The place was selected by as good, reliable and public spirited men as there was. It is not easy to select ground for a cemetery. It ought not to be too near a settlement, nor too far away. The gentleman (Mr. Spaulding) had a natural likeing to talk about graveyards. Mr. Osborn then proceeded to "sail in" to Mr. Spaulding on his West Peabody graveyard business in North river, and read from the statutes concerning it. Mr. Osborn said that it had been customary to raise $500 each year.

James P. King did not intend to say a word, but no man knew the locality of Cedar Grove better than himself. He had traveled over these hills ever since he was a boy. He was one of the trustees for six years and he knew that every dollar was honestly expended.

Mr. Spaulding then gave the history of his discovery of the bones at the Alms House, and how the graveyard there was dug up and the bones used for making a road. There were paupers there who had dug up the bones of their ancestors. Much more was said. Mr. S. gave the history of moving the bones in West Peabody on the land which he had sold. He had consulted the best legal advice in the State, and was told he had a right to do as he had done. He was advised to state the matter to the Board of Selectmen, for the sake of the speech of people. He did so, and they decided that they had no jurisdiction, and further added that they would "think more favorably of it, if he (Mr. S.) had not raised such a hullabaloo about the pauper's bones."

Mr. Spaulding's motion was carried and the chair appointed the following committee: Willard Spaulding, Frank E. Farnham, Amos Merrill, Stephen Blaney, James P. King, Geo. S. Osborne, Lewis Brown.

The committee then reported the following committee on the Dublin Hose house, which was accepted: Herbert P. Reed, Geo. C. Pierce, John Linehan, Daniel Woodbury, Edward Eagan.

The vote for member of the Board of Health was then announced as follows: Whole number of votes, 121; John Ruth, 50; Chas. P. Elligott, 67; Scattering, 4.

Mr. Spaulding moved to reconsider his Cedar Grove vote, and it was lost.

The remaining articles of the committee's recommendations were then adopted without dissent, viz:

USE

HALL'S Vegetable Sicilian HAIR RENEWER.

It is a medicinal preparation, and, at the same time, an elegant and cleanly toilet article. Its action upon the scalp is healthful. It nourishes the glands which support the hair, and causes thin, dry hair to become thick, soft, and vigorous. It restores the color of youth to locks which have become faded with age or disease; and relieves and cures itching, caused by humors of the scalp. Dr. George Gray, Nashua, N. H., writes: "It gives me pleasure to testify to the wonderful effects produced by Hall's Vegetable Sicilian Hair Renewer, as observed by me in very many cases. IT WILL CERTAINLY RESTORE THE HAIR TO ITS ORIGINAL COLOR. It cleanses the head of dandruff, and leaves the hair soft, glossy, and beautiful." F. T. Sandhein, 1010 Spruce st., Philadelphia, Pa., writes: "After unavailingly trying a number of preparations to prevent my hair from falling out, and, realizing that I was fast becoming bald, I tried, as a last resort, Hall's Hair Renewer. I have used only four bottles of the Renewer, and am perfectly satisfied that it is the best preparation in the market for checking the falling out of hair, invigorating the hair roots, and promoting a new growth."

was changed from "Relief" to "Safety."

Voted, That the clerk call on Capt. Daniel King and inform him that we shall not warn him until his health will allow him to attend after his assessment is paid.

At the annual meeting January 4th, 1814, it was voted to choose a committee to purchase one sail to be used as a preventative against fire. Ward Pool, Squires Shove, E. C. Webster, James Brown and Caleb Smith were chosen said committee. I suppose this was the first time sail was used as an adjunct at fires. At the annual meeting January 2d, 1816, the watch word was again changed, this time to "Honesty." It was also voted at this meeting that two-thirds vote shall be required to adjourn meetings any time after eight o'clock. Firemen kept good hours in those days. This meeting was held at Oliver Saunders' tavern. The club always provided a suitable person to convey the Hook and Ladders to and from the fire. The watch word is again changed to "Hold." July 3d, 1819, the thanks of the club were tendered Gen. Gideon Foster for presenting lumber for making ladder boxes.

At the annual meeting January 6th, 1824, after partaking of an excellent supper at Capt. Batchelder's tavern, the following vote was passed:

Voted, That C. Smith, A. Nichols and O. Saunders be a committee to report a new watch word. After retiring for a few moments they reported the word "Keep" which was adopted.

January 4th, 1825, the club voted that a committee of three be chosen to meet a committee of the Franklin fire club (if said club think it expedient to choose such a committee) to take into consideration the expediency of forming a sail company and to take such measures as they may think proper. A. Sanger, H. Cook and L. Allen were chosen a committee January 3d, 1826. The committee chosen at the last annual meeting to confer with a committee of Franklin fire club, on the subject of procuring sails to be used at fires, report having met and recommend petitioning the town on the subject, and it was voted to accept their report.

January 1st, 1828, the club voted that Doctor Andrew Nichols be a committee to confer with the Franklin fire club and the directors of the fire engine, on the subject of the engines leaving the town. This is the first mention we have found of a fire engine in town.

It may be inferred from the following vote passed at the annual meeting of the club, January 3d, 1832, that the firemen in those days did not demean themselves exactly on the square no more than they do at the present time.

Voted, That for irregular or ungentlemanly conduct, any member duly notified of the charges against him, shall be liable to expulsion by the unanimous vote of the club.

At this meeting the following officers were elected for the year:—For President, Sylvester Osborne, Jr.; Clerk, Daniel Osborne; Prudential Committee, Andrew Nichols, Henry Cook and Benjamin Goodridge. At the annual meeting January 1st, 1833, held at Chapman's tavern, the same officers were re-elected for the current year. Here the record closes.

Their forms of notification were as follows, and I copy one that is before me:

COLUMBIAN FIRE CLUB.

Mr. Daniel Osborn,

THE COLUMBIAN FIRE CLUB will meet at Chapman's Tavern on Tuesday evening next, at 6 o'clock.

Per order
EBEN SUTTON, Clerk.

Danvers, January 22, 1832.
Candidates.
Removal. Thomas Morland 2d house from the Tavern on the new road.
Due.

Here endeth our account of the Columbian Fire Club, an organization that had enrolled upon its list of members more of the solid men of the town than any other similar institution that ever had an existence here. Of all the names registered upon its roll, only one we believe is alive to-day, Lewis Allen, Esq. The others have all been gathered one by one into a closer companionship in that silent land, where sorrow is not known, and friends are never parted.

The buckets were made of leather painted green. The device—an Indian Chief in full war dress with paint and feathers in profusion. Above his head is a white scroll with the word "Columbian" lettered in it. Beneath his feet is another white scroll with the owner's name on it. It would appear that Red Men existed in town in those days as well as at the present time. The following were their By-Laws and they make quite interesting reading:—

WHEREAS many important advantages have reſulted from the inſtitution of FIRE CLUBS, by affording reliefand ſecurity to the perſons and property of each other when in danger by fire, and by promoting harmony and good fellowſhip among the members of ſuch aſſociations—We, the ſubſcribers, agree to form ourſelves into a company, by the name of the COLUMBIAN FIRE CLUB; and for the good order of the same, do aſſent to and adopt the following articles, viz:

ARTICLE I.

THE number of members ſhall not exceed thirty.

ARTICLE II.

Each member ſhall procure two ſuitable leathern Buckets, painted with the device of the Club. In one of the buckets ſhall be kept a bag, made of Ruſſia ſheeting, capable of containing three buſhels, marked with the owner's name; all which ſhall be kept in ſome convenient and conſpicuous part of his dwelling.—Penalty for each and every neglect, 25 cents.

ARTICLE III.

Two Ladders, one of 30 feet in length, and one of 25 feet ſhall be procured by the Club for their excluſive benefit, painted and marked with the name of the Club, and conſtantly kept in ſuch places as they ſhall direct.—Penalty for lending or removing them, 2 dollars.

ARTICLE IV.

On notice of Fire, each member ſhall immediately repair, with his buckets and bag, to the dwelling, ſtore or ſhop of the member he apprehends to be moſt in danger, and afford him every aſſiſtance the occaſion may require, agreeably to his directions, if preſent; and, in caſe of the removal of his effects, ſhall aſſiſt in returning them to him again, free of expense:—On failure of any part of which he shall forfeit 2 dollars.

ARTICLE V.

A Moderator ſhall be choſen for the year, at the meeting in January, who ſhall be empowered to direct the Clerk to warn a ſpecial meeting, as occaſion may require; and who ſhall be addreſſed by each member who has anything to offer to the conſideration of the Club; and in caſe of his absence from any meeting, a Moderator, pro tempore, ſhall be choſen.

ARTICLE VI.

A Clerk ſhall be annually choſen, by ballot, at the January meeting, who ſhall be holden to ſerve until another is choſen in his ſtead, and ſhall be allowed and paid from the ſtock 5 dollars per annum for his ſervices.

ARTICLE VII.

The buſineſs of the Clerk ſhall be, to warn each member to attend every meeting, one day at leaſt previous thereto, by leaving a printed ticket at his dwelling, on the back of which ſhall be noted the ſum ſuch members may owe to the Club, the names of the candidates, and the removal of any member from his uſual place of abode, ſtore or ſhop; at which time he ſhall obſerve the condition of his buckets and bag, and of the ladders belonging to the Club; to keep a fair journal of the votes and tranſactions of the Club, to be produced at each meeting, ſubfect to the inſpection and peruſal of each member; to collect fines and aſſeſſments, and to make payments: and, in caſe of his neceſſary abſence, to engage ſome other member to ſerve in his ſtead:—For each and every neglect, to be fined at the diſcretion of the Club, not exceeding 2 dollars.

ARTICLE VIII.

At the expiration of the annual meeting in January the Clerk ſhall deliver all the books, paper and ſtock to his ſucceſſor in that office—On penalty of 2 dollars.

ARTICLE IX.

Any member, changing his place of abode, ſtore or ſthop, ſhall notify the Clerk thereof, two days at leaſt before the next ſtated meeting—On penalty of 50 cents.

ARTICLE X.

If any member loſe his buckets or bag at a fire, and notify the Clerk within ten days, the ſame ſhall be replaced at the Club's expenſe, their loſs having been previouſly notified in writing by poſting up advertiſements at two public places.

ARTICLE XI.

The Club ſhall have a watch-word, to be altered at their pleaſure:—If any member be not able to give it, when demanded by the Clerk, he ſhall forfeit 50 cents; if he divulge it, he ſhall forfeit 1 dollar.

ARTICLE XII.

The Club ſhall meet four times in a year, viz. on the firſt Monday of January, at ſix, of April and October at ſeven, and of July at eight, o'clock, P. M. at ſuch places as the Moderator ſhall appoint.

ARTICLE XIII.

The roll ſhall be firſt called half an hour after the time of meeting, and again at nine o'clock (January meeting excepted):—Any member, who ſhall have been duly warned, being abſent at firſt roll-call, ſhall forfeit 12½ cents; if abſent at both roll-calls, 25 cents.

ARTICLE XIV.

If any member ſhall retire from a meeting, without leave firſt obtained from the Moderator, he ſhall forfeit 25 cents.

ARTICLE XV.

No member ſhall be admitted but by ballot, and by unanimous conſent of the Club, at a ſtated meeting, having been propoſed as a candidate one quarter of a year at leaſt previous to ſaid meeting; and no vote ſhall be conſidered as valid if paſſed within one half hour after the time of meeting.

ARTICLE XVI.

No candidate, if once rejected, ſhall be balloted for again the ſame evening, nor at any future meeting, unleſs as many members are preſent as were at the time he was rejected.

ARTICLE XVII.

Each member ſhall keep a printed copy of theſe articles, and produce them as each quarterly meeting. Penalty for neglect, 25 cents.

ARTICLE XVIII.

Each member on admiſſion ſhall pay to

FORTY-EIGHTH VOLUME

THE NEW YORK

SUNDAY MERCURY.

Unprecedented Attractions for 1886.

In addition to Wilkie Collins' great serial (just commence and back numbers of which can be furnished to all new subscribers who desire it), arrangements have been made for

A New Novel by Mrs. Oliphant,

to be commenced in April, as well as

A Brilliant Romance by William Black,

to follow in the month of July, together with

Another Sterling Story by Miss Braddon.

And, besides the works of these distinguished authors on the other side of the Atlantic, new stories have been secured from the following noted American writers:

FRANCIS HODGSON BURNETT,
FRANK R. STOCKTON,
CHARLES EGBERT CRADDOCK,
J. T. TROWBRIDGE,
EDWARD EVERETT HALE,
JOEL CHANDLER HARRIS,
ELIZABETH STUART PHELPS,
HARRIET PRESCOTT SPOFFORD,
SIDNEY LUSKA-

and others of distinguished fame, making altogether an unprecedented combination of talent unequaled by any of the leading magazines of the metropolis,

MUCH ADO,

By FRANCIS HODGSON BURNETT,

Author of "That Lass O' Lowries'" "Through One Administration," "A Fair Barbarian," etc., etc.

In presenting these superior attractions, the New York Sunday Mercury will not lose any of those varied and attractive features which, for nearly Fifty Years, have made it a welcome guest to a Hundred Thousand Families throughout the length and breadth of the land. It will continue as heretofore to make which it will furnish more accurately than any of the so-called dramatic journals—mere trade papers, which have no influence with the theatrical profession and no circulation among the people.

All the Best Humorists of the Country,

Including Bill Nye, F. E. Huddle, Opie P. Reed, E'ie Adams, Alex. E. Sweet, are regular contributors to the New York Sunday Mercury, which far surpasses in merit and variety any humorous paper in the world.

The same attention will be paid as heretofore to all the

Live Sensations of the week,

and in fact, those who subscribe for the New York Sunday Mercury will have a combination of first-class reading matter such as no other paper in the country can present. In fact the New York Sunday Mercury offers all the literary features of

A First-class Magazine, The New Features of a Leading Daily, and the Combined Attractions of a Family Newspaper.

The New York Sunday Mercury for 1886 will be mailed, postage free, to subscribers in any part of the United States for $2 per annum, or $1 for six months. Sample copies sent free to any address

BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS.

WHAT IS IT?

A strictly vegetable preparation, composed of a choice and skillful combination of Nature's best remedies. The discoverer does not claim it a cure for all the ills, but boldly warrants it cures every form of disease arising from a torpid liver, impure blood, disordered kidneys, and where there is a broken down condition of the System, requiring a prompt and permanent tonic, it never fails to restore the sufferer. Such is BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. Sold by all druggists, who are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the price to any purchaser who is not benefited by their use.

THE TELEPHONE GIRL

HEARD IT WHISPERED

That the water continues to taste bad.

That some of those people who think they are wiser than the water board say there is fish in the pipe.

That if there are as many as reported it would be a good speculation to start a sardine factory.

That the craze for utilizing tissue paper in artificial flowers has become very popular.

That it also extends to bonnets, and paper bonnets are now fashionable.

That the men won't find any fault with the price when the bill for paper bonnets comes in.

That there are oily tongued agents on the road at the present time.

That the people who are always looking for "bargains" are the first to bite.

That "inducements" are always held out by strangers and they find these people always an easy victim.

That the hydrants make good hitching posts.

That it is too bad there are not more hydrants.

That one of our butchers put out a sign this week reading "spring lamb."

That the spring is principally in the muscular hind leg.

That the boys had great fun in polling the house at town meeting.

That the moderator said he would separate the sheep from the goats.

That it wasn't quite clear who were the goats.

That it was more clear who the lambs were; and they were very gentle and submissive.

That as a whole the evening town meeting was a success.

That some of the eloquence that was poured out to the innocent voters was done without any handle to the ladle.

That this caused considerable slopping over.

That it is strange that designing men can always find a tool to do their dirty work for them.

That they stand in the back ground and cry "sick 'um."

That the moderator knew what his own rights were.

That Mr. Upton will probably take his advice next time from a lawyer who is posted.

The Atlantic Monthly for April opens with a paper on Gouverneur Morris by Henry Cabot Lodge which will be found of much interest. A short story by Sarah Orne Jewett, entitled The Dulham Ladies is also a pleasant feature of the number, and with Mr. James' and Miss Murfree's serials furnishes its fiction. Two important papers, one on Responsible Government under the Constitution, by Woodrow Wilson, author of Congressional Government, the other, Reformation of Charity by Kellogg, will be of interest to thoughtful readers. There is a poem by Mr. Whittier, called Revelation, and some other verses by Andrew Hedbrook and A. M. Libby. The usual departments close a most agreeable installment of this standard magazine. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Roston.

Rheumatism is primarily caused by acidity of the blood. Hood's Sarsaparilla purifies the blood, and thus cures the disease.

It has been discovered that the patent hand fire grenades contain salt water—"only this and nothing more."

The lungs are as much the life of the body as is the heart. They are easily affected by climatic changes and need something to strengthen them and drive away impurities. Both of these Red Star Cough Cure does. It is safe and sure. Twenty-five cents a bottle.

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M]

Excepting on Saturday night (which is to be the occasion of Miss Clarke's farewell benefit, Diplomacy is to hold the Boston Museum stage this week. The representation of Sardou's comedy has steadily gained in effect, and Miss Clarke, Mr. Barron, and Mr. Mason especially appear to excellent advantage in this exacting play. Diplomacy is to have its final performance at the matinee on Saturday.

The revival of Alone in London, at the Park Theatre the present week, may be counted upon to prove signally successful. All the special features of the original production—the scene in London streets, with its bustling throng, and the very effective sluice scene—are to be presented with every attention to detail. Cora S. Tanner portrays the heroine of Robert Buchanan's interesting play. With the exception that W. J. Ferguson takes the place of Herbert Archer as Redcliffe and Laura Leclaire is to be the Mrs. Maloney, and Ada Dwyer plays the boy waif, the cast will be the same as that which carried Alone in London to success here earlier in the season

Nat C. Goodwin's return engagement at the Park, March 29, is for two weeks. He will be followed April 12, by Fanny Davenport in Fedora, which will doubtless draw immensely, as it is likely to be some time before Miss Davenport is seen here again in that great role. April 19th Rag Baby returns, and on May 3, one of the most important events of the season occurs, when the Madison Square Theatre Company, including the popular favorite, Mrs. Agnes Booth-Schoefell, Miss Maud Harrison, and S. T. Stoddart, will open a month's engagement, during which Saints and Sinners, Sealed Instructions, and Engaged will be presented.

The engagement of Richard Mansfield at the Boston Museum, opening on Monday of next week, will be awaited with a great deal of interest. A Parisian Romance will be brought out, and Mr. Mansfield of course is to assume the role of the old roue, Baron Chevreuil, which he makes such a wonderful character study in every detail. The performance will be seen with especial interest in view of Mr. Mansfield's success in such a contrasted role as Ko Ko in The Mikado. The representation will include many favorites of the Boston Museum company.

Judic returns to the Boston Theatre for her farewell engagement in this city, on Monday of next week. Only seven performances are to be given. For the opening night is announced La Grande Duchesse; Tuesday, La Mascotte; Wednesday, La Belle Helene; Thursday, La Perichole; Friday La Jolie Parfumeuse; Saturday matinee, La Grande Duchesse; Satuday night, La Vie Parisenne. The prices of seats will be lower than when the illustrious Parisenne first appeared here, and the repertory seems to assure popular as well as artistic success. Judic's tour has been brilliant, particularly in Mexico and Havana.

Mme. Judic will be followed at the Boston Theatre by Den Thompson in his new play April 5, the American Opera April 19, the Kiralfy Company in Black Crook, April 26. Among the attractions to come later are the Salvini and Booth consolidation, the German opera, and the Mapleson Italian opera, return engagement.

One of the most versatile and skillful actresses of the time is soon to close a long and most honorable professional career as leading lady at the historic house of Boston. Annie Clarke has been associated with the stage successes of the Boston Museum since 1861, when she came to this theatre with a record of popularity gained at the Howard Athenaeum and the National. Miss Clarke's exceptional abilities gave her rapid advance in her profession. For twenty seasons our play-goers have had occasion to admire her talent, so remarkable in its scope and so well trained, that it may fairly be said of her that no role in tragedy, melodrama, romantic play or comedy ever found her unprepared or unskilled in her art. Although Miss Clark may still be seen occasionally on the stage she adorns next season, she vacates soon her high place at the Museum. Next Saturday evening has been set apart for her farewell benefit. London Assurance, arranged in three acts, with Miss Clarke as Lady Gay Spanker, and Oliver Twist in which the actress gives a wonderfully strong personsrtion of Nancy Sikes, will constitute the bill. There will be a very brilliant assemblage at the Museum. But the throng, great as it may be, can include only a very small proportion of Annie Clark's admirers and friends.

One of my children, a girl about nine years old, had a very bad discharge from her head and nose of a thick, yellowish matter, and was growing worse. We had two different physicians prescribe for her, but without benefit. We tried Ely's Cream Balm, and much to our surprise in three days there was a marked improvement. We continued using the Balm and in a short time the discharge was apparently cured.—O. A. Cary, Corning, N. Y.

DENTAL NOTICE.

To the thousands who are suffering from the ill effects of badly decayed teeth, we would beg leave to inform them that with Our Method of Administering the New Vegetable Vapor all teeth can be removed without pain. Since we first began using the Vapor, we have used over 15,000 Gallons, administering it to thousands who have come from all parts of Essex County to have their teeth removed, and in no case has there been any ill effects from its use. We have given it to the most delicate and sensitive woman as well as the hardy man; to the child of 5 years, or the adult of 75. We have given the Vapor to hundreds of the most nervous people, who have for years dreaded having their decayed teeth removed. And we can say that one and all have gone away with the happy thought that their teeth were removed without pain. We can refer to hundreds of our patients who have taken Gas, Ether or Chloroform who declare that the Vapor has no equal as an anæsthetic. We charge No Extra for administering this Anæsthetic. Our prices remain the same as with gas. FINE GOLD FILLING A SPECIALTY.

THE BEST

boon ever bestowed upon man is perfect health, and the true way to insure health is to purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Eliza A. Clough, 34 Arlington st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful purifier, it is very much superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla. All persons of scrofulous or consumptive tendencies, and especially delicate children, are sure to be greatly benefited by its use." J. W. Starr, Laconia, Iowa, writes: "For years I was troubled with Scrofulous complaints. I tried several different preparations, which did me little, if any, good. Two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a complete cure. It is my opinion that this medicine is the best blood of the day." C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and unable to obtain relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have taken several bottles, am greatly benefited, and believe it to be the best of blood purifiers." R. Harris, Creel City, Ramsey Co., Dakota, writes: "I have been an intense sufferer, with Dyspepsia, for the past three years. Six months ago I began to use

Blood

Purifier

Article 24. To see if the town will appropriate money for the purpose of extending, repairing and carrying on the water works.

For these purposes your committee advise an appropriation of eight thousand dollars.

Article 29. To see if the town will take any measures to improve the acoustic properties of the large town hall, and the ventilation of the rooms in the lower story of the town house, and appropriate money therefor, agreeably to the request of the town house committee.

It is advised that an appropriation of one hundred and seventy-five dollars be made for this purpose and that J. E. T. Bartlett, Warren Shaw and C. W. Osborn be a committee to carry it into effect.

Town House. For the maintainance of the town house we advise the appropriation of all money received from rent of halls and rooms of the building.

Support of the Poor. For this we recommend that the town appropriate eight thousand dollars, and that the overseers of the poor shall keep a debt and credit account of the products of the town farm, giving the value of such part of same as may be consumed by the Poor department, and an account of what may have been sold, also, the value of all supplies furnished to residents—outside of the almshouse—and living within the town; also an account of the number of families so supplied, with the number of each family, the same to be published in next town report.

Your committee also advise the following appproriations:

Board of Health, four hundred dollars; printing and stationery, seven hundred dollars; miscellaneous and incidental, twenty-five hundred dollars; general sinking fund, nine thousand dollars; high service sinking fund, sixteen hundred dollars; town house sinking fund, six thousand dollars.

For interest on town debt, we recommend that so much of the income of the water works as is necessary be appropriated for this purpose.

For the payment of note given in part pay for Endicott School House, and coming due this year, we advise an appropriation of thirty-two hundred dollars.

Article 32. To see if the town will cause Endicott street to be properly graded, so that it may be more safe and convenient for public use, and appropriate money therefor, agreeably to the petition of Frank E. Berry and others.

For this purpose your committee recommend an appropriation of six hundred and fifty dollars.

Your committee recommend that all sums appropriated by this annual meeting, after deducting the amount to be raised by taxation, as provided for in this report, shall be paid from funds now in the treasury.

Your committee recommend that the financial year close on the first day of February, 1887, and that the accounts of all departments be made up to that date, and all those having charge of the several departments be instructed not to exceed in their expenditures the sums appropriated.

This report as amended was then accepted by a vote of 167 in the affirmative.

The following report was also accepted:

VOTED. That the Finance Committee examine and report upon the expenditures of 1885, on highways and sidewalks, with special reference to that extra amount caused by the street railroad.

Your committee find that about two hundred and fifty dollars were expended on the line of horse railroad more than would have been necessary if no railroad had been built; so testified by Surveyor of Highways. The Selectmen say the town is repaid by improved sidewalks and better grade of highways; at the same time it is recommended by this committee that in future the town should be at no extra expense for the building of horse railways through its streets, and your committee advise that the selectmen be instructed to carry this recommendation into effect.

After considerable discussion about adjournment, and the substitution of $650 for $500 in the limitation of the price to be paid for the cemetery land in West Peabody, the meeting adjourned at about 11.30 P. M.

Mr. Eben S. Daniels, a well known citizen of this town, died at his home on Mt. Vernon street, last Saturday night, after a sickness of over two years. He was stricken with paralysis, and during all this time has been almost helpless, and has been tenderly nursed by loving hands. During the war he was a member Company E. First Heavy Artillery, and has since been a member of Union Post 50, G. A. R., under whose rites he was conveyed to his last resting place.

Mr. M. P. Beckett has been spending a few days in town. Mr. Beckett is practicing his profession as a law partner of a Mr. Bond at East Attleboro, Mass.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

In the police court last Friday morning, Henry K. Dalton of Somerville, was fined $1.00 and costs for being drunk.

A lady living on Washington street, while shopping in Boston last week, had her handbag containing her purse snatched from her on Tremont street. Fortunately she had only a little money in it, her pocket book being in her pocket, where she carried it, because her bag would not always stay shut.

One of our store keepers who has a small garden, saw an advertisement of a "sure death to potato bugs." He sent twenty-five cents and received the following reply, "Pick them off and mash 'um with a stone."

Michael Reardon was fined $5.83 in the police court last Thursday for getting drunk. John——— for assault on Thomas McBride, was fined $10 and costs and for being drunk, $5 and costs.

Mrs. Hannah Kent, a former resident of this town, committed suicide by drowning, at Green, Butler County, Iowa, on the 11th inst. She was a mother of B. F. Kent.

John Flanders, while driving down Wallis street hill, last Friday, collided with a horse and wagon which was standing in the street. Flanders was thrown out, and considerably injured about the face and neck.

The police made a raid last Friday evening on the house of John Putnam, at the corner of Lynnfield and Lynn streets, South Peabody, and secured a quantity of hard liquors. They visited Moore's shop opposite but found nothing.

Edward Leavitt, first assistant at Lyons' barber shop, attempted to jump from a horse car near the Washington street monument last Thursday night, and sustained severe bruises about the face

The car due at the Square on the Lynn road at 7 o'clock, Wednesday evening, broke a spring near the house of Hose 5, and the passengers were transferred to another which was following it, and the damaged car taken back to the stables.

A man named Moxley was quite badly scalded at Upton's glue works last Wednesday by steam.

A man named Reagan was at work in South Peabody last week with the B. & M. survey folks, and having occasion to take off his coat, he left it beside the road, when a little fellow hardly old enough to wear pants and suspenders stole a compass from the pocket. The loss was soon discovered and the youth was found in the act of showing it to another boy. Unless the parents of the youngster are careful, they may find they have reared a penitentiary bird.

The crowd of hoodlums who hang over the rail above the brook on Caller street, on Sundays, were enjoying a dog fight last Sunday morning. They had two "swill merchant" dogs which they had excited to fight with each other.

John Ducey sustained quite a severe injury last Friday, while jumping on Union street. One of the weights which he held in his hand as a balance, slipped from his grasp and struck him in the stomach, and at first it was feared he had done himself serious injury.

During the Hi. Henry show Saturday night some of the gallery gods removed the screws from the outside handles of the outside door so that the knobs came off.

The youngest son of Mr. Charles K. Bailey, living at Saylesville, R. I., while at play with a cat, was thrown from his chair and broke his leg.

Mr. McCloskey has returned from a five months' sojourn at Ipswich, where he served his time on a rum case.

Where Hours go Merrily.

One evening last week Mr. Charles F. Tullock, foreman at Sanger's Laundry, was given a surprise party and during the evening presented with a gold watch chain and charm.

Tickets are out for the annual Easter Monday party of the A. H. B. A., which will be held at the skating rink this year on April 26. Whatever this society do they do well, and a large and well pleased party is assured.

A chartered horse car conveyed a number of Grand Army men to Danvers, last Wednesday evening, to attend the bazar of Ward Post 90 of that town.

The Crowell & Fowler combination gave a pleasing exhibition at the rink last Wednesday evening and will appear again at the benefit of Mr. Lewis D. Nevers on the 31st. The two mile race between the skater and bicycle rider was won by the latter in a hot contest.

Masconomo Tribe of Red Men held a meeting last Thursday evening and the new degree staff worked the "adoption" on two pale faces in an excellent manner. During the evening the Sachem, Charles A. Weare, was presented with a miniature Indian manufactured for the occasion, and it is said that since his wife dressed it with a yellow ribbon it has adorned his parlor mantel. Several applications for membership have been received. Another meeting will be held to-morrow night, when the degree staff of Agawam Tribe will work the Hunter's degree.

The W. C. T. U. of Salem sent greetings and congratulations to the Peabody Union last Friday, upon the victory achieved at the late election, adding the following encouraging words: "While we know that no single organization can claim the honor of this victory, we can but feel, that the earnest, persistent, prayerful efforts of the W. C. T. U. of Peabody have paved the way for just such a result as found expression at the polls on Monday the 8th. Our voices echo the refrain which we know is welling up from your hearts. 'Not unto us, O Lord, not unto us, but unto Thy name give glory.'"

The W. C. T. Union next Friday, March 26, will have the pleasure of having with them a former member—Mrs. L. L. Wood, of Montana. All friends of the cause are cordially invited to the meeting, at 2.30 P. M., at 18 Main street.

Under charge of Mrs. J. Hayes of Lynn, an eminent vocalist, assisted by the Plummer Sisters, the Band of Hope will give a "Mother Goose" and miscellaneous concert, probably on Wednesday evening, April 14. The place will be announced at a later date.

The Peabody Dramatic Club, assisted by Hal Newton Carlyle, repeated the "Long Strike" at town hall last Wednesday evening, appearing under the auspices of L. A. 2921 K. of L. to a fair sized audience. They well sustained the reputation earned at the first performance. The following was the Notwithstanding the very disagreeable weather last Saturday evening, Hi Henry's Minstrels were greeted with a fair house at town hall. The company gave a concert in front of the hall at 7 o'clock. The performance was clean and pleasing and the audience were more than satisfied.

L. A. 2947 will hold another social party at Ashland hall this evening.

It is understood that the rink has been let about the first of May to a band of "Kickapoo" Indians, who will give a free show and sell patent medicines. There is fun ahead.

The Chapin Club of the Universalist Church of Worcester will have a public dramatic entertainment on Monday, the 29th. A Worcester paper in speaking of it says: "The club has secured the services of Miss Ada M. Hill, who, it will be remembered, succeeded admirably in comedy parts in "Our Regiment" and "Secrets of the Service," when presented by Post 10 at the theatre. Miss Hill will take the leading lady characters in the drama, "Coupon Bonds," and the farce "The Duchess of Dublin." A strong amateur cast will assume the other parts."

Tickets are selling rapidly for the entertainment at the rink on the evening of March 31st for the benefit of the popular manager, Mr. Lewis D. Nevers. The attraction will be the Fowler Crowell combination, Masters Johnnie Goss and Scott, with music by the Salem Brass Band. The usual amount of skating and dancing will preceed and follow the entertainment.

Next Saturday evening at the rink will appear the great equilibrium Prince "Orville," introducing the most astonishing aerial balancing acts and other feats of daring. He has just returned from the west where he has made a wonderful reputation. His chair and ladder balancing acts are said to be immense.

Last Wednesday evening, the Urban Social Club partook of its second anniversary supper at the Van Vranken House, Salem. Beside the plate of each gentleman was placed a neat little box, containing a handsomely printed toast card and menu, enclosed in beautifully illustrated covers. The evening was pleasantly passed in songs, music and speeches by members of the club and their invited guests. John J. Nugent, the President of the Club, made the opening remarks. His brother, Francis Nugent, read an original poem, and spoke on the duties of "The Catholic Citizen." This club is composed of a select number of young men of Salem and vicinity, its aim being the encouragement of social intercourse as a pastime for the leisure moments of its members. It was organized Oct. 1883. Its meetings take place the second Thursday of each month at its room in Lynde Block. John J. Nugent was re-elected President of the Club, at its regular monthly meeting, last Thursday evening.

McMannus and McLaughlin, owing to other engagements are unable to appear at the benefit of Mr. Nevers at the rink, and in their place, he has secured Mr. Chas. H. Hoey the champion club swinger of the world, who also does wonderful feats in jugglery. Mr. Hoey has won the championship a number of times against professionals. He uses illuminated clubs and introduces several novelties.

There was a great rush at the blue tea party of the Brooksbie Club at the South church vestry last evening. In fact so large was the number that there were not souvenir cups and saucers enough to go around, but all will be provided for by the committee. Refreshments consisted of ice cream, cake, and chocolate. The company were entertained by singing by Miss Belle Bill and readings by Miss Mary E. Poole, Miss Eliza E. Jacobs and Miss Lina McPherson.

The 43d Farmers' Institute of the Essex Agricultural Society will be held Tuesday, March 30, at Lyceum Hall, Salem, commencing at 9. 30 a. m. Subject, "The Horse in Agriculture," opened by Hon. John E. Russell, secretary of State Board of Agriculture. Subject in afternoon, "Farm and Peasant life as seen in a short tour in Austria and Germany," by Mrs. E. V. Gage of Methuen.

A party of friends of Mrs. Rebecca Bond united with her at the residence of Mr. George H. Poor last Saturday evening in celebrating her 82d birthday.

The committee of the Grand Army Camp Fire to be given by Post 50, to-night, have received favorable letters from all the invited Posts except one. Among the artists who will appear at town hall are Mr. H. Grahame Wheeler in select readings. John Gardney in his specialties of clog and fancy dancing. Master James Smith and Arthur Matthews in double contortion acts. Hallisey and Shehan in negro sketches. Wallace and Wyman as Irish dudes. The Diamond Quartette. Fred Wilson, acts of jugglery. John Higgins, banjo. W. A. Smith in stump speeches.

SOUTH PEABODY.

The appointment of a male teacher by the School Committe for the school in this part of the town, gives general satisfaction.

A car load of the many friends of Mrs. Lizzie Patten, formerly of this place, made a call upon her at her home in Lynn last Saturday night when a very pleasant evening was spent. Mr. and Mrs. Patten will remove to Dakota to-day to reside.

Mr. Arthur Fader has opened a fruit and confectionery store in the Ruth Brown house on Lynn street.

There will be an entertainment at the vestry this evening given by the first M. E Church of Lynn. Admission, Adults 25 cents, Children under 12 years, 15 cents. Come one come all.

Miss Ivy Williams has been quite sick the past week with a diphtheretic sore throat.

The condition of Mr. Luther Oliver is very critical, and small hopes are entertained of his recovery.

Mr. Albert E. Copeland, formerly of this town, with Henry Law and others of Lynnfield, were chosen a committee to defend that town in the matter of the Revere water companies taking the water of Sontaug Lake.

Fred Shaw, son of Warren Shaw, will take a business course at Bryant & Stratton's.

After the first of April, Mr. J. H. Hanson, the popular manager of the branch jewelry store of Mr. George A. Collins in this town, will be admitted as a partner in the firm. Mr. Hanson is a very competent workman, having served four years with W. H. Kehew, of Salem, before entering the employ of Mr. Collins. We trust our citizens will give the new firm the liberal patronage they deserve.

Miss Elizabeth Gordon, of Boston, addressed a large company of young ladies, in the Methodist Vestry last Monday evening. The talk was very interesting, showing the grand opportunities open to young ladies, and preparing the way for a society to be formed in the near future, called the Y. W. C. T. U., which will doubtless become the most efficient and popular of all our societies.

ESSEX SS. PROBATE COURT.

To the Heirs-at-law, Next of Kin, and all other Persons interested in the Estate of MARY M. POOLE, late of Peabody, in said county, widow, deceased, GREETING:

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court for Probate, by George S. Poole who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to him the executor therein named, and that he may be exempt from giving a surety or sureties on his bond, for the reasons alleged in said petition. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Salem, in said county of Essex, on the first Monday of April, next, at nine o'clock, before noon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said George S. Poole is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks, in the newspaper called the Peabody Press, printed at Peabody, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, George F. Choate, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this ninth day of March, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

BILIOUSNESS.

Bilious symptoms invariably arise from indigestion, such as furred tongue, vomiting of bile, giddiness, sick headache, irregular bowels. The liver secretes the bile and acts like a filter or sieve, to cleanse impurities of the blood. By irregularity in its action or suspensions of its functions, the bile is liable to overflow into the blood, causing jaundice, sallow complexion, yellow eyes, bilious diarrhœa, a languid, weary feeling and many other distressing symptoms. Biliousness may be properly termed an affection of the liver, and can be thoroughly cured by the grand regulator of the liver and biliary organs, BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. It acts upon the stomach, bowels and liver, making healthy bile and pure blood, and opens the culverts and sluiceways for the outlet of disease. Sold everywhere and guaranteed to cure.

INDIGESTION

To strengthen the stomach, create an appetite, and remove the horrible depression and despondency which result from Indigestion, there is nothing so effective as Ayer's Pills. These Pills contain no calomel or other poisonous drug, act directly on the digestive and assimilative organs, and restore health and strength to the entire system. T. P. Bonner, Chester, Pa., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for the past 30 years and am satisfied I should not have been alive to-day, if it had not been for them. They

Cured

me of Dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since." L. N. Smith, Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills, for Liver troubles and Indigestion, a good many years, and have always found them prompt and efficient in their action." Richard Norris, Lynn, Mass., writes: "After much suffering, I have been cured of Dyspepsia and Liver troubles

By Using

Ayer's Pills. They have done me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken." John Burdett, Troy, Iowa, writes: "For nearly two years my life was rendered miserable by the horrors of Dyspepsia. Medical treatment afforded me only temporary relief, and I became reduced in flesh, and very much debilitated. A friend of mine, who had been similarly afflicted, advised me to try Ayer's Pills. I did so, and with the happiest results. My food soon ceased to distress me, my appetite returned, and I became as strong and well as ever."

Book Notices.

A UNIQUE CYCLOPEDIA.—An extremely valuable Cyclopedia, and of very great popular interest is Alden's Cyclopedia of Universal Literature, Volume II. of which is just published. Novel in plan, and novel in form, at once beautiful and convenient, and at a price low even compared with Mr. Alden's always low prices, this volume gives in its nearly 500 pages biographical sketches of one hundred and eleven prominent authors, with characteristic selections from their writings. The following authors among others appear in this volume: Audubon, St. Augustine, D' Auvergne, Bacon, Balzac, Bancroft, Banim, Barbauld, Beaumont, Beecher (several of the name), Bentham, Bion, Bjorson, Black (William), Blackstone, Blessington (Countess of), and Boccaccio; thus representing nearly all ages and all nations even in this volume—American, English, French, German, Italian, Greek, Latin, Swedish, Portugese, Scotch, Dutch, Irish, Norwegian, and Danish authors—from the period 280 B. C. to A. D. 1886. The literary and mechanical workmanship are both of a high order. The work is really one that ought to find a place in every home library, it offers a fund of entertainment and instruction that will prove well-nigh inexhaustible. The price, only 60 cents a volume, makes its possession possible even to nearly every school boy. The work is published also in Parts of 160 pages each (exchangeable at any time for bound volumes), which are sent postpaid for 15 cents each Every reader of this notice ought to get at least a specimen Part for examination. John B. Alden, Publisher, New York.

Mrs. Craik, the author of John Halifax, Gentlemen, claims that it is possible for a great novel to be written and yet not be love story. Her readers will have an oppotunity to judge of her own success in that line in the novel, King Arthur: not a Love Story, which appears in the April Harper's. She bases the interest of her novel on maternal love.

Charles Dudley Warner's serial, Their Pilgrimage, which begins in Harper's April Magazine may be called a Summer Resort story. It will be a lively narrative of incident and observation on a journey among the most popular of American pleasure resorts, with humorous delineations of character and a thread of romance running through it. Fortress Munroe, Cape May, and Atlantic City are visited in the first two chapters. C. Reinhart is to illustrate the serial and ten of his drawings accompany the first part.

EARNING COLLEGE EXPENSES.—Two persons, Wm. H. Hills and Moses King, demonstrated a few years ago, at Harvard University, in their own way, a fact which President Eliot incessantly tries to impress upon those who are timid about entering Harvard from fear lest they may not have money enough to carry them all through the course. The president says regularly in the university catalogue, "The experience of the past warrants the statement that good scholars of high character but slender means are seldom or never obliged to leave college for want of money." That is to say, with due economy there is help enough at hand in the way of scholarship, prizes, deturs, loans, gifts, etc., as well as innumerable opportunities for earning money as tutoring, copying, stenographing, journalism, carving, singing and other means. Messrs. Hills and King earned their way—the former to some extent by reporting for newspapers and the latter wholly by publishing books. At graduation Hills entered the editorial rooms of The Boston Globe, where he has remained ever since, and King established himself as a publisher, in which line he still continues. While at college Hills got together the words and music of all the best and most popular songs that were then current at all the colleges in America, and King published them in handsome book form under the title of "Students' Songs," and this one book has been so successful—the sale already reaching almost fifty thousand copies—that King has paid over as royalty to Hills more money than the entire cost of his college course and has enough left in profit to reimburse himself for all his own college outlay. And the probability to-day is that this peculiar and refreshing collection of Students' Songs will continue to allure the public into buying copies of it for many years to come.

GAIL HAMILTON, in the course of an article on civil service reform, in the January number of Lippincott's Magazine, treats woman's suffrage in the following incisive manner:—"Woman suffrage is an artificial cause, and is just as hard to keep up as slavery was to put down. Convention, discussion, legislation, fail to arouse any enthusiasm for woman's rights, because there is no organized, insistent, or radical wrongs. Individual women suffer, and concrete laws are unjust, but men as a class are not unjust to women as a class. As men increase in refinement and virtue, women share in the improvement—inevitably, because man is compounded of men and women. Whatever women suffer they suffer from the imperfection of human society, not from any combined intentional oppression by the stronger sex. Woman suffrage languishes not because men will not grant it, but because women do not wish it. Women cannot be made to wish it, because they do not suffer from the lack of it. Whenever they want it they will have it. There is more danger that they will have it without wanting it than that they will want it, without having it.

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW IN HIS LIBRARY

Our engraving of "Longfellow in His Library," of which the above cut is a miniature copy, is an accurate representation of the room which Longfellow used from 1837 until the time of his death, and it will undoubtedly be accepted as the favorite picture of the "American Popular Poet." The likeness is good; the attitude and expression happily betoken a mind deeply occupied in the task before him, and everyone who admires and appreciates the writings of the poet, will be pleased to see the appointments of the room in which he worked, together with a faithful portrait of him. Remember that this is no chromo, but a Superb Steel-plate Engraving, 24x32 inches in size.

The central figure is that of the Great Poet. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical. The artizan is in his workshop. Aside from from being the workshop of our immortal poet, it was the room in which Gen. George Washington made his headquarters, directly after the battle of Bunker Hill.

We shall offer this engraving till February 1st, on the following conditions

EVERY NEW SUBSCRIBER paying $2, in advance, for the PRESS, will receive a copy FREE.

Old Subscribers, in arrears, who will settle to date and pay one year in Advance, will receive a copy.

Subscribers who pay in advance can have the PRESS and engraving by paying $2.50.

CEDAR GROVE.

Only three of the committee appointed by the town to investigate and report at a special meeting on Cedar Grove Cemetery, were present last Friday for a visit to that place. These included Frank E. Farnham, Willard Spaulding and Lewis Brown. Besides these gentlemen there was Isaac Munroe, Charles A. Weare, W. W. Reed, N. M. Quint, Theodore P. Teague, Rev. J. W. Colwell, Allerson Galeucia, David Roberts, Stephen Peabody, David G. Upton, Frank Marsh, John L. Colcord, and Benjamin Price and a representative of the PRESS.

The first to which the Rev. Spaulding called attention was the fence about the entrance, which he said contained six rods and cost $55 a rod to build, that there was about 1000 feet of lumber used and cost $80 a thousand at the time. The next thing that attention was directed to was a four rail fence on the right hand side of the entrance, containing 100 rods which cost $250, and the lumber at the time it was built was $20 a thousand. Then there were 113 trees set out in the beginning, only three of which lived and new ones were set out, and their condition to-day was not flourishing. A right of way is held by Mr. Allerson Galeucia over the road way leading to the cemetery, so if he desires he can cut up the land adjoining, and sell house lots facing on the road. This road cost $12 a rod besides them acadamizing. Mr. Spaulding called attention to the bog on the western border which he said was 40 rods wide. The company were then taken to the lots in the rear of the receiving tomb, and listened attentively as the Rev. gentleman made a calculation something like this. "Here is room for two rows of lots, they will have to be graded six feet. It will take 400 cubic yards of gravel to each lot, it will be drawn from the other side of the cemetery and will require as much more in rocks to fill up the place made vacant by the removal of the gravel. The cost of these lots which will be two rods square, will be $250 a lot. 30 lots to an acre will cost $7500, soil 8 inches deep on these lots will cost $1000 more. The soil is brought 2 1-2 miles. It will cost another $1000 an acre to sod it." The company were then invited to inspect some lots and a road way in the process of construction. Here were some seven lots on which he said $1200 had been spent, and it would cost $350 to complete them. These lots when completed will cost over $200. (Mr. N. M. Quint who was present said he would grade the whole for $75 a lot.) and sell for $100. Our attention was then called to the side hill, which it was proposed to cut down and grade into lots, which was somewhat rocky, and Mr. Spaulding on this made a calculation as follows: "Here is three quarters of an acre and on the same basis, it will take all the lots that are graded, and some $1600 besides to put them in shape as those graded already." In justice to Mr. Roberts we should say that he said the $1200 spent included the general care of the cemetery for the season. "Now" said Mr. Spaulding as we reached a high elevation, "let me call your attention to the fact that the town paid Putnam $500 for surveying it, and that was an outrageous price. Here is a swamp ravine running from the northern to the south eastern section and contains 40 acres, impassible for the most part and is nearly 1-3 of the whole purchase right in the heart or the piece. Here on the east is a large ledge containing over twenty acres, making 60 acres of worthless ground." The committee were all willing to admit that this 60 acres was not suitable for burial purposes.

The company then went around to the Northern side which is a gravel pit of boulders and but little earth. Just beyond was a very pleasant retired spot with a number of very pretty lots, and there was room for a number of more, but Mr. Spaulding said there had not been a demand for a lot there for over five years. On one side was a gorge and the other a steep hill. Cedar Avenue is about a third of a mile in length and is a gradual ascent, and from it can be obtained a fine view of the surrounding country. At the end of the avenue there are three or four acres of land that is available for burial purposes, beyond this is another field covered with wood, that could be used and contains some eight or ten acres. The extreme eastern part is covered with grass and berry bushes. There is also from here an elevation to "Look Out" rock which is included in this lot. Here the gentlemen separated, Mr. Spaulding to collect his figures, and the rest of the company to find their way back to the horse cars. The company were mostly of the opinion that there were about 25 acres of available land, and that in the purchase, the town has one of the sightliest and pleasantest and best located grounds for a public park in this part of the state. We don't endorse all the above, and ask only that it be considered a fair statement of Mr. Spaulding's opinion and that of some of the company present.

SPARKS.

The Fire Alarm committee with Supt. Rogers of the Gamewell Fire Alarm Company went over the districts to be covered with the fire alarm, last Thursday. They located boxes at the corner of Endicott and Lowell streets, one in the Kingdom, one at the corner of Central and Endicott streets, one near Pike and Whipples, one at the corner of Tremont and Central streets, corner of Wallis and Walnut streets, near R. H. Brown & Co's on Walnut street, Endicott School House, Main street near Grove, corner Washington and Sewall streets, corner Aborn and Sutton streets, near Pumping station, Reed's store South Peabody, Craigs Mills, corner Foster and Oak, one on the Square, one in West Peabody, and others not yet decided or. The committee met again Tuesday. President Stover was present and the final arrangements made, all but the signing of the contract which will probably be done to day and work will be commenced immediately. There will be fifteen boxes, five of which will be the non-interference boxes, these to be located near the Square, and the other ten to be the non-interference polls, a box that is a little different from the other five. Two indicators will be put in at present, and sixteen miles of wire. The indicators will be put in the Central Station and in the house of Hose 5. It will probably be two months, or more, before the system is in operation.

A slight fire occurred in the house of Richard J. Cullen, 96 Washington street, Friday evening between 8 and 9 o'clock, caused by the overturning of a kerosene lamp which set fire to the carpet, and burnt two easy chairs. The fire was extinguished by Mrs. Cullen, who smothered it with a woolen comforter. No alarm. Loss about $15, fully insured.

The Fire Alarm Committee of the Salem City Government, with Chief Austin and ex-Chief Osborne, were in town last Thursday afternoon, and visited the hose house in South Peabody and examined the new hose wagon. They then visited Lynn and were shown the workings of the fire alarm telegraph.

Work on changing the stables will be commenced next Monday by Abram Lummus.

A great many out of town firemen were in town Sunday.

Saturday forenoon, while the wife of Janitor Smart of the Central Station was at work around the kitchen stove, a kettle of fat boiled over on the stove, taking fire, and flashing up, badly burned her about the face and eyes. It was thought at first that her eyesight was gone, but the prompt arrival of a physician, and the administering of proper remedies, saved them. She is now doing well.

This evening the sixth annual ball and concert of the "Three Ones and a Two', of the Peabody Fire Department will be held in the large Town Hall. The hall has been cleared of the seats and will make the largest and best dance hall anywhere in the vicinity. The Salem Brass Band will give a promenade concert from 7.30 to 9 o'clock. At 9 o'clock the grand march, led by Chief Engineer Tibbetts, will take place. It is expected that this will be the largest ball ever held in this town, as over 200 tickets were sold previous to the opening of the doors.

A large number of out of town firemen will be present.

George Morgan got his foot stepped on and somewhat injured last night by one of the horses in the Central Station.

The committee on the Hose carriage for the Dublin district have organized with George C. Pierce as chairman. It was decided not to do anything at present about the carriage until after the fire alarm was in operation, to see if there would be any necessity of locating the carriage in that section, with the protection afforded by the electric alarm. That this don't prevent his picking up butts and smoking them.

That they begin at a very tender age to do that.

That a few boxes of strawberries have reached this market.

That sales are rather slow at the price asked, $2.00 a box.

That the proper thing to adorn the parlor mantel with now is a photograph of the famous Peach-blow vase of the Morgan collection.

That it is for sale in all the art stores.

That most of the men in South Peabody stay in nights now.

That this is not so much to give their family a surprise as to do work for the coming fair.

That it is expected the fancy work done by these gentlemen, will eclipse anything of the kind ever exhibited before.

That the PRESS should have a special artist on the spot, and secure material enough for an art department for a long time.

That all fashions change, that a little time ago yellow was the cry.

That now it is red, flaming red, brick red, light red and dark red.

That it almost makes one wish they had red hair to match.

That match safes formed of gilded clay pipes tied together with a ribbon, are quite numerous now.

The average circulation of The Boston Daiiy Globe for March exceeded 94,000, and the average of the Boston Sunday Globe reached 99,905. Last year in the same month the daily average was 56,673, and the Sunday average was 62,500. This is the most amazing gain ever known in Boston journalism. The Sunday Globe now has a much larger circulation than any other Boston Sunday newspaper.

W. C. Packard &Co., the well known furniture dealers of Salem, are ready for the spring trade with a fine line of all kinds of goods. Their emporium is literally crowded with novelties—and in upholstery goods, they are showing new and rich designs. This firm is worthy the patronage of our readers, and it will repay a visit to their store to see the new designs which are being manufactured.

Lynn people are getting restless over the truant school, says the Lyceum Review, and want to know when and where it is to be built. The inexcusable delay in locating the school calls for severe censure of the County Commissioners, two members of which have announced themselves as being in favor of a location in this city. What are they waiting for? If Mr. Colby thinks to put it off long enough to make a campaign issue of next fall, he will find himself grievously mistaken. A position on the fence, saying one thing and meaning another is not satisfactory to the people of our city. The largest and richest city of the county cannot boast of a single county institution, and she demands to be recognized, even if by nothing but a truant school. Mr. Bishop has pledged himself to locate it here, and although Mr. Colby says he favors it, yet he will not concur with Mr. Bishop in taking immediate action. Unless some decision is arrived at soon, Lynn people will be apt to take the matter in their own hands next fall at the polls.—Lynn Union.

NOTES
Mulcahy

There resides a family in a thickly settled part of our town who are continually making a disturbance much to the annoyance of their neighbors. The female part of the house has figured conspicuously in religious meetings and is said to have experienced a "change of heart" during the recent religious revival, but her piety is not of long duration. She is in the habit of buying peppermint and drinking such quantities of it that she becomes delirious under its influence and quarrelsome. This drink she buys in every way that she can, in small bottles from the grocer and in large quantities from the druggist. Numerous attempts to reform her have proved fruitless. She has several children.

One of the most disgusting and sickening sights was witnessed at the police station one night last week. A woman beastly intoxicated was brought in by the officers and locked up. This seemed to arouse all the low passions in the woman, and for several hours she kept up a tirade of horrible oaths and vile language, such as was never heard from the lips of woman before. Nothing was too low for her to say, and when one thought of her as a woman and a mother the thought was nauseating. The picture still further appealed to the sympathy of all when a sixteen year old son called to see his mother, and as she poured out her wrath on him the tears followed each other down his cheeks like rain and he beseeched her to keep her peace. He paid her fine and she was allowed to depart only to make his home even more wretched. It was a temperance lecture that touched the heart.

Some of our people are wondering that we have not heard from the Rev. Willard in our meetings until within a few years. Perhaps there is a reason why not, but it is not for me to tell. But it is evident that he was the same Spaulding years ago that he is now, as the following, told by a well known lady, will show:—"Some ten or fifteen years ago there was to be a public meeting in Salem and he was assigned the prayer. It is supposed that he thought that was not giving him a fair show, and that he should have had the oration or sermon. But he squared things by delivering a prayer an hour and a half long, and the oratory and ferver was said to be far superior to that of the other divine who followed.

Charlie Hills, the alleged youth who is allowed to cudgel his brains to excite his imagination, and who is a holy terror on the English language, thought to be very funny last Thursday in a quarter of a column article, ending "The jackass they used to keep in the Saturday Evening Express office was more refined than this one." Charles, you ought to know, because every one suspected you of being that same ass at the time and your remark simply confirms that suspicion. Why the proprietors of your paper keep you I don't know, but it is evident that you serve a purpose. In every well conducted community there is always a place for the filth and refuse matter. You act in the same capacity by making your column a sort of sewer where everything disgusting that is thrown out and rejected is gathered up and cherished as "exclusive." I sympathize with the christian families whose homes are defiled with such reading matter. Keep right on blowing your "penny whistle" and "Mulcahy" will be with you next week.

The April fool joke on one of our barbers reminds me of the experience another barber had with some of his help. It was a joke but not an April one. The proprietor of the shop had a man in his employ who perhaps had been crooking his elbow too much, but was able to be about the shop. He left the "striker" in charge of the shop and when he returned found him fast asleep. The proprietor then walked around, went to the money drawer and took all the change, secured all the razors and departed. Returning a short time after he woke up the sleeper and asked him to account for the missing articles. The man was dumb with astonishment and promised to make it up out of his own pocket. After keeping him in suspense for some time he informed him of what he had done and gave him a lesson on temperance.

F. P. Goss, plumber, No. 7 St. Peter street, Salem, has an advertisement in this issue worthy of attention. Mr. Goss has done considerable work in town and to good satisfaction.

MILLINERY.

Round Hats, Bonnets, Children's Hats, Trimmed Hats, etc., etc.

We have two experienced Milliners in charge of this department—Misses Goodwin and Harvey—who will be glad to show customers every kindness and attention. Our stock never was better and our facilities to trim are first class. We shall keep on hand a good stock of ready trimmed hats and bonnets, of our own make, and will trim to order at short notice. Our stock of flowers, feathers and ribbons, is not surpassed, and we presume not equalled in this city. An early call will convince any one of the above facts.

KID GLOVES.

We have a lady in charge of this department who has had several years experience in the Metropolis, and knows the ins and outs of the glove business thoroughly. Our stock is excelled by no other in the city. Good Gloves in Tans, Browns and Opera Shades, for 50 cts. per pair. Very nice four button Kids in all the new street shades, for 85 cts. A bargain in a five button Kid—warranted real kid—for $1.10 per pair; worth anywhere $1.50—only $1.10 to start the season. Gloves in all colors, and with laced or button wrists. We shall lead in the Kid Glove business this season, as we have for the last ten years.

Fabric Gloves.

Lisle and Silk Gloves are shown in all the new and pretty shades of tans, fawns and drabs; also in black and white. We have a very choice and extensive stock of these goods, and confidently call attention to it as being the most complete and desirable line in the city. As usual, our prices will be as low as the lowest in all cases, and on many styles we shall undersell any and all competitors. Gloves for ladies, misses and children. Examine and compare for yourselves.

HOSIERY.

We lead in the Hosiery business, and our stock is so large and so full of choice styles that we dare not attempt to describe or enumerate them. We have everything wanted for men, women and children, and cordially invite an inspection.

Spring Opening.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

SECOND FLOOR.

We cordially invite the Ladies of Salem and vicinity to our Opening of the largest and most carefully selected stock of Millinery Goods ever shown in this city, including Trimmed Bonnets and Round Hats, both imported and of our own design and execution. In Fancy Laces and Silk Lisses, we have many elegant patterns, and in some of the most delicate tints, fairly rivalling the shadings of nature. In Flowers, which are to be so largely used the coming season, we have a most attractive display, as fresh as from the garden, only lacking fragrance. We have also in Untrimmed Hats and Bonnets, a very large assortment from the strongest School Hat to the finest foreign make. In fact everything which goes to make up a complete stock. Mrs. A. C. Washburn, our manager, was in New York at the Importers' Opening in Feb. securing many choice things at that time, and has kept close watch of the market up to the present time. Having through years of experience formed a large acquaintance with Importing as well as Jobbing Houses, which gives her great advantage in selecting Desirable Styles and making Lowest Prices. Miss Sadie Bushby will remain with us, as will also Miss Etta Brown and Miss Hattie Gliddin. We have also secured the services of Miss Carrie Palmer, who will join our corps of popular sales ladies. And now we feel sure almost every lady calling on us next week, or after, will meet an old acquaintance who will gladly show them every attention, and will take a personal interest in pleasing.

Cloaks, Suits and Shawls.

SPRING, 1886.

We take pleasure in announcing to the Ladies of Salem and Essex County, that we have now open and ready for inspection our full line of Ladies, Misses and Children's Outside Garments, Wraps, Shawls, etc., for Spring and Summer wear. We may venture to say without any egotism, that our selections in this department far surpass anything we have previously offered. The increasing demand for superior Ready Made Garments and Suits has led us to exercise unusual care in selecting none but the best, both in material and workmanship, and we guarantee all to be just as represented. We have every style and quality a lady can wish for. Long Garments for driving and travelling, Short Wraps and Jackets for street wear in every available shade and colors, both Foreign and American make. Suits, stylish and of superior quality. Shawls, India Chuddas, Boucle, Cashmere, and Fancy Embroidered Scarfs in all grades and shades. Children's Garments, simply beautiful in Boucle, English, German and American Goods. Our Infants' Department requires especial mention for its variety of Long and Short Robes, Cloaks, Slips and Blankets.

Jersey Waists, fancy colors beaded, Mikado fronts, Vest fronts, Plain fronts and braided, in every variety; and a great many more equally good things that we have not space to mention.

We cordially invite you to come and see for yourselves, assuring all courteous attention, and any information we can bestow.

ALMY, BIGELOW & WASHBURN.

THE LADIES'

DONGOLA!

OFFICE OF ORDWAY & CLARK,

MANUFACTURERS OF

LADIES' FINE BOOTS AND SHOES.

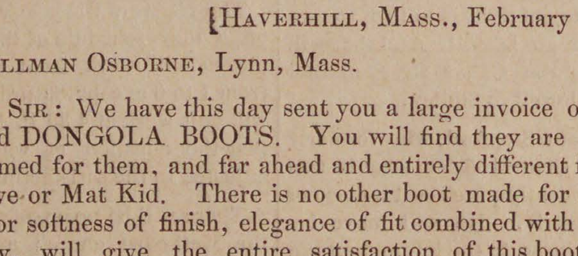
HAVERHILL, Mass., February 25, 1886.

Mr. Wellman Osborne, Lynn, Mass.

Dear Sir: We have this day sent you a large invoice of our justly celebrated DONGOLA BOOTS. You will find they are all that has been claimed for them, and far ahead and entirely different from Kangaroo, Glove or Mat Kid. There is no other boot made for Ladies' wear which, for softness of finish, elegance of fit combined with such lasting durability, will give the entire satisfaction of this boot. They are something that has long been needed, as they wear better than French or American Kid, and will not stretch, turn purple, or look rusty. So popular and unprecedented has become the demand for these goods throughout the country, as the merits of the leather have become known, and so limited the importation of skins out of which the goods are manufactured, and so many imitations under similar names have been placed upon the market, that it has been found necessary to copyright the name.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED WITH OUR

AGENTS NAME UPON THE SOLE, THUS:



Also the word "DONGOLA" upon the inside lining.

We shall give you the EXCLUSIVE SALE OF THESE BOOTS IN YOUR CITY, feeling confident with your large trade that they will find a ready market, judging from the large sales they have met with in other cities. Respectfully yours,

ORDWAY & CLARK.

WEST PEABODY.

THE OLD CODGERS AT THE CAPITAL.

At a Banquet given at the White House by the President in honor of the Old Codgers and their lady attendants, at which were present the Cabinet, the Supreme Court, the Diplomatic Corps, and the Heads of the various Departments, and their wives, the following conversation took place:

The President remarked that the fame of West Peabody had long since reached his ears, and he had embraced with great pleasure this, his first opportunity, to honor its most distinguished citizens. As the renown of the locality had spread far and wide through foreign lands, he had deemed it proper to give their Ministers the much coveted opportunity to meet them at the festive board. He only regretted that the fine vintage which had heretofore graced his tables, was exhausted, whereupon the senior codger drew from his satchels the requisite supply from his pippin brand. At this point Miss Rose Cleveland remarked that the supply of pastry was rather scant, whereupon codger (No. 2) said he had a few doughnuts left, which he proceeded to take from his satchel and place upon the board. Everything being now in readiness, the festival commenced, supplemented with the following "feast of reason and flow of soul."

The President desired to know how his recent appointment of postmaster in the place was received by the people. The old codger replied, that it gave great satisfaction to the only democrat in the place, who was never known to send or receive a letter. There was but one mugwump in town to rejoice with him, and he lived four miles away. The irregularities of the former postmaster resulted from sheer necessity, his very existence depending upon his success in increasing his mails. The merchant that was involved with him was simply an exemplification of the contagious character of his disease, which, had the department not taken it in hand, was in a fair way to inoculate another young man in town. The newly appointed postmaster was a man of large ideas, and had erected a gorgeous structure for the accommodation of his patrons.

The President remarked that he had for years been familiar with the transactions of the West Peabody Farmers' Club, and that since the defection and fall of the late commissioner of agriculture, who came from the adjoining city, he had greatly desired to honor some one from that institution with a prominent position in the agricultural department of his government. The philosophic Bureau therein, whose mission it was to solve the mysteries that could not elsewhere be explained, was vacant at the present time, and presuming he was a member of the Club, he desired to know if he could not recommend someone therein for the place. The old codger fell into a deep meditation for a time, and then cried: Eureka, I have found him, instantly naming the distinguished president of the club as one who to this day had solved every riddle which had been presented to him. If there was anything, past or present or to come, which J. F. I. did not understand, he was not aware of it; still, being chairman of the republican town committee, and known to fall into a fit of profanity every time the name of a mugwump is mentioned, it is questionable whether he would accept an appointment under a democratic administration. The defection of the late commissioner was a matter of great regret with the people of his district, as most of them had run their cooking stoves with the seed he had furnished them.

At this stage of the conversation Miss Cleveland distributed the doughnuts which were washed down with a full supply of pippin juice. The President remarking that his Secretary of the Treasury was seriously indisposed, insomuch that it was doubtful whether he would ever be able to resume the duties of his office, inquired of the old codger if he knew of any one in his locality competent to take his position and discharge its duties. The old codger replied that he knew of no one in his section of the town, but that in "Peabody proper" there was a man distinguished for his great financial ability, and who had rendered great service to the town through a long series of years upon its finance committee. If there was money enough in the pockets of the laboring classes to do it without calling upon the rich, he believed he would pay the national debt in half the time which any other financier would require for the work. Still, he hoped the President would not appoint him, as to do so would be scooping the village end of the town of a share of its brains and removing the only man who was able to check-mate the "crank" in the west.

The President further inquired what the outlook was for the projected road from West Peabody to Danvers. The old codger answered that, up to th holding of the Danvers town meeting, the outlook had indeed been most favorable, but on that occasion, a distinguished citizen from "Peabody proper" was seen circulating among the magnates of the sister town, and, although he had favored the road at home, was heard to affirm that there was no desire for it on the part of his own people. The President asked if the town had not voted in favor of the road, and if so, he suggested that this individual be requested to attend to his own affairs. The old codger answered that it was something he never had done, and he doubted the efficacy of the suggestion.

The Chinese Ambassador, Chu Ling Whang, desired to be informed if the report that had reached his Sovereign, regarding the division of Peabody was correct, and if so, he wanted to know why it was they suffered the Lunatic Crank, who he had been told was at the bottom of the business, to live for a single hour. In his country such an offender would be instantly beheaded. The old codger replied, that the great warriors of "Peabody proper," had often, with their mighty weapons, cut the Crank into inch pieces, which they consumed upon their altar, but like the ancient Phenix, he had as often risen from his ashes, and become more troublesome than ever.

The Russian Ambassador suggested that they treat him to the bastinado and knout and send him to the mines of Siberia. The codger doubted the success of the experiment, as he would be likely to organize the prisoners and demolish the Czar's empire.

The Persian Ambassador said that when his Shah was troubled with such a personage, he bought him off with his diamonds. The old codger remarked that the crank was well advanced in years, and was indifferent to the splendors that would captivate the young.

The Turkish Ambassador said that when his Sultan was troubled with such a customer, he gave him a harem and subdued him in that way. The old codger said the crank seemed to be wedded to the ten commandments and doubted if the project would succeed.

The English Minister remarked that his government was wrestling with the same difficulty at the present time, and that the Prime Minister was laboring to remove it by dealing justly with the people. The old codger nodded assent, adding that he thought that would be the only thing that would prevent the division of the town.

At this stage of the conversation, the satchels of the old codgers gave up their remaining contents, which rapidly disappeared among the guests.

The French Ambassador asked the old codger if he had ever been in Paris, and had visited Pere la Chaise, and if so, how it would compare with Cedar Grove. The codger had not seen the great cemetery of France, but judging from what he had read about it, he believed Cedar Grove far surpassed it.

The oriental splendor of its entrance, the broad avenue lined with gigantic trees, its beautiful lakes reflecting the silvery skies, its mountain ranges sprinkled over with boulders, thrown there by the Titans, who played with them as the urchins of this day play with their marbles, the bog lands so melodious in the sweet even tide, all combine to form one of the most enchanting spots of earth. The great men of "Peabody proper" throng its avenues, saddened only by the reflection that their eyes will sometime close to the glories of the scenes before them. The Ambassador desired to know how they could make a cemetery out of bogs and ledge land. The old codger replied, that it was about time they were handing in their orders for his vintage, "which was now ripe, and of the finest aroma."

The Justices of the Supreme Court and the Attorney General asked at this stage if the prohibitory laws which had been so unwisely enacted in Massachusetts, and other northern states, did not prevent the people there indulging in their bibulous propensities. The old codger remarked that the pippin brand, with which their honors had regaled themselves, was, in his locality, regarded as a religious drink, and he had up to this time found himself unable to fill his orders. Judges and all legal gentlemen had developed a great fondness for it, which went a great way in securing fair treatment in the courts.

While the conversation was going on between the old codger and the President, his Cabinet and Foreign Ministers, Miss Cleveland and the wives of the distinguished personages present delightfully entertained the fair maidens with banged hair and high heeled boots. The entertainment being over, the old codgers, gathering their empty bottles into their satchels for further use, and delighted with the honors which they had received, and bearing with them the benedictions of the heads of our government, and the representatives of all foreign lands, returned proudly to their quarters, loudly affirming it was the best government under the sun.

The next evening a grand Ball, inaugurated in honor of the Old Codgers by all the fashionable circles of the city, came off in the hall of the House of Representatives, which was specially fitted up for the occasion. Among the invited guests, were the President and his Cabinet, members of the Supreme Court, President of the Senate, and Speaker of the House of Representatives, Heads of the Army and Navy, and the entire Diplomatic Corps, all of whose members were present in full regalia. The conservatories of the city were taxed to their utmost capacity for the adornment of the room. The flags of all Nations were suspended from the arches. The Marine Band enlivened the occasion with the choicest music. At eleven o'clock P. M. all the guests being present, the festivities began, Secretaries Endicott and Whitney being masters of ceremonies, and Chief Justice Waite, floor director. At the appointed signal, President Cleveland, taking the arm of the Old Codger's attendant, whose hair had been specially banged, and extra lifts being put upon her boot-heels, for the occasion, led her out upon the floor, followed by the English Minister arm in arm with the attendant of Codger (No. 2). The Old Codger led Miss Cleveland upon the floor, while Codger (No. 2) was accompanied by Miss Endicott, who had insisted that the ladies of her section of the country, should be specially honored upon the occasion. The other invited guests selected partners without delay, and the German commenced, the Band furnishing its most exquisite music for the occasion. The Old Codgers, although somewhat hampered by their country costumes, and the heaviness of their foot-gear, went through with the mazes of the waltz with great credit, the only casualty being the tripping up of the Japanese Ambassador, Hu Lang Ki, who pitched headlong into the centre of the room, knocking over as he fell the Chief Justice and German Ambassador. The festivities were kept up to a late hour, refreshments of various kinds being served as required. The Queen of Great Britain and Empress of the Indies cabled their congratulations, whereupon, in honor of Her Majesty, the whole company formed itself into a grand circle, when the chief codger, stepping into the centre, "cut the pigeon's wing" for the space of half an hour. Before the festivities were closed the President, assisted by the French Minister, took large orders upon the next vintage. On taking their departure, it was affirmed by all the guests that the entertainment had surpassed everything in their previous experience. The codgers, who were the last to leave, gathered up their satchels and umbrellas, which had been deposited for safety in one corner of the hall, and returned to their city quarters delighted with the honors they had received.

The next day the old codgers visited the Treasury where Secretary Manning's deputy treated them with the highest consideration, opening to them all the vaults of the establishment, and remarking that it would give him great pleasure to bestow upon them some substantial souvenir of their visit, if he had not already given outright several hundred thousand dollars to the rich men of their town to carry on the banking business with, to obtain which the government had been forced to "skin" the widows and orphans and all the laboring men of the country.

From the Treasury department they proceeded to the Capitol, visiting first the Senate chamber where the old codger was given the seat formerly occupied by Daniel Webster, while his companion was squeezed into the chair left vacant by Harry of the West. Senator Edmunds of Vermont introduced a resolution which was seconded by Senator Hoar of Massachusetts and unanimously passed.

"That doughnuts are the best of food,
To be had beneath the sky;
And that Pippin juice should be their drink
Till they laid them down to die."

The Senate was adjourned for an hour to give its members an opportunity to become acquainted with their distinguished guests. Liberal orders were here taken—the cocktail brand being the favorite. A committee of the Senate was appointed to escort its guests to the House. On their arrival they found the members of the House standing with bowed heads, while an aged man in proximity to the speaker was occupying the time. When he had concluded, one of the old codgers asked a senator his name and what the old fellow had been talking about. The senator replied that it was the chaplain and that he had just opened the session with prayer. The codger excused himself by saying he hadn't been to church for several decades and supposed the old custom of praying, especially in Legislative bodies, had been abandoned. The visitors were now introduced to the speaker who presented them with seats on his right and left. The old codger asked the speaker if the representative from the Essex district was not the most powerful man in the body. The speaker said he believed he had succeeded in keeping the mouth of the Merrimac open, so that its waters could reach the sea, and he thought that, in view of the coming election, his love for the soldier was on the increase, and that his heart was warming with sympathy for the laboring man. He had been told that he lived in the smart end of his district, and, by playing one opponent against another, he might be able to secure his own re-election.

The codgers now took their departure for the Patent Office, where they visited first the weather vane department, inquiring therein if any patent had been issued upon an invention to determine bow the wind would blow on November next. They had been instructed by the politicians of their district to make inquiries in reference to this matter. The attendant in charge replied that no such patent had been issued, but that all indications pointed to squalls in that locality at that time, and that it behooved all interested parties to trim their sails with the greatest care. The old codger, desiring to increase the product of his vintage, asked to be conducted to the department containing all the inventions relating to that general matter. He left with the conviction that no man on earth could squeeze a pippin dryer than he could, or had better facilities for putting it products upon the market.

The day before leaving the city the codgers took a trip to Mt. Vernon, and were conducted by the attendant in charge to the Mausoleum of the Father of his Country. The old codger, with tears in his eyes, inquired of the attendant how the great general who was "first in war, first in peace, and first in the hearts of his countrymen" stood upon the pippin brand. Codger No. 2, half overcome with his emotions, desired to know if the great general cultivated the Danvers onion and how he stood upon the oleomargarine question. He also was anxious to ascertain whether his dusky servants were members of the noble order of the Knights of Labor. These inquiries being satisfactorily answered, they prayed to be conducted to the room in which the great Washington died. Before entering it they removed their brogans and heavy boots but kept their satchels and umbrellas well in hand, remarking that it would hardly be safe to trust them with the contents to the outside throng. The old codger remarked that the death of such a man was an irreparable loss to the world, and it had always been his opinion that if the pippin brand had been freely used the great general would have been living still. The scene was one of patriotic tenderness never to be forgotten.

Leaving the death chamber the codgers were conducted to the large hall below, where they were shown the key to the old Bastile presented to Washington by Lafayette on his last visit to the country. The old codger, measuring it as accurately as possible with his eye, remarked that he had no doubt it would exactly fit the lock to his cider mill. On leaving the mansion, the codgers were conducted to the garden where they were shown a tree planted by Washington himself. The old codger remarked that if the general had only selected a pippin he would have conferred a vastly greater blessing upon all coming generations.

Before leaving the place the old codger asked his attendant if he was aware of the fact, that if Everett, the great orator of the north, had not purchased Mt. Vernon, the name of Washington would long since have passed into oblivion. The untutored Virginian replied that the matter had never been presented to him in that light before, but that he had noticed, in every cut of Mt. Vernon he had seen for a quarter of a century, the great Everett, cap in hand, was in the fore-ground—a more striking figure than a dozen Washingtons, rolled into one, could possibly make. The steamer now signaled its departure for Washington and the codgers went abroad.

As the old codgers left the city whose freedom had been bestowed upon them on the day of their arrival, the attending throngs waved them a sad adieu, beseeching them to come again at their earliest convenience with well filled satchels. In passing through Maryland on their journey home, the train stopping to take water, Mulcahy came to the car window and inquired about the prosperity of the Peabody PRESS. The old codger replied that, since he had been dubbed "Old Joe" by that journal, he had ceased to read it and had given his pennies to the Reporter, whose editor in his opinion had no "double" upon the planet. The old codgers reached home in season to be present at the annual love feast of the town. They were met at the station by two urchins who offered to tote their satchels for a few pennies apiece. The codgers declined their services, remarking that the condition of their wallets would not justify such a needless expenditure of their hard earnings. On arriving at his home the old codger was greeted with great tenderness by his estimable wife, who inquired of him what nourishment she should provide to restore his wasted energies, to which he replied that she might get him (hic) a beef-steak (hic) or a briled one, just as the children (hic) liked best.

MUSICAL NOTES.

A song recital was given in the parlors of the Union Hotel, Fairhaven, last Friday evening, for the benefit of the Library Association of that town, by Mrs. J. P. Fernald and Miss Emma Rice, with Miss Clara Wilde, of Fairhaven, as pianist. Musical people from New Bedford and Fairhaven were present, and the following is from the New Bedford Mercury of Saturday morning: "The programme was a very delightful one, and well adapted to the occasion. Mrs. Fernald sang with a thoroughly artistic method, and her voice was simply charming. The duos were beautifully rendered and Miss Rice made a good impression in her solos which she sang with fine delicacy. The company present was greatly pleased and encores were numerous."

Mr. Charles A. Clark, the organist of St. John's Church of this town, gave a recital in the Meionaon, Boston, last Friday, assisted by F. Clayton Record, leader of the Salem Symphony Orchestra. The Boston Home Journal thus speaks of it: Mr. Clark's programme was at every point interesting, and more than ordinarily replete with difficulties. His taste as a musician and skill as a pianist were most praiseworthily displayed in his rendering of Chopin's etude, op. 25, No. 1, and Henselt's etude, "Si diseu j'etairs." Other selections by Bach, Schumann, Rubinstein, Chopin, Wagner, Brassin, and Liszt, submitted his ability to a test that fully justified his aspirations as a concert pianist. Mr. Record received a hearty encore for his attractive performance of a Fantaisie by Alard, and responded with a familiar air and variations to the evident satisfaction of the audience.

H. C. Magregor, of the Unitarian Church of this town, will assist at a concert to be given in Marblehead tomorow evening under the auspices of the Woman's Relief Corps. Mr. Record, of Salem, and Mr. Bessom of Marblehead will also appear.

The Barton Square Church people have engaged Miss Bessie H. Curwen, of Salem, as contralto in the choir of that church.

Mrs. Foote, recently organist at the Baptist church in this town, and formerly of the Universalist church, is to be the organist of the Central Baptist church in Salem. Mrs. Foote is a good musician, and the new position is a change which must be agreeable. Miss Nellie M. Bartlett of the Universalist church, will play the rest of the month.

It is expected that two more performances of the Mikado will be given by the members of the Salem Schubert Club sometime in May.

The rehearsal of the Salem Schubert Club this week will be Friday evening, instead of Wednesday.

Mr. Leslie Goldthwait played at the quarterly organ and vocal concert of the N. E. Conservatory, in Tremont Temple, Boston, yesterday.

Next Sunday afternoon at Vesper service at St. John's church, in this town, the choir will sing Rossini's Stabat Mater, assisted by F. Clayton Record, violinist. Services at 3 P. M. The music under the direction of Charles A. Clark.

The second and last concert of the season by the Salem Schubert Club will take place on Wednesday evening, April 28th. Mendelssohn's "Athalie," Rubinstein's "The Angel," and Cowen's "The Bee and the Honey" will be the works performed in addition to special numbers by the soloists, who will be Miss Gertrude Swayne, soprano of the new Hollis St. Church choir, Boston, and who has been favorably heard before in Salem, Miss Sally Bingham, soprano of the Park St. church choir, Boston, and Mrs. Jeannette Noyes, contralto of the Arlington St. church choir of Boston. These two last named ladies sang numbers in Athalie when it was given by the Cecilia Club of Boston. There is some likelihood of the last rehearsal for this concert being given in the new Academy Hall in which case there will probably be an increased demand for tickets.

The Salem Oratorio Society announce their closing concert Easter Monday evening, April 26, at which time Mendelssohn's Hear My Prayer, J. C. D. Parker's Redemption Hymn, and Spohr's Last Judgment will be performed. The soloists are to be Mrs. E. Humphrey Allen, soprano, Miss M. Gertrude Edmands, contralto, J. H. Ricketson, tenor, and H. L. Cornell, bass. With the exception of Mrs. Allen, these soloists have been heard little if any in Salem, and we congratulate the Society on their excellent selection. Miss Edmands, contralto, and Mr. Cornell bass, are members of the Arlington Quartette. Miss Edmands has a fine voice, and sings with a delicacy and expression which is rare in contralto singers. She will please Salem people better than any one they have heard for a long time. Mr. Ricketson is a member of the Oxford Male Quartette. He has had considerable experience in Canada and the West in Oratorio, and is well spoken of. Mrs. Allen is too well known to our Salem people to need any further mention. It is the best quartette of soloists as a whole that the Society have engaged for a long time. It is far ahead of the quartette for St. Paul. Those of our readers who have not secured their seats should do so now at once. There will be a full house, and the demand for seats will be greater as the time for the concert draws near.

The musical part of the entertainment to be given by Holten Lodge I. O. O. F. at their anniversary will be given by the Cadet Band, Mr. Van Blarcom of Marblehead in character songs, and Miss Annie Liebsch of Salem vocalist, with Mr. Leslie Goldthwait of this town as accompanist.

Mr. E. W. Merrill, of Salem, substituted for the regular tenor of the South Church at the ordination of Mr. Hall last evening. The change was not an improvement, but decidedly the reverse. The singing was the poorest we have heard, ever, from this choir.

We are pleased to know of the increased prosperity of the Boston Home Journal. Its musical department, including directory of all the artists in the different lines, is alone worth the entire price asked for the paper. Its musical critic, Mr. Capen, is considered the finest and most impartial in Boston, and for musical people who would keep posted on the events of the time, this paper is invaluable. It is outspoken, fearless, and independent—at the same time charitable and just, and Mr. Waugh, the manager, is adding new features constantly. It is a society paper in every sense of the word, and our readers who do not see the paper, can receive a sample copy by addressing W. Wallace Waugh, Esq., manager, Boston.

The compiler of "Sounds and Echoes" in the Sunday Globe gets terlibly mixed every week. Last Sunday he had Miss Emma C. Wheeler, of the Philomela Ladies Quartette, singing at the Dudley street Baptist church, and in another item at the Dearborn street. The latter one was correct. It is not so bad as the Herald's notice of the singing of Miss Cary at a concert last week, when Miss Cary did not sing at all, but Miss Etta Kileski, and the joke of it was, the critic was present at the concert. If the notice had been written from the programme, as is often the case, there would have been some excuse.

The sale of seats for the season of American opera at the Boston Theatre next week is now in progress. The operas for the first five nights are "Lohengrin," "Lakme," "Orpheus and Eurydice," "Merry Wives of Winsor" and "Flying Dutchman." Orpheus will be repeated for the Saturday matinee, and on Saturday evening, the 24th, the season will end with a double bill, consisting of Masse's "Jeannette" and the ballet of "Sylvia," by Delibes. The organization which comes to this city for this season of performances aggregates over 300 persons, and all the operas will be put on the Boston Theatre stage exactly the same as they were produced at the Academy of Music, all the scenery, etc., being brought from New York for this engagement. The orchestra of over sixty musicians will be that of the New York season, and directed by Theodore Thomas.

We cannot deny that there are cough mixtures which are injurious because they contain opium. But Red Star Cough Cure has no dangerous ingredients. It is prompt, safe and sure; only 25 cents a bottle.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." CHARLES A. ROBERTS, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,

Editors and Publishers

AT THE meeting of the Lyceum and Library Committee of the Peabody Institute, $700 was appropriated for lectures, a less amount by $200 than was used last year. It is understood that the increase last year was to enable the committee to run a better course than the year previous. We have not heard that it was an unsatisfactory course; yet the appropriation is reduced this year again, and we are told by the esteemed correspondent of the Telegram, that this reduction is made in order that the high standard the lectures may be maintained. This is certainly a queer way of putting it, and if the converse is true, that the larger the appropriation the poorer the lectures, it is a sad commentary on the ability of some sub-committee to whom is delegated the duty of arranging the lecture course.

The fact becomes more and more evident that some system is needed in arranging both for the lectures and the needs of the Library. This cannot be satisfactorily obtained until there is a change in the mode of electing the Lyceum and Library committee. On the committee this year are six new members—six who will need this year's experience to ascertain the needs of the Institute and become acquainted with what is best for lectures and books. When they have obtained that experience, they are just as liable to be dropped as to be re-elected, and the more valuable their services the more liable are they to fail of a re-election. We believe new men should be added. We don't believe the same gentlemen should serve until they become fixtures of the Institute. But there ought to be some method in the change, and the only effectual way that we know of is to elect the Lyceum and Library committee for six years, as the Trustees are elected, choosing two new members each year. In this way the committee will have members who can become interested in their work. It will count for something. A line of action can be laid out without the possibility of an entire overturning the following year. There will also be more encouragement for a man to put his best thought and action into the labors of the Committee. And surely the needs of this Institution can thus best be subserved. The committee are entrusted with valuable powers—of shaping in a measure the entire course of reading from the library, and of carrying out the bequests of the donor in a manner which shall be in harmony with his desires and at the same time make the Institution an honor to the town.

We cast no reflection on the present committee. Far from it. They are all gentlemen in whom the town have confidence. Yet there are members of last year's committee, good men, and who served the Institute well, for a single year, who should have been re-elected. There was no particular reason that we know of why they were not, except that the method of electing them is all wrong. There is no system about it. It is just like a chance in a lottery. As many men as the Trustees can think of are put in nomination, and then they march up and mark down against this or that name. The best man is liable to get left—the poorest one liable to get elected. So it goes, and one committee thinks the Library should have more money, and another that more should be expended for lectures. One year the lecture committee have an appropriation enabling them to have a fine course—another year they are restricted as to their lectures. Gentlemen of the trustees, this ought not so to be. And the best remedy out of the difficulty is to elect the Lyceum and Library committee so that only two members shall be chosen each year, giving all the members six years to serve.

AN AMENDMENT to the State Constitution, with reference to precinct voting in towns, was passed last year by the popular vote. We give the amendment in full, as there are many people who do not understand it.

"The General Court shall have full power and authority to provide for the inhabitants of the towns in the Commonwealth more than one place of public meeting within the limits of each town for the election of officers under the constitution, and to prescribe the manner of calling, holding and conducting such meetings. All the provisions of the existing constitution, inconsistent with the provisions herein contained, are hereby annulled."

By this amendment the power and authority to provide such places of voting is left with the General Court. As we understand it, this body has not yet provided in general terms for the method of procedure in towns which desire such precincts established. We suppose it would be competent for this town, for any town, to request permission of the Legislature to vote in the method prescribed by the amendment. Ther are few towns where this voting by precincts would be more appreciated than Peabody. West Peabody is four miles from the centre, and it would be a convenience to the voters in that section, particularly at the fall election, to be enabled to deposit their vote at home. The same is true in So. Peabody. The votes could be as well taken care of and the possibility of a full vote would be greatly increased. This is a consideration worthy of notice, as this duty of citizenship is often disregarded. Anything tending to facilitate a general observance of this duty, making it easier and more convenient for the citizens of the Commonwealth, should be commended.

A special town meeting, for the report of the committees on the Dublin hose house and the Cedar Grove Cemetery, will be called before long. Would it not be well for the town at this meeting to take measures looking towards the establishment of such voting precincts while the Legislature is n session?

IT WAS truly said of our town, on Fast Day, regarding the labor of our police force, that a quieter day had not been known for a long time. It was a generally observed holiday and as many people were about the streets as is customary on such days, yet there was no drunkenness, no disturbance worth mentioning.

On the other hand, every paper that we have seen from our neighboring city of Salem, says that never has there been so much drunkenness and disturbance on a holiday as existed in that city on Fast Day. Do these two statements mean anything? Are they not intimately connected with the fact that Salem is a license city, and Peabody has closed its saloons? We think this inference is fairly to be drawn. All the towns around Salem are no-license. Hither, therefore, all the people from the neighboring towns go for a social glass. If Salem ever goes no-license, and it is surely tending in that direction, there will be a vast difference in that city which will extend beyond its limits to the surrounding towns.

WE PUBLISH on our second page this week a long letter from our West Peabody correspondent giving an account of the "two old codgers" trip to Washington. Of course the particulars of this trip as described are largely in the imagination of the writer, and while the article contains many local allusions, it is written all through in such a jocular vein that we trust all our readers will so understand it. Under no other circumstrnces could we endorse it, or allow it to appear in our columns.

Department Commander Tobin and the Massachusetts president of the woman's relief corps are interested in making up a special through train for New England veterans to the national encampment at San Francisco, August 3 to 7, over the Union and Central Pacific railroads. The railroad companies are anxious that all the veterans of this region who intend to go to California shall take this train, so that a demonstration can be made in their honor all along the route.

Some one has torn down a wire fence enclosing a hen yard belonging to Mr. Oscar F. Fellows, which was located in a pathway near the corner of Bowdich court and Central streets. Evidently some one didn't want it there.

Mr. David Noyes of Wenham had his horse badly injured last Thursday when driving on Walnut street by the animal becoming frightened, and colliding with a tip cart filled with brush. The occupants of both teams were severely shaken up.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Mr. James E. Galway, a young man about 22 years of age, met with a shocking accident just below the Caller street crossing near Harrington & Co.'s tannery shortly after four o'clock this afternoon. The young man with some companions had been sitting beside the railroad track, and when the freight train which followed the four o'clock train on the South Reading branch came along, Galway attempted to catch on to a platform car loaded with bricks and fell, his left leg getting under the wheels which passed over it crushing it to a shapeless mass just below the knee. He was able to get up and hobbled across the track where he fell and was removed to the flag station at Caller Street, and Doctors Frost and Worcester who quickly arrived on the scene made him comfortable as possible, and Hallowell & Smiley furnished a team in which the unfortunate man was taken to the Salem Hospital where his leg will be amputated at the knee. No blame can be attached to the flag man at Caller Street, as he was attending to his duty.

Several of our grocers have been made the victims of a fraud worked upon them in the following manner. A woman would enter the store and order a number of things, and after the small articles of the most value were put up, she would say that she would have a number of other things and would like to have them left at such a number and street, and she would take the small parcels and pay the clerk for the whole when they were delivered. The clerk of course hunted in vain for the woman and carried the goods back to the store, and the proprietor realized he was out the amount of goods she took away. Last Saturday night was the last time she appeared and a grocer lost $1.84 worth of goods by the operation.

A wheel on one of C. A. Thomas' delivery wagons broke off short at the axle on Central street last Friday.

Last Monday Patrick H. Sweeney for being drunk was fined $3 and costs in the police court.

Joseph, an infant son of Mr. Patrick Crowley, met with a horrible accident yesterday, which terminated fatally at 4.30 this morning. The little one, while at play about the house, approached a second story window and fell out striking on a picket fence twenty feet below. The force of the fall was sufficient to drive the pickets into the abdomen of the child who remained suspended in this manner until rescued. One leg was cut and the intestines protruded from the wound in the abdomen. Doctors Pike and Weston were called and did all in their power to relieve the little sufferer. It was a sad sight.

Mr. J. B. Thomas received another car load of cattle this morning, and the driver, Dr. Buxton, took a run with a fractious bull up Foster street as far as Nelson & Merrills'.

In the police court Saturday morning, James F. Barnstead and George Peabody were fined $1 and costs each.

In the police court last Friday morning, Dennis Sweeney, who disposed of the tickets stolen from the rink, was fined $10 and costs. Appealed and put under $100 bonds.

A Marblehead fellow named Deunnett took a header from his bicycle on Washington street last Sunday. The machine was broken and the man was bruised.

Last Saturday afternoon a fellow in a fit caused a little commotion on Lowell street. His face was somewhat scratched.

There was a large company present at the Methodist vestry last Thursday evening, the occasion being a farewell reception to Rev. C. N. Smith, the pastor, by his parishioners and friends in the Baptist church. The exercises were in charge of Mr. Isaac Drown, and consisted of an address of welcome followed by literary and musical selections by the Sunday school choir, Miss Libby Smith and others. Mr. Henry Gilman in a few humorous remarks then presented the pastor with an elegant crimson plush easy chair. Rev. Mr. Smith feelingly thanked the donors with well chosen remarks. Congratulatory remarks were made by Rev. Mr. Shipman, of the Baptist church, and also by Deacon Perkins, Ambrose Hatch and others.

Remodeled and enlarged with a floor area for the sale of HATS, and HATS ONLY, unequalled in the country.

Facts are Stubborn Things.

And a visit will convince one and all of the fact that our alleged competitor's efforts are feeble, their claim of superior facilities silly and absurd, their hoped for success a dismal failure from the start, in attempting to compete with a STOCK OF HATS TEN TIMES LARGER than all the Hat Stocks in Salem combined. To sum up the whole matter. THE SHAWMUT often buys of one style of hat 10 to 20 cases or 30 to 60 dozen. Springfield, New Bedford and Gloucester Shawmut Stores will use nearly as many. Compare stocks and it will be clear to any observer that the purchases for the average hat stock in Salem and vicinity must be confined to a few dozen hats at a time. I buy immense quantities of each style and grade and the SHAWMUT can and does sell to its customers.

SINGLE HATS AT THE DOZEN OR CASE RATES.

We don't defy competition; it isn't here in Salem; there is no competition between Wind and Facts without fear of contradiction you can locate at the Old and Reliable

The annual meeting of the Baptist ociety was held on Monday evening pril 12th. The following officers ere chosen for the year. Chair- an, Pyram D. Perkins; Clerk, braham C. Osborne; Standing Com- ittee, P. D. Perkins, C. A. Nevers d I. Chute. Treasurer, Daniel olbury; Collector, Alden F. Row- ; Auditor, Luther French; Music ommittee, Daniel Woodbury and ri Littlefield.

Last Monday evening a social time was enjoyed at the residence of Mrs. J. W. Hudson, the occasion being the completion of a crazy quilt by that lady, the squares of which, twenty-five in umber, had been made for her by as any different ladies of the social rcle connected with the Unitarian hurch. The twenty-five were all esent Monday evening, and refresh- ents and a general good time signaled putting in of the last stitches.

ext Sunday being Palm Sunday, cial services will be held in St. John's urch. In the morning the "Passion" l be read, the palm blessed and dis- buted to the congregation. The espers at 3 P. M. will be sung by Rev. Fr. Magaborn, a Japanese missionary. The music will be a special attraction and Mr. Record will perform "Angels Serenade" on the violin, and the solo "Inflammatus" in the Stabat Mater will be taken by Miss Alice Ducey.

Mrs. Eliza Sutton was eighty years of age last Sunday. A birth day cake was made for her by Mrs. Hudson, and she was one of the ladies present at the party of the latter Monday night. Mr. A. B. Cross, the well known crayon artist of Salem, has completed an excellent crayon likeness of Mrs. Sutton, and it will be hung in the parlors of the Unitarian church, the gift of the social circle.

The Gospel Banner of March 4th contains an able contribution from the pen of Rev. S. P. Smith of East Boston, formerly of the Universalist church in this town. The subject: "What Does the Universalist Church Stand For?" is set forth in a manner that will convince the most conservative mind that the Universalist Church has been an instrument for good in the past, and stands to day to still further advance the truth the fathers so manfully struggled to maintain.

At the parish meeting of the South Church last Monday evening the following officers were chosen for the ensuing year: Standing Committee: Dr. C. C. Pike, Franklin Osborn, B. F. Southwick, Clerk: Arthur F. Poole Treasurer: Aaron F. Clark, Music Committee: S. E. Cassino, T. M. Stimpson, J. K. Cole.

The attention of farmers and others is directed to the "Mayo" brand of Superphosphates, which is advertised by Samuel Trask & Son. It is highly recommended.

The shipments of leather from Peabody and Salem for the week ending April 10 were 3763 rolls, 988 sides, 230 bundles, 18 barrels, 5 bales of leather, and 14 bundles of skins.

Mr. John G. Moulton the meal man, is seriously ill at his home in Salem.

Two of our druggists have applied for a sixth class license. See another column.

Ordination of George A. Hall.

The ordination and installation of the new pastor elect of the South Church, of this town, took place yesterday. The Council met in the afternoon in the body of the church, and was called to order by Rev. J. W. Colwell. Prof. W. M. Barbour, of New Haven, was elected moderator and Rev. Harry L. Brickett, of Lynnfield, scribe. The examination of the candidate, was then proceeded with, and was considered satisfactory. Lunch was furnished by the Social circle in the vestry and the installation was proceeded with at 7 P. M.

The services began promptly at that time, with an organ voluntary by Mr. Frank Upton, followed by an anthem by the choir. The minutes of the council were read by the scribe, Rev. C. B. Rice, of Danvers, invoked the Divine blessing, and Rev. Dr. Barbour read appropriate selections of scripture. The sermon was then preached by President Seelye of Amherst College, who took for his text John 14:6. "Jesus said unto him, I am the way, the truth and the life; no man cometh unto the Father but by me." The preacher said that these were the words of Christ himself. They are altogether true or not at all true. There is no middle ground to take regarding them. It is not a philosophy like that of Plato that Christ teaches; it is beyond the sphere of common thought. We must accept his statements because they are true, or reject them because there is no truth in them. It would be a wonderful supposition for the human mind to take that Christ used his power to turn men from falsehood to truth by false statements. This position, however, we must take unless we believe his words to be true. The preacher then enlarged upon these three propositions. No man cometh to the knowledge of the Father; No man cometh to the forgiveness of the Father; no man cometh to the fellowship of the Father, but by Jesus Christ the son. The preacher was listened to with marked attention, and such attention was necessary in order to understand him.

The hymn "Let Zion's watchmen all awake," was then sung by the choir and congregation, and the ordaining prayer offered by Rev. E. S. Atwood, D. D., of Salem. The charge to the pastor was by Prof. Lewellyn Pratt, D. D., of Hartford, who said to the young pastor that it was not the first time they had met. They had talked over the subject often together, but he would direct his attention to a few points. First, honor your office. Deem it a good and great work and devote yourself entirely to it. The minister of the Gospel needs to concentrate all his powers to his work, and he should take for himself a high standard. The man of business, the artisan, to make a success is obliged to work early and late. Should a minister be less devoted? He should be something besides the best bowler, the best shot, the best at every kind of athletic sport. The men of the world may call such an one a good fellow, but they despise him at heart. They like to see zeal in a minister, and there is no occasion for him unless he have it.

Preach the word. This is your commission — an ambassador of Christ. Beyond that there is no warrant in the Scriptures. You are not called to preach philosophy or science, but revelation from God. Lectures on history, elaborate and well worded eulogies, with a moral at the end, however interesting, is not preaching. They may all be used to develop and illustrate thought, but the word is the only thing to preach about. The minister who is continually saying, "Give me something to preach about," not depending upon the Bible but on science and such things, must soon "step down and out," and he has furnished, himself, the reason for it. This pulpit is not for lectures or oratory but for preaching. The minister is ordained to preach.

Be faithful to your people. Feed the church. Identify yourself with its people. If your views change from those held by the church, be honest and withdraw from it. Be devoted to the pastorate not for the emolument, nor as a stepping stone to something else. Here is your sphere of labor, and poor indeed it must be if it is not worth the best energies of a student just out of the theological school. Do your work here, not on the platform or in newspapers. Become wedded to your church, and not go flirting around with every unmarried church in the vicinity. Aim at completeness; dedicate all your power to the service of Christ. The preacher must be pastor and evangelist as well, and should excel not in one but in all. Here is the secret of an enduring ministry. If any part flags, give it special attention. Be devoted to the Sunday School and the prayer meeting as well as to the preaching service. Mingle with your people. Develop your common sense. More can be gained in this direction by a little practical experience than in years in a theological school. Put forth all your powers to the glory of God. Cultivate a spirit of patience. The harvest season is sure to come. Its slow growth teaches humility, which is the most likely to secure good results. While you work faithfully do not fret or be discouraged. Remember that while one plants and another waters, it is God alone who giveth the increase.

The right hand of fellowship was then given to the new pastor by Rev. W. E. Strong, of Beverly, who said that it was no formal welcome that he extended to him who for years had been his companion and friend. The joy which he felt in such a welcome must hide itself in a measure. He would welcome him to the conference of fellow ministers of this vicinity. The speaker said he told what he knew when he said to the new pastor that he would be received with kindness. They would show an interest in your welfare and a deference to your opinion which would make you understand more fully the words of the apostle, "Let brotherly love continue." They will pledge to you their support, and ask for yours. This fellowship is one of the grandest privileges of a christian minister.

The speaker welcomed the new pastor into the fellowship of the Christian Church which is not shut in by any imaginary line, and to a place in proclaiming Christian truth. The churches in this vicinity needed the help of the new pastor in the suppression of lotteries and the rum shop, and the advancement of christian civilization.

The address to the people was then delivered by Rev. Mr. Sperry, who said that he counted it a high privilege to speak a few words to this people at this time which is so significant and full of bright hope. He had been thinking of some things which he might say to other peoples but were not applicable here. He had thought that he might commend to this people to esteem the pastor very highly both for his works sake and his own sake, but then he remembered that the pastors of this church had always been held in high esteem. He had thought he might say to this people that "the laborer is worthy of his hire;" that they should see to it that he should not suffer in material things. But as he thought of the custom of this church he thought how needless all this was. He might say that the pastor would be encouraged in coming to the house of God to find a large and attentive audience. But he remembered that it must always be a bright day to the pastor, for he would be sure to find before him such a congregation. He might say a word however, here. It was of great comfort to a pastor to find before him a company of teachable men. These give him the greatest encouragement. Another help is responsiveness in a congregation. The pastor does not look on it as a whole, but he learns to know where he can find a quick response. He hoped that responsiveness would be as much of a help to the new pastor as it had been to the speaker.

There should be a large measure of expectancy in a church like this. He always feared a feeble reminiscent habit. A church should look forward and onward, not backward, believing in a grander prosperity to come. One word as the pastor meets you in your homes. No doubt he will be kindly received, and if he is a meek man and the scripture injunction "that the meek shall inherit the earth" is true, he will find that he will inherit in a short time nearly half of Peabody.

There is a fictitious feeling regarding a pastor which exists in Protestant churches. Whoever needs a minister for spiritual consolation never comes to him. There is a lack of frankness regarding spiritual things, which might give the pastor a great advantage. He hoped the church would not forget in future the moral welfare of the community, or the conditions of leadership in all moral reforms which it had maintained.

Another hymn was then sung by the congregation to the tune of America, the concluding prayer was offered by Rev. DeWitt S. Clark, of Salem, and the benidiction was pronounced by the pastor.

Spring is here and soon there will be a strong, sweet aroma of burning grass borne on the south wind, and a smoky haze will settle about the horizon. The industrious husbandman will invade the fence corners and hedge rows, and soon the cut-worm will sample the young corn. The bull-frog is blowing the mud from the pipes of his bazoo, in the swamps, in preparation for the spring rehearsal. Fathomless mud and premonitory symptoms of spring fever, announces that spring has come to stay.

Read what the Press has to say about the display of Carpets at Wm G. Webber & Co.'s New Stores, and the bargains there offered :—

BARGAINS IN CARPETS.

Carpets at lower prices than ever before known in the History of the Trade greet the eye on entering the spacious warerooms at 238 and 240 Essex street and 94 and 96 Washington street. That this assertion is true is demonstrated by a glance at the magnificent display of floor coverings on sale. The witchery of the Loom is here manifest. New and unique patterns, rich in harmonious blending of color, made from the best materials. Carpets for the Parlor, the Library, the Dining Room, and the Boudoir, are shown with Borders to match. A Special Sale of Best Quality Body Brussels is now being made, the product of the Lowell Mills, and patterns manufactured expressly for John H. Pray, Sons & Co., Boston, and made private to Wm. G. Webber & Co. in Salem. No one else has them—and the prices are phenomenally low. Tapestry Brussels are seen at 50 and 65 cents per yard; Ingrains and 3-plys proportionately low.

Mr. Webber and his partners have long been known in connection with the carpet trade in Salem, and in his entirely new location, new Stores and New Goods, ably seconded by Mr. Newhall and Mr. Bowen, both identified with the local trade for the past 10 years, they have been and are known to offer at all times great inducements to purchasers of floor coverings, and at no time in the career of these gentlemen is this truism so great as at present. Indefatigable effort and an artistic taste, stimulated by the demands of an appreciative public, have contributed largely in placing Wm. G. Webber & Co. among those successful business enterprises which are one of the features of our city.

For any orders we are favored with we guarantee good value and prompt attention.

For Impaired or Diseased Vision is a pair of

B. LAURANCE'S

Axis Cut Pebbles.

The frauds that have been perpertrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlers by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all important subject of the preservation of the sight. There are only two articles from which spectacle lenses can be manufactured, viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name, it still remains glass. Pebble on the other hand is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crytal found generally in freestone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald and nearly as hard as the diamond. The pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone cut by the aid of diamond dust, and the greater amount of power is placed immediately over the center of the grain found in the pebble. It will give to the spectacle wearer a coolness, freshness and a pleasant feeling that the ordinary spectacle lenses cannot by any possibility impart. All spectacles and eyeglasses are stamped B. L. Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds, Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skylights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bousley.

YOUR HAIR

should be your crowning glory. Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the vitality and color of youth to hair that has become thin and faded; and, where the glands are not decayed or absorbed, will cause a new growth on bald heads.

MAY the youthful color and vigor of the hair be preserved to old age? Read the following, from Mrs. G. Norton, Somerville, Mass.: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past 30 years, and, although I am upwards of 60, my hair is as abundant and glossy to-day as when I was 25."

BE assured, that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor will convince you of its powers. Mrs. M. E. Goff, Leadville, Col., writes: "Two years ago, my hair having almost entirely fallen out, I commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. To-day my hair is 29 inches long, fine, strong, and healthy."

RENEWED and strengthened by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, the hair regains its youthful color and vitality. Rev. H. P. Williamson, Davidson College, Mecklenburg Co., N. C., writes: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the last ten years. It is an excellent preservative."

BY the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, Geo. A. Dadman, Waterloo, Mo., had his hair restored to its original healthy condition. He was nearly bald, and very gray. He writes: "Only four bottles of the Vigor were required to restore my hair to its youthful color and quantity."

USING Ayer's Hair Vigor cures diseases of the scalp. F. H. Foster, Princeton, Ind., writes: "I had been troubled for years with a disease of the scalp; my head was covered with dandruff, and the hair dry and harsh. Ayer's Hair Vigor gave me immediate relief, cleansed the scalp, and rendered the hair soft and pliable."

GEORGE J. WINCHESTER

Poet's Corner.

The Poet and the Children.

BY JOHN G. WHITTIER.

With glory of winter sunshine
  Over his locks of gray,
In the old historic mansion
  He sat on his last birthday.

With his books and his pleasant pictures,
  And his household and his kin,
While a sound as of myriads singing,
  From far and near stole in.

It came from his own fair city,
  From the prairie's boundless plain,
From the Golden Gate of sunset,
  And the cedarn woods of Maine.

And his heart grew warm within him,
  And his moistening eyes grew dim,
For he knew that his country's children
  Were singing the songs of him:

The lays of his life's glad morning,
  The psalms of his evening time,
Whose echoes shall float forever
  On the winds of every clime.

All their beautiful consolations,
  Sent forth like birds of cheer,
Came flocking back to his windows,
  And sang in the Poet's ear.

Grateful, but solemn and tender,
  The music rose and fell,
With a joy akin to sadness,
  And a greeting like farewell.

With a sense of awe he listened
  To the voices sweet and young;
The last of earth and the first of heaven
  Seemed in the songs they sung.

And waiting a little longer
  For the wonderful change to come,
He heard the Summoning Angel
  Who calls God's children home!

And to him, in a holier welcome,
  Was the mystical meaning given,
Of the words of the blessed Master:
  "Of such is the kingdom of Heaven!"

—Wide Awake.

Farewell.

BY C. F. HOBART.

Fare thee well!—the word is spoken—
  Lips have breathed the last adieu—
Hearts have bled o'er pleasures broken,
  Pure as friendship ever knew;
Fare thee well—may absence find thee
  Still the same as now thou art—
Treasured thoughts of those behind thee
  Dwell forever near thy heart.

Looks lit up with hope may meet thee
  In some far and stranger land;
Welcome smiles of pleasure greet thee,
  Eyes of love and voices bland,—
But when brightly pass before thee
  All the joys of Fashion's train—
Memory's magic charm steal o'er thee,
  Bear thee to thy home again.

Hearts bring agony to-morrow,
  Whence to-day their solace springs—
Checquer'd scenes of light and sorrow
  Mark the course of human things.
Soon, alas! the fairest roses
  Lie disrobed of all their bloom—
And life's pageantry discloses
  But a pathway to the tomb.

Spirit-sentinels protect thee,
  Till thy final hour may come;
Faith unwavering then direct thee
  To thine amaranthine home—
Where, with songs of joy and gladness,
  Friends may walk the pearly shore,
And the parting words of sadness
  Stir the depths of grief no more.

In the April number of Lippincott's Magazine a novel series of articles is commenced under the general heading of "Our Experience Meetings," in which a sort of public confessional will be provided for leading authors, actors, artists, politicians, business men, etc., who feel autobiographically disposed. The present meeting is attended by Julian Hawthorne, Edgar Fawcett, and Joel Chandler Harris, each of whom gives an interesting sketch of his literary career, as seen from the inside. Alice Wellington Rollins contributes a well written essay, "Two Days in Utah, by an Impressionist," discussing the Mormon question from a common-sense point of view. The present instalment of "Taken by Siege" takes us to a meeting of the "Daughters of Sappho" at Delmonico's, to a millionaire's ball, etc., introducing a number of familiar types in New York social and literary life, while "A Bachelor's Blunder" gives us chapters in the early married life of Mr. and Mrs. Dick Herbert. The Monthly Gossip is full of live discussions of current affairs, and there are poems by C. H. Phelps, Dora Read Goodale, and Charlotte Fiske Bates.

THE SPRING MONTHS are undoubtedly the best in which to purify the blood and strengthen the system, because at this time the body is most susceptible to the beneficial effects of a reliable medicine like Hood's Sarsaparilla. The feeling of debility, languor, and lassitude, caused by the changing season, is entirely overcome, and scrofula and all humors are expelled from the blood by the powerful reviving and purifying influences of Hood's Sarsaparilla. Do not delay. Take Hood's Sarsaparilla now. It is made by C. I. Hood & Co., Apothecaries, Lowell, Mass. Sold by all druggists. 100 Doses One Dollar.

Soon the ice man will be calling around.

Always avoid harsh purgative pills. They first make you sick and then leave you constipated. Carter's Little Liver Pills regulate the bowels and make you well. Dose, one pill.

THE BEST

boon ever bestowed upon man is perfect health, and the true way to insure health is to purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Eliza A. Clough, 34 Arlington st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful purifier, it is very much superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla. All persons of scrofulous or consumptive tendencies, and especially delicate children, are sure to be greatly benefited by its use." J. W. Starr, Laconia, Iowa, writes: "For years I was troubled with Scrofulous complaints. I tried several different preparations, which did me little, if any, good. Two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a complete cure. It is my opinion that this medicine is the best blood of the day." C. E. Upton, Nashua, N.H., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and unable to obtain relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have taken several bottles, am greatly benefited, and believe it to be the best of blood purifiers." R. Harris, Creel City, Ramsey Co., Dakota, writes: "I have been an intense sufferer, with Dyspepsia, for the past three years. Six months ago I began to use

Blood

Purifier

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

It has effected an entire cure, and I am now as well as ever."

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M.]

The popular verdict in Boston regarding the successor of Joshua Whitcomb, is by no means doubtful. Applauding audiences have manifested unmistakably their liking for The Old Homestead. Uncle Josh is as amusingly natural as possible; and in the scene where he supposes the house is afire, fairly convulses his hearers. There is a great deal of music introduced in the course of the piece, and the company does justice to all their allotted work.

Prince Karl is a decidedly interesting piece of dramatic work, performed as it is on the stage of the Boston Museum. Richard Mansfield presents to view in the title character a study as complete in every detail, and, in its way as effective as that widely different portrayal, the Baron in A Parisian Romance. From the moment he comes upon the scene, the very embodiment of the stiff, military German officer, until the close, when he wins his Florence, the impersonation of the central figure of the play holds steadily an audience's interest. Miss Cragin gives a charming performance as the heiress. It will draw the public during the next fortnight—beyond which Mr. Mansfield's season here, owing to other engagements, cannot be extended.

The beautiful waltz song, "What is this day," invariably arouses enthusiasm. It is the gem of Nanon, which boasts of a score containing much that is charming to hear. At the Hollis Street, the opera has held the stage to excellent audiences for a fortnight. Nanon is beautifully staged and attractively costumed. As a spectacle, not less than as an opera, it has stronger claims upon attraction.

The author of Adonis is the man who has given the stage the reigning burlesque at the Bijou. Mr. Gill's Arcadia, presented in two acts, offers varied entertainment to those who are fond of extravaganza, like music and dancing, and are not wholly averse to seeing a coterie of pretty girls behind the footlights. The burlesque is staged in a very pretty and unique fashion, and Mr. Braham's music enlivens the progress of the piece. Arcadia will be the offering of Messrs. Miles and Barton throughout the week and until further notice.

Fannie Davenport in Fedora, supported by R. B. Mantell, is the attraction, and a strong one, at the Park Theatre this week. This will be the last time that Miss Davenport will be seen in this part for some time.

The repertoire of the Madison Square company during its engagement here will be a good one. The novelties will include Saints and Sinners, Sealed Instructions, and Broken Vows, while the popular successes, Engaged and Old Love Letters, will also be given.

Denman Thompson played for more money and to more people Fast day than he ever before did in his professional career. When the curtain went up on the first scene of The Old Homestead at the matinee, every seat had been sold for the two performances (afternoon and evening,) and thousands of applicants at the box office were notified that "only admissions" could be purchased

The management of the Hollis street Theatre have wisely provided a half price rate for reserved seats sold to children for the Hollis Street Theatre matinees.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm," writes Mrs. M. A. Jackson, of Portsmouth, N. H. "I had catarrh for three years! Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."

I was a sufferer from catarrh for fifteen years, with distressing pain over my eyes. The disease worked down upon my lungs. I used Ely's Cream Balm with gratifying results. Am apparently cured. —Z. C. Warren, Rutland, Vt.

Two teaspoonfuls of powdered charcoal in a half glass of water, and drink often, will give instant relief to ordinary headache. If you don't believe it try it.

Read all the advertisements of spring medicines, and then take Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the best blood purifier.

Now limber up your white-wash brush.

If you are nervous or dyspeptic try Carter's Little Nerve Pills. Dyspepsia makes you nervous, and nervousness makes you dyspeptic; either one renders you miserable and these little pills cure both.

The twenty-four hour clock is replacing the twelve.

Why wear out with continual coughing at night, when Ayer's Cherry Pectoral will relieve, soothe and cure?

House cleaners are having a scrub race.

Erysipelas and Salt Rheum was driven entirely away from Mrs. J. C. Anderson, Peshtigo, Wis., by Burdock Blood Bitters. No equal as a blood purifier.

Winter has gone and spring has come,
Good-bye to snow and cold;
We're pretty sure of better days
If the weather'll only hold.

THE FIRST KEEN TWINGE.—As the season advances, the pains and aches by which rheumatism makes itself known are experienced after every exposure. It is not claimed that Hood's Sarsaparilla is a specific for rheumatism—we doubt if there is, or can be, such a remedy. But the thousands benefited by Hood's Sarsaparilla. warrant us in urging others who suffer from rheumatism to take it before the first keen twinge. (B)

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW IN HIS LIBRARY

Our engraving of "Longfellow in His Library," of which the above cut is a miniature copy, is an accurate representation of the room which Longfellow used from 1837 until the time of his death, and it will undoubtedly be accepted as the favorite picture of the "American Popular Poet." The likeness is good; the attitude and expression happily betoken a mind deeply occupied in the task before him, and everyone who admires and appreciates the writings of the poet, will be pleased to see the appointments of the room in which he worked, together with a faithful portrait of him. Remember that this is no chromo, but a Superb Steel-plate Engraving, 24x32 inches in size.

The central figure is that of the Great Poet. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical. The artizan is in his workshop. Aside from from being the workshop of our immortal poet, it was the room in which Gen. George Washington made his headquarters, directly after the battle of Bunker Hill.

We shall offer this engraving till February 1st, on the following conditions:

EVERY NEW SUBSCRIBER paying $2, in advance, for the PRESS, will receive a copy FREE.

Old Subscribers, in arrears, who will settle to date and pay one year in Advance, will receive a copy.

Subscribers who pay in advance an have the PRESS and engraving by paying $2.50.

BOXFORD.

No spring poets have, as yet, put in an appearance here, but spring has come, nevertheless, with its two principal products, mud and pussy-willows. The latter are sleek and pretty but many of them small, as tho' not yet fully decided whether to keep on growing, or to wait awhile until the sun shines, and the vane gets its head to the south. The former is abundant, and so the residents say, is diminishing in depth, which still varies from the thickness of a sole to the length of tall rubber boots; a pair of which, sole relic of the late Peabody flood, we brought along to test it with.

The birds seem not to have mistaken the season, and robins and blackbirds are busy with their spring house-cleaning; but perhaps if we could know the thoughts of the redbreasts which sang so sweetly this morning we might find that they sing to keep their courage up while the east winds blow so fiercely, and the sun is hidden by the leaden clouds.

Business here is not so brisk as in former years when the match factory was running, though considerable timber has been cut. J. B. Thomas' teams have been busy hauling pine timber to his box factory in Middleton.

Boxford, in former years, did considerable business in preparing and teaming ship timber to the yards at Essex, and this is still kept up at the saw mills of Mr. S. W. Howe, and Israel Herrick, though the teaming is mostly turned over to the railroads. The old teamsters tell long stories of night journeys of miles to Essex with ox teams.

The bare trees show very decided marks of the devastation wrought by the ice storm in the winter. Shade and forest trees were broken, large branches splitting down under the weight of ice. Cords of wood were thus brought to the ground, and the trees will not in one season recover their symmetry.

It isn't much of a season for farm work, but all interested in what may occupy one's time in this vacation week, may rest assured that the skill acquired in boyhood in wielding the axe is finding an ample field for exercise in clearing up the debris of the ice storm.

J. K.C.

The millinery opening of Almy, Bigelow & Washburn was a grand affair in every sense of the word. The lady in charge of this department fairly outdid herself, and our readers can do no better than to rely upon her judgment in selecting their hats and bonnets. And what is true of the millinery department is true of every other in this popular store. We refer our readers to the new advertisement this week for full particulars. It would take half cur paper to enumerate the bargains to be found at this store.

John P. Peabody announces that he will take the lead in kid gloves and hosiery this season, and from the large display and elegant assortment of goods which we see in these departments, we should judge there might be a good reason for such assumption on his part. Certainly, in all our experience with this store, we have never seen Mr. Peabody's judgment and taste in selecting goods so forcibly displayed as at the present time. We can assure our readers that it will pay to look over his stock.

Mr. Jacob C. Rodger and family will pass the summer in Europe.

CLOSED HIS LABOR.

Rev. Mr. Smith preached at the Methodist church last Sunday his closing sermon,—it being the end of the Conference year and the close of the three years' limit to the pastorate in this church. The reverend gentleman preached from Phillippians 1:27, "Only let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ; that whether I come and see you, or else be absent, I may hear of your affairs, that ye stand fast in one spirit, with one mind striving together for the faith of the gospel."

This epistle to the Phillippians shows the marked affection between Paul and the church there, which was supplemented by temporal gifts to the writer while in prison, which was the occasion for the epistle. How earnestly he desires to visit the church again for purposes of spiritual improvement. He realizes the difficulty of this, however, still he says that whether he is able to do so or not, "Only let your conversation be as becometh the gospel of Christ." Our word conversation does not express the full meaning of the apostle. The original word signifies deportment and conduct and citizenship. The same word is used in the third chapter; "Our citizenship is in heaven." This epistle brings out this idea of citizenship. Paul would have the church demean themselves as citizens of heaven. A citizen of a country sustains peculiar relations to that country, and which are transferred from one country to another when the citizenship is transferred. The apostle brings out the idea that we are not citizens of this world.

Citizenship carries with it the right and responsibility of protection. Wherever an American citizen is he is under the protection of its flag. But he must harmonize his acts with the laws of the government. So long as he is thus obedient to its laws he is entitled to protection. So in this other citizenship, so long as we keep God's law and the requirements of the gospel we are under the protection of God.

This right of citizenship means something. The preacher cited the case of an American citizen arrested in a foreign country and condemned to die. The appeals and protest of our consul for a fair trial had no weight, and just as the soldiers were about to fire, the consul threw over the condemned man the American flag, and said, "Now fire if you dare." They did not dare. So it is wherever the christian walks. If he has kept the law of the gospel he is as safe as in his own home. Daniel was just as safe in the lion's den as the honey bee among the flowers. So Peter chained in prison was delivered by the angels. Elisha saw himself surrounded by chariots of soldiers in his defence. Jesus said he could pray to His Father who would send legions of angels to his aid. But not so was the end to be accomplished. In this spirit the christian can walk the path of pain and the fires will not burn.

The apostle would have christians deport themselves in harmony with God's laws, and draw into relationship with Christ. The apostle wanted to hear from the church at Phillippi. How could words be more appropriate to the occasion in which the preacher was placed, "That ye stand fast in one spirit." This is a military expression, signifying "hold the fort." The church is to stand fast in one spirit. How many there are who stand fast only on the rock of their own opinion, acting only on that, no matter what others may think. If a brother has done what is good and entitles him to the respect of the church, how many there are ready to say this or that to bring him down. True nobility is to do good to all, to be the servant of all, and have one spirit of love. They should stand fast in one spirit and along the line of majorities. Majorities rule in America. The preacher had long since learned to coincide with the majority of his official board when they had drawn out a line of action, whether his individual opinion was in accordance with it or not. During the three years with this church, however, he had no occasion for the above remark. They had stood by him nobly. He had never been pained by any member of his church or congregation. He had received courteous treatment in all relations. He had never found a church in which he had labored with so much sweetness and unity. He felt it to be a privilege thus to speak.

The preacher then referred to the three years which had just closed. Its history may not be written but its active, open, visible work is done. He had tried to preach the gospel of Jesus Christ plainly and faithfully, and to do what he was able to induce men to be reconciled to God. Some have done so, and no two persons can be closer united than the pastor of a church and a young convert. Some of this church had gone to the spirit world,—only one, however, this year, sister Davis, who was translated April 23d. One year in heaven and glory. Who can tell what she has seen? Then there was sister Littlefield who passed away just after the preacher had come. These two were the first and the last. To-day another of his congregation lies on the bed side of death, but says: "I am willing and ready for the master." And there is another who was a strong man when the preacher commenced his labors with the church, and who is now ready to depart—whose life is closing. The preacher closed by invoking God's spirit that all might meet him in a higher life. He referred to the tender associations with the other pastors of the town—with brother Shipman of the Baptist church and brother Sperry, the late pastor of the South church. As far as the preacher knew, he left no enemy behind him—no one who did not bid him God speed.

At the close of his sermon Rev. Mr. Smith read some figures giving the results of the year. At the beginning of the year the number of members in full connection with the church was 136. Three had left by letter, one without and one has died. Three have been received by letter and ten from probation, making a total of 145—a gain of nine. At the beginning of the year the number on probation was fourteen and fourteen have been received during the year. Ten have been received into full membership, one has left and two have been dropped, leaving fifteen now on probation.

There was raised for general missionary work $203.43; for general church benevolence, $282.43; by the Ladies' Aid Society, $71.82; for current expenses, $1549; other collections, $60; making a total of $2261.73

The pastor added that when the amount pledged and not paid in, which was only a few dollars, had been paid, all the expenses of the church would be liquidated.

The concert at the Methodist church last Sunday evening was attended by a large number completely filling the house. Mr. Henry Gilman, the superintendent of the school, opened the exercises by briefly reviewing the condition of the school, and said it had been blessed in many ways and had increased in numbers and financially, and some who did not know Christ a year ago had now found Him. He then called upon the secretary of the school who reported that there was a balance on hand from last year amounting to $27.68; there was $190.84 collected in the Sabbath school and $20.54 at Sunday school concerts, and from other sources sufficient to make a total of $298.83, and from this had been paid out $258.89 leaving a balance of $39.94. There were 233 members of the school, 24 of whom were teachers, and the average attendance of teachers was 19 and that of the pupils 111. The report of the librarian showed that 100 new books had been added during the year and 65 thrown out, leaving a total of 472 besides about 165 belonging to the infant class. The average circulation was 30 a Sunday. The exercises were continued by a recitation by Harry Goodwin, followed by six of the infant class and scriptural readings by older members.

Mr. Gilman at this point, in behalf of the school and in consideration of the departure of Rev. Mr. Smith the pastor, said he wished to speak of the happy relation existing between the school and Mr. and Mrs. Smith, who came here three years ago, and each immediately took a class in the school and have been untiring in their efforts since until the teachers and pupils have learned to love them, and by a rising vote of the school (here the whole school stood up) he wished to thank him for his work, and go where he would their best wishes and prayers would be with him until the master said: "well done; come up higher." A few minutes later Rev. Mr. Smith was called upon for a few remarks and very feelingly said that the kind expression by the superintendent and school had touched him very much and would ask God's blessing for all. He believed in the Sunday school work and he believed in the concerts, as they engage the thoughts of the little ones and leave a lasting impression on their minds, even more than a sermon. The school itself had no superior in the New England Conference. This was the 46th anniversary of the school, and in reviewing the records he found that 40 years ago the school numbered 75 scholars and of those who taught them the only survivor was Miss Elizabeth Bagley, who taught the infant class for 24 consecutive years. In closing he extended to the school his cordial good will and advised that heaven be found and their happiness be complete. "May He who watches over the sparrows' fall watch over you." A collection was taken by four little girls. The exercises closed by the arranging of letters on the cords of a large harp on the platform made from evergreen and roses, so that it read "Praise ye the Lord." Each little girl recited a verse before completing a letter. The exercises were closed with the Doxology by the whole congregation.

Miss Mary B. Wilson is now ready show her friends in Peabody the spring assortment of choice styles in hats and bonnets. Don't forget her.

SPARKS.

The sixth annual concert and ball of the "Three Ones and a Two" of the Peabody Fire Department, at the Town Hall, last Wednesday evening, passed off in good shape and can be classed as a grand success, with the exception of the supper which proved to be a failure, much to the disappointment of the committee of arrangements and all others concerned. The balconies were filled to overflowing early in the evening and at the time of the opening number in the concert programme by the Salem Brass Band the floor of the hall was also filling up with ladies and gentlemen. The concert programme consisted of seven numbers and was well rendered by this popular band to the great satisfaction of the large audience. At 9 o'clock the grand march was started, lead off by Chief Tibbetts and his daughter, 140 couples taking part, after which the twenty-six dances and fancies were danced in their regular order, the last being on the floor at 5.15 o'clock in the morning. There were over 200 couples on the floor at nearly every dance, the scene as witnessed from the balconies was rich in the extreme, the varied costumes of the ladies blending with the red and blue uniforms of the firemen, making a very animated appearance. The Salem Band Orchestra furnished excellent music for the dance. Firemen were present from Lynn, Salem, Beverly, Danvers, Malden, Somerville, Nashua, N. H., Biddeford, Me., Marblehead, Essex, Andover and other places, showing that the affair was well advertised. The orders were a neat and appropriate design, firemen and military, and were printed by Fernald & Vittum, 1000 being given out. The slight pitch to the floor of the hall was hardly perceptible. Every one enjoyed themselves thoroughly and only regretted that the night was not longer. The horse cars in the morning were crowded to overflowing with tired looking dancers. The committee worked hard to make the ball a success and it appears as though their efforts were successful, as nearly $150 will be netted. It has also demonstrated the fact that people in this town will patronize a ball where there are any facilities for looking on and enjoying the music. The reception committee had their hands full in receiving out of town firemen. The expenses of the ball were nearly $400 and it was a big undertaking to carry it out.

Abram Lummus began work on the alterations at the Central Station, Monday morning, and at present it is a discouraging looking sight. The solid brick wall between the stable and engine rooms will be cut through and iron girders put in. Seven stalls facing the apparatus, with doors opening outward, will be put in, so that when an alarm is given the horses can run forward to their places under the harness. A sliding pole will also be put in position leading from the hallway near the rooms to the floor below. It will take about three weeks for the work to be finished.

The contract has been signed with the Gamewell company and work has begun. The wire and tools arrived in town Monday, and on Tuesday three men began to paint the cross pieces for the wires to be hung from. They are painted white and lettered "Fire Alarm Telegraph." These will be put up on the telegraph and telephone poles as far as can be and then poles will be set. The bell striker will probably be located on the Universalist bell. The striking apparatus with weights weighs 1075 pounds. It will be about three months before the system is in operation.

An alarm was given on the bell of Hose 4 Sunday morning, at 8 o'clock, for a chimney on fire on Midway street. Hose 4 responded and laid a line. No other bells rang.

Spring Opening.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

SECOND FLOOR.

We cordially invite the Ladies of Salem and vicinity to our Opening of the largest and most carefully selected stock of Millinery Goods ever shown in this city, including Trimmed Bonnets and Round Hats, both imported and of our own design and execution. In Fancy Laces and Silk Lisses, we have many elegant patterns, and in some of the most delicate tints, fairly rivalling the shadings of nature. In Flowers, which are to be so largely used the coming season, we have a most attractive display, as fresh as from the garden, only lacking fragrance. We have also in Untrimmed Hats and Bonnets, a very large assortment from the strongest School Hat to the finest foreign make. In fact everything which goes to make up a complete stock. Mrs. A. C. Washburn, our manager, was in New York at the Importers' Opening in Feb. securing many choice things at that time, and has kept close watch of the market up to the present time. Having through years of experience formed a large acquaintance with Importing as well as Jobbing Houses, which gives her great advantage in selecting Desirable Styles and making Lowest Prices. Miss Sadie Bushby will remain with us, as will also Miss Etta Brown and Miss Hattie Gliddin. We have also secured the services of Miss Carrie Palmer, who will join our corps of popular sales ladies. And now we feel sure almost every lady calling on us next week, or after, will meet an old acquaintance who will gladly show them every attention, and will take a personal interest in pleasing.

Cloaks, Suits and Shawls.

SPRING, 1886.

We take pleasure in announcing to the Ladies of Salem and Essex County, that we have now open and ready for inspection our full line of Ladies, Misses and Children's Outside Garments, Wraps, Shawls, etc., for Spring and Summer wear. We may venture to say without any egotism, that our selections in this department far surpass anything we have previously offered. The increasing demand for superior Ready Made Garments and Suits has led us to exercise unusual care in selecting none but the best, both in material and workmanship, and we guarantee all to be just as represented. We have every style and quality a lady can wish for. Long Garments for driving and travelling, Short Wraps and Jackets for street wear in every available shade and colors, both Foreign and American make. Suits, stylish and of superior quality. Shawls, India Chuddas, Boucle, Cashmere, and Fancy Embroidered Scarfs in all grades and shades. Children's Garments, simply beautiful in Boucle, English, German and American Goods. Our Infants' Department requires especial mention for its variety of Long and Short Robes, Cloaks, Slips and Blankets.

Jersey Waists, fancy colors beaded. Mikado fronts, Vest fronts, Plain fronts and braided, in every variety; and a great many more equally good things that we have not space to mention.

We cordially invite you to come and see for yourselves, assuring all courteous attention, and any information we can bestow.

THE LADIES'

DONGOLA!

OFFICE OF ORDWAY & CLARK,

MANUFACTURERS OF

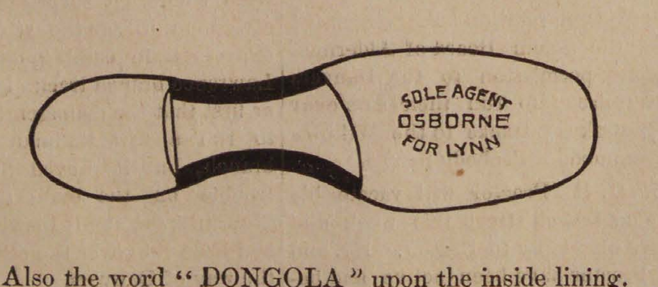
LADIES' FINE BOOTS AND SHOES.

HAVERHILL, MASS., February 25, 1886.

MR. WELLMAN OSBORNE, Lynn, Mass.

DEAR SIR: We have this day sent you a large invoice of our justly celebrated DONGOLA BOOTS. You will find they are all that has been claimed for them, and far ahead and entirely different from Kangaroo, Glove or Mat Kid. There is no other boot made for Ladies' wear which, for softness of finish, elegance of fit combined with such lasting durability, will give the entire satisfaction of this boot. They are something that has long been needed, as they wear better than French or American Kid, and will not stretch, turn purple, or look rusty. So popular and unprecedented has become the demand for these goods throughout the country, as the merits of the leather have become known, and so limited the importation of skins out of which the goods are manufactured, and so many imitations under similar names have been placed upon the market, that it has been found necessary to copyright the name.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED WITH OUR AGENTS NAME UPON THE SOLE, THUS:



Also the word "DONGOLA" upon the inside lining.

We shall give you the EXCLUSIVE SALE OF THESE BOOTS IN YOUR CITY, feeling confident with your large trade that they will find a ready market, judging from the large sales they have met with in other cities. Respectfully yours,

ORDWAY & CLARK.

Poet's Corner.

Aux Italiens.

At Paris it was, at the opera there;
And she looked like a queen in a book, that night,
With the wealth of pearl in her raven hair,
And the brooch on her breast so bright.

Of all the operas that Verdi wrote,
The best, to my taste, is the Trovatore;
And Mario can soothe, with a tenor note,
The souls in purgatory.

The moon on the tower slept soft as snow.
And who was not thrilled in the strangest way,
As we heard him sing, while the gas burned low,
"Non ti scordar di me?"

The emperor there, in his box of state,
Looked grave, as if he had just then seen
The red flag wave from the city gate,
Where his eagles in bronze had been.

The empress, too, with a tear in her eye,
You'd have said that her fancy had gone back again
For one moment, under the old blue sky,
To the old glad life in Spain.

Well! there in our front row box we sat
Together, my bride-betrothed and I;
My gaze was fixed on my opera hat,
And hers on the stage hard by.

And both were silent, and both were sad,
Like a queen she leaned on her full white arm,
With that regal indolent air she had;
So confident of her charm!

I have not a doubt she was thinking then
Of her former lord, good soul that he was!
Who died the richest and roundest of men
The Marquis of Carabas.

I hope that, to get to the kingdom of heaven.
Through a needle's eye he had not to pass.
I wish him well for the jointure given
To my lady of Carabas.

Meanwhile, I was thinking of my first love,
As I had not been thinking of aught for years,
Till over my eyes there began to move
Something that felt like tears.

I thought of the dress she wore last time,
When we stood 'neath the cypress-trees together,
In that lost land, in that soft clime,
In the crimson evening weather.

Of that muslin dress (for the eve was hot),
And her warm white neck in its golden chain,
And her full, soft hair, just tied in a knot,
And falling loose again.

And the jasmine flower in her fair young breast;
(Oh the faint, sweet smell of that jasmine flower!)
And the one bird singing alone in his nest;
And the one star over the tower.

I thought of our little quarrels and strife,
And the letter that brought me back my ring;
And it all seemed then, in the waste of life,
Such a very little thing.

For I thought of her grave below the hill,
Which the sentinel cypress-tree stands over,
And I thought, "Were she only living still,
How I could forgive her and love her!"

And I swear, as I thought of her thus, in that hour,
And of how, after all, old things are best,
That I smelt the smell of that jasmine flower,
Which she used to wear in her breast.

It smelt so faint, and it smelt so sweet,
It made me creep, and it made me cold!
Like the scent that steals from the crumbling sheet
Where a mummy is half unrolled.

And I turned, and looked. She was sitting there,
In a dim box over the stage; and drest
In that muslin dress, with that full soft hair,
And that jasmine in her breast!

I was here, and she was there;
And the glittering horse-shoe curved between;
From my bride-betrothed, with her raven hair,
And her sumptuous, scornful mien,

To my early love, with her eyes downcast,]
And over her primrose face the shade,
(In short, from the future back to the past,)
There was but a step to be made.

To my early love from my future bride
One moment I looked. Then I stole to the door.
I traversed the passage; and down at her side
I was sitting, a moment more.

My thinking of her, or the music's strain,
Or something which never will be exprest,
Had brought her back from the grave again,
With the jasmine in her breast.

She is not dead, and she is not wed!
But she loves me now, and she loved me then.
And the very first words that her sweet lips said,
My heart grew youthful again.

The marchioness there, of Carabas,
She is wealthy, and young, and handsome still;
And but for her—well, we'll let that pass;
She may marry whomever she will.

But I will marry my own first love,
With her primrose face, for old things are best;
And the flower in her bosom, I prize it above
The brooch on my lady's breast.

The world is filled with folly and sin.
And love must cling where it can, I say;
For beauty is easy enough to win;
But one isn't loved every day.

And I think, in the lives of most women and men,
There's a moment when all would go smooth and even If only the dead could find out when
To come back, and be forgiven.

But oh the smell of that jasmine flower!
And oh that music! and oh the way
That voice rang out from that donjon tower.
Non ti scordar di me,
Non ti scordar di me!

Selected Story.

A Superfluous Girl.

Another girl! ejaculated Mr. Simon Williams in answer to the nurse's announcement. That makes four of 'em, and only two boys, and one of them weakly.

This is a fine baby, sir, said nurse, and seems strong and lively. She's got some lungs of her own, I can tell you, and you ought to be thankful to have such a promising child, she added, with a little indignant inflection in her voice.

Of course I am, said Mr. Williams, in a more gracious tone. You don't suppose I wanted a fool or a cripple, but the fact is I'd set my mind on a boy, and girls are enough sight more in the way, unless they've got some snap to 'em, and precious little the other three have got, not a bit like my side of the house.

I reckon this one'll have snap enough, laughed the nurse, if she goes on as she's begun, and she hastened back to attend to her new charge.

Said little bit of humanity was at present nothing but an apparently quiet bundle of flannel, pressed lovingly to the side of the pale mother, who sighed as she met nurse's cheery glance.

I suppose Mr. Williams is disappointed, she said, for he wanted a boy so much, and it is a hard world for girls any way.

He'll like her well enough when he gets used to her, and sees how smart and strong she is, answered nurse encouragingly. I guess she won't be in the way much, only give her a chance. You jest go to sleep now, and when you feel a little stronger you won't mind his coming in to see the baby.

Mr. Williams had really a good heart underneath a rough and irritable exterior, but he was quite wanting in the native refinement and generous nature which often made the contrast between himself and his wife so apparent. His temper was at times ungovernable, and his family dreaded his presence when he allowed it to master him. His children rarely gave him their confidence, and the boys feared the ready blow which came almost as promptly as the harsh word, while the daughters either submitted silently or avoided exciting his displeasure.

Forty years ago, when this story begins, the life of the daughters of a family had very little range or scope and the nurse's words "only give her a chance," meant a great deal more than they would to-day, when door after door is opened to the girl as well as to her brother.

Welcome or not, this little blue eyed daughter had come to stay, and she showed it in every fibre of her positive little body as time went on. Her assertion and aggressiveness, however, were redeemed by a warm, generous nature, and a readiness to make full amends for any little naughtiness.

Mr. Williams himself did not complain of any lack of "snap" in this last of the four daughters, and was not quite certain whether to secretly sympathize or lose his temper when she half defiantly resented an irritable impatience or unjust rebuke on his part.

She's got lots of my side of the house in her after all, he thought with something of a secret chuckle, as he saw the sturdy little figure and uplifted head at such times, and noticed the deepening color of cheek and eyes, and the fearless glance with which she met his.

There was some trouble in deciding upon a name, but Pauline was finally compromised on in memory of a favorite sister of Mr. Williams who had recently died. The length of this appellation did not suit the little damsel, who insisted on calling herself Paul, and after a while she went largely by that name among the other children and her playmates, which caused various complications through having a boy's name attached to a little girl.

She's just as good's a boy, anyway, if she is only five years old, said the younger brother Rob, one day when this was being discussed. He was only four years older than herself, and was very fond of her, and nothing pleased the little maiden better than to coast with him on her small sled, or help build snow men, and exchange snowballs in most lively fashion.

A regular Tom-boy! said the elder sisters, who felt very much as if some strange birdling had shared the common nest.

But Paul only laughed and found vent for exuberant life and spirits by climbing the trees and fences, and even the lamp post near by, and tearing through the lane at the back of the house in a race with her brother and his mates, to see which could first touch the old tree at the end of it.

Once to her mother's great fright she fearlessly climbed on to the very ridgepole of the barn to rescue a pet kitten which had gone up by a grape trellis, and not daring to descend, mewed piteously till Pauline went to her rescue. Unable to use the somewhat decayed trellis, the girl had availed herself of the fence, then of a neighbor's shed, and finally of the stout pole that supported a large bird house. The mother held her breath as she saw her descending these doubtful supports with her kitten clinging tightly to her, and relieved her overwrought feelings with tears, which greatly distressed Pauline, who promised penitently with many caresses never to attempt such a feat again.

I only thought how scared poor kitty was, and I didn't feel the least afraid. She looked real thankful when she saw me.

From ten to fourteen, Pauline was her brother's frequent companion in skating or rowing, or taking long tramps with him after berries, wild flowers or nuts, while the patient much enduring mother beheld with dismay the serious inroads made upon dresses and boots.

Let her alone! said her father, in his more kindly moods, delighted that she had so much life and energy, while at other times he called her an idle good-for-nothing, a useless member of the family, for Pauline found it difficult to sit down to her sewing in the long bright half school days, or remain in the hot, close kitchen long at a time.

I said I never wanted any more girls. We had enough already, he would repeat when vexed at some lapse in the directions, or when his somewhat tightly held purse was opened to meet the necessary additions to Pauline's much abused wardrobe.

No other baby had followed Pauline, and in the years which had passed since her unwelcome appearance, the eldest daughter had married and gone to a western home, and John, the elder of the two sons, had entered a banking house in a neighboring city.

I'm glad, Rob, that you're not going away for a long time yet, said Pauline affectionately, when these changes occurred. I should miss you so much.

I shall have to go by'me-by, Paul, responded Rob, but I'll get a place near home and then I can come back for Thanksgiving and Christmas, and perhaps spend Sundays, too, and when I'm a rich man we'll live together, and you shall keep the house for me, only you'll have to learn a lot of things beforehand, you know, he added rather doubtfully, as he remembered Pauline's aversion to the kitchen and her sewing.

All right, she answered cheerfully. I'll be settled down then and I won't feel as though I must get into the fresh bright air and just race about for the very fun of it. You see, although I enjoy school and my books, it is rather too bad to be shut up over those long sums while the sun and the wind and the birds and flowers seem to be just calling me all the time, and with a toss of her long brown hair she rushed off like a young deer, challenging Rob, who was nothing loth, to a race through the lane.

That girl will break her neck yet, said her father fretfully to his wife one day. There she was this morning in the horse pasture, riding old Charley round at the top of his speed, with nothing but the halter to guide him, and astride of him like a boy. I shouted to her from the road, but she just waved her hand to me and rattled across the pasture as though she didn't hear me. I don't see what you are thinking about not to keep her more in-doors and busy like other girls.

Because, answered the anxious

looking mother, who was quite used to being blamed on Pauline's account, she's not like other girls, who could not be induced to do half the things which she delights in. It isn't because I haven't tried hard enough with her. I don't see where she gets all those ways from, and yet there's nothing mean or small about her, and she is never wilfully disobedient.

I knew the moment I set eyes on her she'd be a bother; she might as well have been a boy clear through. Now she's neither one nor the other, grumbled her father.

Yet when Pauline appeared a few minutes later with her school books under her arm, and a great bouquet of wild flowers for her mother, which she had gone quite out of her way to gather, her cheeks all aglow with her rapid walk, and her deep blue eyes bright with health, the mother, who dearly loved this troublesome child, could not say a word as to her recent escapade with old Charley, but thanked her with a kiss which the girl returned with a loving hug.

She's got such a good heart she can't but come out all right, thought the mother silently as she placed the flowers in water.

The years went by and Pauline and a somewhat delicate sister were all of the once large family of children left at home. The second daughter was also married, and Rob had persuaded his father to let him enter a technical school in the same city where John was, from which he could soon graduate as civil engineer. Pauline had missed her brother very much at first, but she had been the confidant of all his hopes and plans, and as she realized how far his advanced education was taking him out of one part of her life, she easily persuaded him to repeat his German lessons with her when at home, and as she developed a decided tatse for languages, she included in her high school course Latin and French, and thus felt that the beloved brother was not getting too far away from studies of mutual interest.

At seventeen she had lost most of her Tom-boy ways, though she still dearly liked a long ramble or row with Rob in his vacation, and always looked forward to a skating match with him in the holidays. Old Charley had been replaced by a much younger steed, which her mother and sister regarded with considerable trepidation, and consequently Pauline was more frequently her father's companion in his drives, sharing as she did his love for a spirited horse.

Mr. Williams had long ago accepted the situation as regarding his superfluous daughter, and in the absence of both sons had learned to depend upon her for many little services which increasing years and some infirmities rendered necessary. He had been a good manager, and had lived prudently on a moderate income for years without any regular business, the care of some real estate and the cultivation of several inherited fields just outside the town taking most of his time. The latter provided the hay for a horse and cow, and the vegetables for the family use.

While the boys were at home little help was hired about the place, but now a stout, somewhat stolid young German had charge of the grounds and stable, who was greatly delighted that Pauline could understand him in his native tongue. The Fraulein, as Hans called her, was the most wonderful young lady he knew of, and he admired the deft way in which she assisted in harnessing Prince, when in too much of a hurry to wait for his slow movements.

Her early out-of-door life and exercise had given her an erect, graceful figure, and her bright, intelligent face and frank ways made her a general favorite. Her old impetuous manner and almost restless energy were no longer apparent. A deeper life and more earnest purpose were stirring the currents of the young girl's dawning womanhood, and her mother's heart silently rejoiced over this daughter whom she secretly acknowledged as the dearest of her children, if she could possibly allow herself to make any discrimination. The day she graduated from the high school as the valedictorian of her class, looking so radiantly fresh and fair as she came forward to receive her well earned diploma, her father, who had sat earnestly regarding her with a feeling of pride and a new realization of what she really was to him, suddenly found himself recalling the day of her birth and his answer to the nurse who had brought him the unwelcome news. God forgive me, he thought. What would we all be without her? She brightens up the whole house.

Pauline was no longer the superfluous girl, and when in less than a year from that time, her idolized mother was suddenly snatched from them, and the confirmed invalidism of her sister obliged her to take full charge of the household, her stricken father, who had never known before what his gentle patient wife had been to him, leaned on her as if their positions were wholly reversed. Obliged to keep back her grief for his sake, and giving way to it only when by herself, she felt as if she could never have met the demand made upon her had she not sought in the silent communion of her chamber the strength which can alone come from a trusting reliance on Him who doth not willingly afflict. Bob's tender sympathy was also a tower of strength.

She's just the dearest and pluckiest girl you ever saw, said the latter to his classmate and chum, Rufus, and you'll say so when you see her.

Rufus thought so, if he did not say so, when he did see her as curiosity at first led him to do, but it was some time after that he asked her to be his wife.

Her sister had soon followed her mother, and her father's health seemed completely shattered. I can never leave him while he lives, she answered tearfully, when Rufus pleaded his suit. I am his youngest child, and the only daughter at liberty to give him the special care he needs, and he shall never feel a want that I can supply.

I would gladly welcome him to our home, said her lover earnestly, and I promise you I will be as a son to him.

He would never be contented any where but here, she replied, and he is peculiar and would be miserably unhappy to share my love and care with another. Besides, we are both young, and you have hardly entered upon your profession.

Rufus sought Bob and begged him to convince Pauline that her father would be just as happy with them as in his own home.

It's of no use, said Bob. If Pauline has made up her mind, that ends it. I never saw the time when self came first with her, and her patience with father's ways is unbounded. I almost wonder at it, he added, for when she was little, I've heard him say many a time, when he was provoked about some trifle, that she came without being asked.

Such a girl can't help making a good wife, God bless her, exclaimed Rufus, and I'll wait for her as long as Jacob did for Rachel, if necessary.

It was nearly five years before Pauline's dutiful and loving care of her father ceased. She had become as the very apple of his eye, and almost his last words were those of thanks and blessing for the once superfluous daughter.

Seem's though, said faithful old Hannah, who had been in the family many years, he couldn't bear her out of his sight those last days. Times had changed wonderful.

Pauline has been the happy wife of Rufus Hosman for many years, with many children of her own, not one of whom but was welcomed into the world which will surely be the better and brighter for their being in it.

Rob has never married, and makes his home with his sister. She promised me years ago, he says laughingly, she'd keep house for me, but as Rufus spoilt all that, I had to have her do it for me sort of second hand, you know.

The children think that Uncle Rob is just perfection, and could never by any possibility belong any where else.—Boston Traveller.

THE SILO.—AN INTERVIEW WITH AARON F. GRAY OF LYNNFIELD.

Six years ago, Mr. Gray of Lynnfield, believing in ensilage as the most economical food for cows, built a silo forty feet long, fourteen and a half feet wide, and of the same depth. At that time the farm he had purchased produced only hay enough for the support of two cows. The last two years it has carried twenty-two cows and two horses, the former being fed summer and winter, there being no pasturage on the place, on the ensilage produced, while the latter are kept the entire year on the hay which it yields. The ensilage fed, about two hundred tons, was produced on eight and a half acres of land, from an application of five cords of manure, all of which was made on the place, and one hundred pounds of superphosphate to the acre. The seed used was Blunt's Prolific, fourteen quarts to the acre, which was sown with the fertilizer, and covered with the Albany planter. The corn was gathered in the milk and cut three-eighths of an inch by steam power, belonging to the premises. It was put in as rapidly as possible, covered closely with plank and weighted with thirty tons of stone, Mr. Gray believing that the heat generated in Silos slowly filled was injurious to ensilage. An important fact established by repeated trials is, that the chemical change that takes place in the corn to convert it into ensilage is decidedly beneficial, rather than injurious, his cows giving from two to three cans of milk per day more, when fed on ensilage than when fed on corn, similar by cut, without having passed through any chemical change.

The cows in this herd, which are all in splendid condition, average from eight to nine quarts of milk per day through the year, the product having been taken from the first by one customer, who affirms it to be of the very highest quality, being richer than that produced from the very best English hay. There is in this herd one cow which has averaged sixteen quarts of milk per day for three years. Mr. Gray feeds to his milch cows, in addition to fifty pounds of ensilage per day, four quarts of corn meal, two quarts of cotton seed, and one quart of shorts, and waters them once a day, warming the water and scalding the grain in the winter season. The dry cows are fed on ensilage alone. The cows being fed rather heavily on grain are generally changed every two years, the animals disposed of going to the butcher in extra condition, who says the quality of their beef cannot be surpassed. In some instances the same cows have been kept in this herd three and four years. No case of sickness has occurred in this stable in all these years which was traceable to the ensilage consumed. The proprietor is certain that under no other system of management, can equal results be obtained. While the husbandman might do well in raising his own grain, he would do far better by devoting his land to corn for ensilage and purchasing his grain.

Although he is a wealthy man he does not believe in any system of farming, which requires the expenditure of two dollars in order to secure one in return, and resolved at the start that he would follow no such rule. His direct profits have been satisfactory, and his farm has been constantly and rapidly improving. His neighbors, who are very worthy men and in a measure successful husbandmen, when they witnessed the commencement of his operations, were very liberal in their predictions of failure, one of them advising him to purchase a forty-acre lot of good corn land which he owned, in order that he might fill his silo. Now that it has been filled to the brim with the product of eight and a half acres a quantity sufficient to carry twenty-two cows through the year, in place of the two which the farm had previously supported, these neighbors no longer acting in the role of teachers, are becoming willing and grateful learners. Mr. Gray is a very intelligent and communicative gentlemen and is always happy to conduct his visitors through his stables, and over his premises, and give them all the information in his power. We know of no one whose experiments in the new mode of keeping stock, have been more complete or exhaustive than his, and they have been from the start a perfect success. As he is not inclined to publish what he has done in the PRESS, or proclaim it in public assemblies, we advise all who can conveniently do so to call upon him at his home.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. WOOD, Bloomington, Ill.

For Twenty Years

I have been afflicted with rheumatism. Before 1883 I found no relief, but grew worse. I then began taking Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it did me more good than all the other medicine I ever had." H. T. BALCOM, Shirley, Mass.

"I suffered from what the doctors called muscular rheumatism. I took Hood's Sarsaparilla and am entirely cured." J. V. A. PROUDFOOT, letter carrier, Chicago, Ill.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,

Editors and Publishers

EVENTS WORTHY of more than a passing notice are the celebrations which have been going on the past week in our neighboring city and in Lowell—the occasion being the 25th anniversary of the call to arms of the first soldiers of the Rebellion. The Salem Zouaves, or Infantry, were the first to respond to the call from this vicinity for three months' men. They followed closely upon the old Sixth Massachusetts, whose march through Baltimore has been so graphically described during the years gone by, and recalled to our remembrance during the past few days. In that regiment, commanding one of the companies, was Col. Folansbee of this town, and it was he who led the troops who were exposed to the fire through Baltimore on that ever to be remembered day.

This march and the response of the Salem Zouaves is familiar to every student of U. S. History in these parts, even among the generation who have no personal knowledge of them. It reads like a story to them. And however well versed they may be, however they may read between the lines of history, they cannot understand the deep feeling manifest among those who were active participants in the events whether they went to the front under the banner of their country or remained at home and bade those God-speed who had enlisted.

The celebration of this anniversary, which has just been observed, recalls more vividly to the minds of all who were living actors the early beginnings of the war. Events of more moment followed; the dead were brought home to be buried on our soil, or the sad tidings of their death and burial in Southern soil came home to us. But the discipline of the war schooled us, in a measure, to these events, which were almost of daily occurrence. It was at the departure of the first troops, when the feeling of patriotism so latent in our sons and daughters, blazed forth in all its ardor. The indignation over the insult to our flag was followed by enthusiastic responses to the call for men. And nowhere was the feeling of patriotism more conspicuous than in old Essex County and in the old town of So. Danvers.

Among the Salem Zouaves were many from this town. Those who responded at the first call must necessarily go with the Salem militia. For it was not till later that a company was raised from this town. We find in the files of this paper a very full and intelligent account of the first doings of our citizens in response to the call. And we find therein a "Roll of Honor" of the boys from this town who went with these Salem Zouaves to the front April 18, 1861. The names are as follows:—Moses Shackley, James Nichols, Frank Hitchings, William Swasey, G. B. Symonds, Joseph Cobb, L. Dexter Cobb, Wm. F. Wiley, Sullivan Wiley, David Lake, Frank Plummer, H. Symonds.

These men all returned from the three months service; but not so did they desert their Country. They reenlisted and were engaged in many battles afterwards, some of them never returning.

It is also of interest to recall the names of the other volunteers from this town who left for the front at the same time. Finding them mentioned in the "Roll of Honor" which was published in this paper at that time, we reprint them for the remembrance of those who were participants in those stirring events, as well as for the information of those whose knowledge is simply a matter of history.

In the Salem Mechanic Infantry were enrolled J. H. Estes, 2d Sergeant; D. W. Jeffries, 2d Corp.; J. W. Hart, 3d Corp.; J. H. Sleeper, 4th Corp.; James Very, J. F. Ford, Elbridge H. Hildreth, George Wilkins, Samuel H. Buxton, Dennison Moore, Henry W. Moulton, Charles W. Gardner, W. W. Stiles.

In the City Guards were enrolled Kirk Stark, 1st Lieut.; W. F. Sumner, 2d Lieut.; G. H. Wiley, 3d Lieut.; John E. Stone, 4th Lieut.; J. A. Sumner, 2d Corp.; Hardy Millett, D. A. Guilford, Wm. H. Carr, John G. Estes, J. W. Low, Alpheus Eaton, J. W. Kelly, John Coserto, Thomas G. Murphy, D. H. Peirce, Oliver Parker, Henry Trask, W. D. Williams, George Hart.

These all left for the front in April. They were the first to represent our town. It is a record worthy of the spirit which inspired the "boys in blue." And while their record is no more honorable than others, at this time, the 25th anniversary of the breaking out of the war, it is fitting that we should bear them in remembrance.

In the issue of May 15th, 1861, we find the following additions to the roll, and these constitute all the enrollments we believe, until the formation of a company from this town:—Albert Upton, Coast Guard; John H. Tibbetts and Charles A. Gardner who enlisted in a Maine regiment from Castine; Horace Poole, who enlisted in the First Iowa; and the following in the Fitzgerald Guards:—Edward Gagan, James McLaughlin, Dennis Regan, James Powers.

On the morning of April 18th posters were displayed about our streets calling our citizens to assemble at the Town Hall, to devise measures for responding to the call to arms; to raise funds and to do any other work necessary. This call was signed by the following well known citizens:—R. G. Nelson, Stephen Blaney, S. C. Bancroft, Moses A. Shackley, Benj. C. Perkins. The meeting was one of great moment. The hall was full and at that time that meant great enthusiasm. Mr. Bancroft called the meeting to order; B. C. Perkins was chosen chairman and Charles D. Howard secretary. Among those whose speeches raised the patriotism to the highest pitch were Hon. B. C. Perkins, Hon. A. A. Abbott, S. C. Bancroft, Thomas E. Proctor, Isaac Hardy, John W. Proctor, Franklin Upton and H. L. Hadley. Some of these men are living to-day. Others have been called home with the soldiers who fell on the battle fields.

Of the young men who went forth from this town at the first call, whose name is on the death roll of the Salem Zouaves, and who fell early in the struggle, none is held in deeper remembrance by those who knew him,—and there are many such living to-day—than Moses Shackley. We find in the same edition of the paper which gave an account of the doings of that first war meeting, a letter from young Shackley, dated in New York City, April 19, 1861. It was full of patriotism, and was the first letter of a long series, from him and other volunteers, published in this paper.

These remembrances are especially timely on account of the near approach of Memorial Day. The memories engendered by the recurrence of this day will keep alive in the younger generation the deeds of those years of blood and suffering. History will not do it. But as the graves of the heroes grow thicker and thicker, as they will, and the ranks of the survivors grow thinner and thinner, as they too surely will, we who are left will respect more and more the virtues and valor of those who found it "sweet to die for their Country."

The Peabody Bicycle Club will hold their third entertainment and dance at the Peabody Skating Rink, Thursday, evening, April 29. For particulars see posters.

The sign of B. F. Hutchinson, grocer, in the Square, has been re-painted, and looks as good as new.

Fred. E. Titcomb, formerly advance agent for Pat. J. Lyons, the well known tonsorial artist, is now agent for Burton's troupe of trained dogs.

The Shawmut Hat and Cap store in Salem, has been refitted and embellished with an elegant front—making it one of the handsomest stores on Essex street. They are headquarters for all kinds of hats and caps at the lowest prices. See their advertisement in another column.

Mrs. Gould having moved her stock of fancy goods to Lynn, Miss Nellie L. Stockwell has taken the entire store, where she will be pleased to serve her customers and friends. Miss Stockwell will continue the agency of the Staten Island Dye House, and has added a line of Children's trimmed hats to her Millinery stock of goods. These and a full assortment of shade and school hats will make her store a desirable place to purchase goods, and with more room and increased facilities she will be better able to accommodate her increasing trade. Our readers are referred to her advertisement which appears in another column.

EASTER MUSIC.

We present this year a very full list of the music to be rendered in the churches in this town and in Salem on Easter Sunday. Some grand music is to be given, as will be seen below. Our readers can not hear it all but they can form an idea of what is being done, as can be done in no other way. We confess to a pleasurable surprise at the excellent programmes selected in most cases, which speaks well for the judgment and taste which pervades the choirs in this vicinity:

MUSICAL NOTES.

The contralto soloist at the Salem Oratorio Society Concert next Monday evening, is Miss Gertrude Edmands, not Edwards, as every paper in the county had it, except the PRESS and Salem Observer. It makes little difference to people who don't know one soloist from another; but to musical people who know of Miss Edmands, and the grand work she has been doing the past winter, it does make a difference whether they are told they are to hear her, or a soloist of whom they never heard.

We hope the Oratorio Society will be favored with a large audience on this occasion. The works are not difficult of comprehension, and we can assure our readers that they will derive great pleasure as well as musical instruction, from listening to the performance. The quartette of soloists, as we said last week, is one of the best the Society have engaged for some time. Mrs. Humphrey Allen is a faithful, conscientious singer—and particularly is this the case in music of a sacred character. Miss Edmands, Mr. Ricketson and Mr. Cornell are all artists. It will be a fitting observance of Easter Monday night. We also desire to say to those who cannot make it convenient to attend in the evening, that a public rehearsal will be held in the afternoon to which an admission fee of only twenty-five cents will be charged.

The music at St. John's Church last Sunday at Vespers, was very elaborate. Portions of the Stabat Mater were rendered by the choir under the direction of Charles A. Clark, and the Angel's Serenade by Braga was finely rendered on the violin by F. Clayton Record. Among the solos of the Stabat Mater none were more satisfactory than the bass of Mr. Horrigan.

The performance of Elijah by the Handel and Haydn Society next Sunday (Easter) evening, in Boston Music Hall, is to be a notable event. Mme. Fursch-Madi, Miss Kehew, Canci u., Miss Gertrude Edmands and others are to be the soloists. If there was an opportunity of returning after the concert, there would be more of our musical people in attendance.

What has become of that movement talked of in favor of band concerts in this town in the open air? We should think a little persistency on the part of those who are interested might bring about the desired result. They certainly would be interesting and popular.

Mrs. F. C. Ferguson, contralto of Grace church, Salem, is meeting with much success in vocal instruction. She has now nearly as many scholars as she can attend to.

Everybody hums or sings the beautiful waltz song in "Nanon"—itself a most convincing evidence that the opera comique has caught the favor of the public. Mr. William T. Carleton makes as handsome a lover as the fair hostress of the Golden Lamb (Louise Paullin) could wish, and no handsomer Ninon than Miss Vincent is to be found. The chorus, with its dainty costumes, is one of the special attractions of the lyric event at the Hollis street, which should be thronged as long as "Nanon" holds the stage.

Mr. Warren Wilson, Jr., of this town, is receiving many compliments for the fine work he is doing, as tenor in Grace church, Salem. Mr. Wilson has an excellent voice, which has greatly improved since his connection with the choir of that church.

We are able to present, this week, a fuller list than ever before, of the music to be rendered by the choirs in this vicinity on Easter Sunday. Nearly all observe the day with fitting music—as is very proper. We are under obligations to the directors of music in the different churches for courtesies extended, and we know they will be of interest to the readers of this column.

The Murray Association are rehearsing a cantata entitled the "Berry-Pickers" which it is proposed to give shortly. The chorus will number about forty voices, and the leading parts will be taken by members of the club. It is needless to say that it will be done in good shape.

Mr. B. P. Bacheller has a fine violin of the Guarnerius make, for which he has lately been offered $50.00 which he promptly declined. Mr. B. can furnish evidence that the instrument is rising fifty years old.

We regret to learn of the illness of John A. Messer, formerly of this town, the well known bass viol player of the Salem Cadet Band. Mr. Messer was stricken with paralysis of his left side last week, and has been in a critical condition, so much so, as to cause serious alarm on the part of his friends.

F. C. Record, of Salem, will furnish an orchestra for the church of the Immaculate Conception, in Salem, Easter Sunday, and it is rumored that he is to organize a choir for one of the Baptist churches in Salem. He is engaged for the dance and supper at the Unity Club to-morrow evening in the vestry of the Unitarian church.

Prof. Bill presented the subject of Time in Music before the New England Public School Music Teachers' Association at Pilgrim Hall, Boston, last Saturday, demonstrating his method practically by a class of twenty boys and girls from Beverly.

Miss Marguerite Hall, of Boston, will sail for Italy early next month, to engage in the work of Italian opera.

Mrs. Edna A. Hall, the well known vocal teacher, of Boston, sails for Europe the last of June, to spend her vacation.

LARGEST HAT STORE IN NEW ENGLAND.

Remodeled and enlarged with a floor area for the sale of HATS, and HATS ONLY, unequalled in the country.

Facts are Stubborn Things.

And a visit will convince one and all of the fact that our alleged competitor's efforts are feeble, their claim of superior facilities silly and absurd, their hoped for success a dismal failure from the start, in attempting to compete with a STOCK OF HATS TEN TIMES LARGER than all the Hat Stocks in Salem combined. To sum up the whole matter, THE SHAWMUT often buys of one style of hat 10 to 20 cases or 30 to 60 dozen. Springfield, New Bedford and Gloucester Shawmut Stores will use nearly as many. Compare stocks and it will be clear to any observer that the purchases for the average hat stock in Salem and vicinity must be confined to a few dozen hats at a time. I buy immense quantities of each style and grade and the SHAWMUT can and does sell to its customers.

Wednesdav Evening, April, 21, 1886,

HOME HAPPENINGS.

It seems like old times to see the yards of the slaughter house of J. B. Thomas filled with live cattle, and the old slaughter house again opened for the slaughter of beef. When the railroad companies forced the butchers to close their slaughter houses by the transportation of dressed beef, at a price far below that of live cattle, some of the butchers closed up their establishments entirely, but Mr. Thomas, who was equal to the occasion, continued to supply his customers, handling almost entirely the dressed beef, and the slaughter house was only opened for the killing of cattle raised in this vicinity. But large quantities of sheep and calves were slaughtered in the building adjoining.

At a meeting of the Selectmen, held Saturday afternoon, J. H. Tibbetts, H. A. Southwick, Alfred E. Johnson, S. H. Buxton, and William W. Reed were appointed as Engineers of the Fire Department. Other officers were chosen as follows:—Weigher of Coal and Hay, Samuel P. Wilson; Measurers of Wood and Bark, Frank C. Ferguson, Charles W. Jenkins, Bowman Viles, Samuel Donnell, James B. Newhall; Measurers of Upper Leather, Oliver Emerson, Joshua Giddings, Augustus H. Sanger Jr., William C. Beckett, Richard Kimball. William A. Saunders; Inspector of Milk, Thomas W. Peasley. John H. Tibbetts was granted a license as common victualler.

The following resolution was passed at their meeting yesterday:—Resolved that the W. C. T. U. of Peabody thank Col. C. T. Batchelder, our representative in the Massachusetts Legislature, for his recent vote in favor of municipal suffrage for women. We are very thankful that the law maker did not demean himself and his sex in ribald wit and shameful jokes concerning women in the debate on Wednesday, and most grateful to him for recording as a fact his belief that women are now deprived of rights which should be accorded to them, and which they could exercise as morally and patriotically as men now do.

Two boarders took up their lodgings at Baldwin's Hotel early last fall, but strange to say, although they have been privileged to come and go as they pleased they have never been asked to pay a cent of board. They have never had a light in their room except that furnished by a street lamp near by. They are very quiet and have the respect of the other boarders who often enter their room, but make little conversation with them. They are two little sparrows who have built their home above the front entrance.

L. & G. H. Poor have purchased the large currying shop of A. A. Messer adjoining their present factory on Wallis street, together with all the machinery, tools etc. The two factories will be connected and the Messrs. Poor will have one of the largest establishments in town. Mr. Messer, in company with the late Charles Brooks, built the shop in 1859, and Mr. Messer retired from active business about a month ago.

A lover of lawn tennis in this town has a novel invention for marking tennis courts. It is a hollow wheel, perforated with holes through which any white powder placed inside drops on the turf as the wheel turns over. The wheel is attached to a stick and revolves on a spindle. There is now no fun in marking out a tennis court in the old way.

The road surveyor commenced to raise the grade of Lowell street in front of the estate of Mr. C. Warren Osborn, Monday morning. The grade will be raised nearly level with that at the steamer house and extend as far as B. F. Hutchinson's store. Mr. Osborn will have edgestones set and a walk laid in front of his estate.

Mr. Stephen Blaney has been setting out a large number of trees on Dustin street and in front of his estate. Mr. Blaney has probably set out more shade trees in this town than any other man, and in a few years the public will thank him for his thoughtfulness, as they enjoy their shade.

The annual meeting of the Peabody Branch of the Law and Order League, for the hearing of reports from officers and the election of officers for the coming year, will be held in the Selectmen's room this Wednesday evening at 7.45 o'clock.

A small building has been put up at West Peabody by the newly appointed postmaster, which will serve as a post-office. There is one thing about it, burglars will not try to blow up the safe, they will skip off with the whole office.

The School Committee met last Thursday and decided not to admit any more primary school pupils in any of the schools, till the Endicott school building is completed.

Where Hours go Merrily.

The fair by the ladies of the Baptist society received a very liberal patronage last Wednesday and Thursday evenings. The tables contained many useful and ornamental articles which were disposed of at good prices. The art loan exhibition was an interesting feature and was liberally patronized. Wednesday evening there was a supper and readings by Mrs. Ryerson of Boston. Thursday evening an entertainment by the Edgewood Club, all of which were very enjoyable. The society netted about $160. The silk quilt was presented to Mrs. Shipman, wife of the pastor.

Franklin Hall was not large enough to hold the large number who desired to patronize the Band of Hope entertainment last Wednesday evening, and it was repeated at the lower town hall on Thursday evening. The little ones under the instruction of Mrs. J. P. Hayes of Lynn performed their parts in a pleasing and satisfactory manner.

The dance of the Murray Club last Wednesday evening was not largely attended, probably owing to the lateness of the season. There was enough there, however, to make it a success socially, and included about a dozen from the Sawyer club of Danvers. Salem Band Orchestra furnished the music.

The A. H. B. A. will hold their first skating and dancing party at the rink next Monday evening, and as a special attraction the well known Milo Brothers will be present.

Masconomo Tribe of Red Men worked the Hunter's degree last Thursday evening before a large number of brothers who were present. At the meeting to-morrow evening the Warrior's degree will be worked. We have heard it hinted that the degree staff will be invited by the Grand Council to exemplify the work before some of the newly instituted tribes in this vicinity.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor connected with the South Church have issued an attractive programme containing the topics for discussion during the coming season. We are pleased to learn that the society is in a very flourishing condition.

L. A. 2947 K. of L. held a costume party at Ashland Hall last Wednesday evening which was a decided success. Another party will be held next Wednesday evening.

A number of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Teel visited them at their home on Main street, last Thursday evening, and presented them with a French parlor clock.

Mr. Lewis D. Nevers, the genial instructor of the Peabody Rink, will take charge of the Marblehead rink. Mr. Nevers has a host of friends in this town, who will wish him abundant success.

The friends of Mr. Mike Boyle will give him a benefit at the rink, Thursday evening April 22, on which occasion there will be an exciting game of polo between the old Peabody and Salem polo teams. Reserved seats at Spauldings.

Rev. V. M. Simons, of Springfield, formerly of this town, has been given a handsome French clock by some of the young people who have been under his charge for three years.

A delegation from Jordan Lodge F. & A. M. in special horse cars, visited the Masonic Lodge at Marblehead last evening.

Miss Lydia Trask, daughter of Ed- Trask, observed her ninth birthday last Saturday afternoon by a party, in which some twenty of her schoolmates participated. The young lady was the recipient of several gifts from her friends, and refreshments and a good time generally were enjoyed.

Daniel P. Grosvenor has brought out his soda fountain, and our readers will take due notice. Mr. Grosvenor's syrups are par excellence, and it is a pleasure to drink a glass of soda from his fountain.

Go to Nugent's this week, for Bargains to seek. *

Mrs. Mary Ann Logan, widow of the late George Logan, died last evening at her residence, of rheumatic fever, after several months illness. Her age was 26 years. Funeral, Friday at 3 P. M.

By trading at Nugent's Shoe Store, you will save ten per cent or more.

A wagon full of plows passed this office this forenoon en route to Dr. Loring's Farm. They were sent by J. L. Colcord, and their merits will probably be tested this afternoon at the ploughing match of the Essex Agricultural Society.

Mr. J. Arthur Trask is setting edgestones and relaying the brick walk on Main and Park streets belonging to Mrs. J. B. Clement's estate. A neat iron fence will take the place of the wooden one which has been removed.

Brothers of Holten Lodge who did not receive their tickets to the entertainment last night can secure them at the coal office of Bro. Geo. F. Sanger, or of the committee. before Saturday night.

At Nugenr's Shoe store, on the square, you'll get bargains not found elsewhere. *

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS.

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthy water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fish-monger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shall be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall NOT allow their children thus withdrawn to re-enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soil carts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

WILLIAM S. OSBORNE, Chairman, THOMAS J. RELIHAN, Clerk, CHARLES P. ELLIGOTT.	Board of Health.

*The Board shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety * * * Whoever violates any such regulation shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.—[Extract from the Public Statutes Chap. 80, § 18.

* Section 1. chap. 98 of the laws of 1884. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of small-pox, diphtheria, scarlet fever or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the selectmen or board of health of the town in which he dwells, and upon the death, recovery or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the board of health. Any person neglecting or refusing to comply with either of the above provisions shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER,
252 Essex Street, Salem.
Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds, Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and sky-lights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.
We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.
We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.
We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bousley.
Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated with courtesy whether anything is esired or not.

For Instant Use

As a reliable remedy, in cases of Croup, Whooping Cough, or sudden Colds, and for the prompt relief and cure of throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes: "I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy for home use. I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults." John H. Stoddard, Petersburg, Va., writes: "I have never found a medicine equal to

AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral

for the prompt relief of throat and lung diseases peculiar to children. I consider it an absolute cure for all such affections, and am never without it in the house." Mrs. L. E. Herman, 187 Mercer st., Jersey City, writes: "I have always found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral useful in my family." B. T. Johnson, Mt. Savage, Md., writes: "For the speedy cure of sudden Colds, and for the relief of children afflicted with Croup, I have never found anything equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the most potent of all the remedies I have ever used." W. H. Stickler, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured my wife of a severe lung affection, supposed to be Quick Consumption. We now regard the Pectoral as a household necessity." E. M. Breckenridge, Brainerd, Minn., writes: "I am subject to Bronchitis, and, wherever I go, am always sure to have a bottle of with me. It is without a rival for the cure of bronchial affections."

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M]

The engagement of Richard Mansfield at the Museum will be brought to an end on Saturday night. Prince Karl has proved a very decided attraction—a fact due chiefly to the young actor's portrayal of the title character. Miss Cragin and Mr. Seymour deserve particular praise in noting the support given to Mr. Mansfield by the Museum company.

A Rag Baby, which was an instant success when first brought out in Boston, returns to the Park this week. Frank Daniels will be Old Sport. Harry Conor is to repeat his capital personation of the dude tramp. In the role of Clairette, the favorite, Rosa France, is to make her appearance, and the cast numbers Fanny Rice as Venus, Clara Lane, M. D. Sullivan, Helen Reimer and other favorites.

That elegantly costumed modern burlesque which now holds the Bijou stage must be withdrawn next Saturday night. Arcadia with its pretty girls and agile performers of the male persuasion, will succeed Harry Dixey at the Bijou Opera house in New York; and consequently, but few more opportunities remain for seeing this elaborate production. Mr. Braham's music, original and arranged, adds very greatly to the enjoyment of Bijou audiences. Miss Hattie Delaro, the favorite Pitti Sing, is to assume the role of Trompetta, and there may be expected other changes in the cast. The burlesque is doing an excellent business.

Janish, the charming actress, will be seen next week in Princess Andrea at the Boston Museum. It is to be her first appearance at this theatre. The artiste is have the co-operation of the Museum company.

Daly's artists come to the Boston Museum May 3rd, for their farewell week, prior to departure for England. Nancy & Co will be the attraction, except that on Friday evening A Night Off is to be given, and on Saturday evening for their adieu, The Country Girl, A Woman's Want, and A Wet Blanket.

Mr. Arthur Falkland, the young English actor who arrived in this country three weeks ago, has for the last fortnight been playing Cis Farrington on the Boston Museum company's tour with The Magistrate. He has won great favor from his audiences, and manager Field has engaged him as a member of next season's stock company. Falkland and Miss Craigen would make an admirable pair of stage lovers, and it is to be hoped that the coming season will find them cast in companion roles.—Boston Home Journal.

To the Boston stage come next week, The Black Crook with new and gorgeous glories of scenery and ballet under the Kiralfy banner.

THE SECRET OUT AT LAST.—In his testimony before the Committee on Claims, Mr. Higginson stated that he was approached privately by Mr. Cyrus W. Field with a proposition to wreck the New York & New England Railroad in the interest of the second-mortgage bondholders, and that Mr. Field afterwards made the same proposition at the meeting before the seventeen directors. Here, then, is the heart and whole body of the mystery that has been worked up about the sale of the State's New York & New England bonds. It has not been half so much of a secret as has been pretended, and, as we have said before, there is no mystery whatever about the course of the governor and council. They simply exercised the right explicitly reserved in their advertisement, and preferred any bid, at almost any figures, to the bid of the party whose well known policy was to break down instead of building up the road. Among the creditors of the road is the State; and if the State should have had no care for anything but the dollars involved, it was the manifest duties of her authorities to prefer a purchaser who would try to pay, to one who proposed to wipe out her debt.—Evening Transcript.

Great as are the uses of advertising, the wonderful success of St. Jacobs Oil has been due chiefly to its power in healing pain. The true secret of success, after all, is merit.

Whitewash is to some extent a disinfectuant and should be used in cellars and kitchen closets not less than once a year, twice being better. A good whitewash is made of one peck of slacked lime, a pound and a half of white vitrol, a pound of salt and half a pound of melted glue, the salt and glue keeping the wash from rubbing off. For cellars the slacked lime is sufficient.

Astronomers are constantly studying the movements of the stars. Red Star Cough Cure movements are prompt. It removes the worst cough at once. Twenty-five cents.

A little rain just as a dust-vanquisher would be welcome.

"Quinsy troubled me for twenty years. Since I started using Dr. Thomas' Electric Oil, have not had an attack. The Oil cures sore throat at once." Mrs. Letta Conrad, Standish, Mich.

The boys are playing base ball "scrub."

WHAT IS DYSPEPSIA?

Among the many symptoms of Dyspepsia or indigestion, the most prominent are: Variable appetite; faint, gnawing feeling at pit of the stomach, with unsatisfied craving for food; heartburn, feeling of weight and wind in the stomach, bad breath, bad taste in the mouth, low spirits, general prostration, headache, and constipation. There is no form of disease more prevalent than Dyspepsia, and none so peculiar to the high-living and rapid-eating American people. Alcohol and tobacco produce Dyspepsia; also, bad air, etc. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS, will cure the worst case, by regulating the bowels and toning up the digestive organs. Sold everywhere.

Happiness

results from that true contentment which indicates perfect health of body and mind. You may possess it, if you will purify and invigorate your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. E. M. Howard, Newport, N. H., writes: "I suffered for years with Scrofulous humors. After using two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I great relief. It has entirely restored me to health." James French, Atchison, Kans., writes: "To all persons suffering from Liver Complaint, I would strongly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with a disease of the liver for nearly two years, when a friend advised me to take this medicine. It gave prompt relief, and has cured me." Mrs. H. M. Kidder, 41 Dwight st., Boston, Mass., writes: "For several years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family. I never feel safe even without it. As a liver medicine and general purifier of the blood, it has no equal." Mrs. A. B. Allen, Winterpock, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and finally became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of and commenced giving it to him. It surely worked wonders, for, in a short time, he was completely cured."

Found

At Home

DOG LICENSE.

Dogs must be Licensed before MAY FIRST.

The attention of all owners or keepers of Dogs is called to the following Extracts from the Public Statutes, viz:

CHAP. 102, SECT. 80.

"Every owner or keeper of a dog of three months old or over, shall annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April, cause it to be registered and licensed for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the clerk of the city or town wherein said dog is kept, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered numbered.

SECT. 82. The fee for every license shall be two dollars for a male dog, and five dollars for a female dog.

SECT. 87. Whoever keeps a dog contrary to the provisions of this chapter shall forfeit fifteen dollars, five dollars of which shall be paid to the complainant, and ten dollars to the treasurer of the county in which the dog is kept; except that in the County of Suffolk the ten dollars shall be paid to the treasurer of the city or town wherein said dog is kept.

N. H. POOR, Town Clerk.

PROBATE NOTICE.

Commonwealth of Massachusetts.

ESSEX, SS. PROBATE COURT.

To the Next of Kin, and others interested in the Estate of DANIEL C. GOODWIN, late of Peabody, in said County, currier, deceased, GREETING;

WHEREAS, Levi Spaulding, the Administrator of the estate of said deceased, has presented to said Court for allowance the second and final account of his administration on said estate and application has been made for a distribution of the balance in his hands among the next of kin of said deceased. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be holden at Salem, in said county on the first Monday of May, next, at nine o'clock before noon, to show cause, if any you have, why said account should not be allowed and distribution made according to said application.

And said administrator is ordered to serve this Citation by publishing the same once a week, in the Peabody Press, a newspaper printed at Peabody, three weeks successively, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, George F. Choate, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this ninth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

Book Notices.

The May number of Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine is redolent of Spring both in text and illustration. The Easter Festival, which comes this year on April 25th, its latest possible date, is largely dealt with. The Ancient Customs of Easter Day is a very interesting article, and Dr. Talmage's sermon, The Queen of Festivals, is a powerful presentation of Easter lessons. Easter Morning is a beautiful picture, Easter Scenes and Easter Themes, a characteristic illustration, and The Easter offering in a Fashionable Church will be recognized as a faithful reproduction. In addition to these timely matters, there is an article on Winchester Cathedral, with a portrait of the bishop and views of the cathedral and the town, a portrait and sketch of Mrs. Harriet Beecher Stowe, a well illustrated paper on The Indian Training-school at Carlisle, Pa, full installments of the several serials, and many appropriate and enjoyable short articles and poems.

A nickle will buy the Baby Pathfinder, containing time-tables of all New England roads, and no "ads."

The April number of the Baby Pathfinder contains all the latest changes. Only five cents. On all news stands.

Strikes, Lockouts and Arbitrations is the title of an important article in the April Century by George May Powell. Three anecdotal articles in this number form a most entertaining account of the famous cruiser Alabama and her duel with the Kearsarge. P. D. Haywood, who was a seaman on the Alabama, describes Life on the Alabama, with graphic humor. A portrait of Longfellow after an ambrotype of 1848, showing the poet in a guise unfamiliar to the public of later years, is the frontispiece of the number. It accompanies a paper by Mrs. Annie Fields giving Glimpses of Longfellow in Social Life, with many anecdotes as set down both by Mr. Longfellow, and by the author's husband, the late James T. Fields. A profusely illustrated paper on Toy Dogs—the pug, spaniels, and terriers, by James Watson, completes The Century series on the typical dogs. The usual amount of fiction and poetry makes up a valuable number. The Century Co., New York.

H. C. Bunner opens St Nicholas for April with a bright and amusing fanciful story entitled Casperl, which is illustrated by O. Herford, and by the frontispiece—drawn by Leon Moran. Edward Everett tells how the Vacation-schoools in Boston were started; and Charles Barnard, in Sophie Connor and the Vacation-school, explains the inside workings of one of those popular institutions. Henry Sandham contributes 11 drawings, illustrating both articles. Mrs. Burnett's serial, Little Lord Fauntleroy, keeps at the same high-water mark it reached in the last installment; Horace E. Scudder's George Washington carries the hero through the campaign with Braddock, and his subsequent military experience as commander-in-chief of the Virginia forces, his courtship and marriage. There are many other stories and shetches by popular writers. The Century Co., New York.

"Socialistic Movements in England and the United States," which opens the May number of Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly, is a most timely and well written article. The article on "Poetic Dancing" discourses of the ballet and its royal founder, King Louis XIV. "The Fruit-ships at New York" will surprise many who have little idea of the enormous value and variety of foreign fruits that are brought every year to this one port, which in this respect has no rival on earth. "The American Goldsmith," by Walter Edgar McCann, brings the reader to know and appreciate one of the most enduring of American poems, "The Old Oaken Bucket." The stories by Florence Marryat, Charles L. Hildreth, W. H. Waitt, Ellinor Brooke and others, are all capital, and the minor articles full of interest.

With the coming May number the Magazine of American History enters upon its fourth year under its present able editorial management. Through the judicious broadening of its scope and the substantial value and varied interest of its contents, appealing alike to the student and the general reader, it has achieved a greater marvel in the way of success than that of any other periodical of its character in the world. This speaks well for American scholarship, and the rapidly growing popular desire for historical information.

"A God-send is Ely's Cream Balm," writes Mrs. M. A. Jackson, of Portsmouth, N. H. "I had catarrh for three years! Two or three times a week my nose would bleed. I thought the sores would never heal. Your Balm has cured me."

I was a sufferer from catarrh for fifteen years, with distressing pain over my eyes. The disease worked down upon my lungs. I used Ely's Cream Balm with gratifying results. Am apparently cured.

The moonlight evenings are very enjoyable.

More cases of sick headache, billiousness, constipation, etc., can be cured in less time, with less medicine, and for less money, by using Carter's Little Liver Pills, than by any other means.

Tulips, dandelions and daffodils are up,—the first Spring plants.

Loaded with impurities, your blood needs the cleansing and vitalizing energy of Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

HENRY W. LONGFELLOW IN HIS LIBRARY

Our engraving of "Longfellow in His Library," of which the above cut is a miniature copy, is an accurate representation of the room which Longfellow used from 1837 until the time of his death, and it will undoubtedly be accepted as the favorite picture of the "American Popular Poet." The likeness is good; the attitude and expression happily betoken a mind deeply occupied in the task before him, and everyone who admires and appreciates the writings of the poet, will be pleased to see the appointments of the room in which he worked, together with a faithful portrait of him. Remember that this is no chromo, but a Superb Steel-plate Engraving, 24x32 inches in size.

The central figure is that of the Great Poet. He is seated on the right of a circular table, which is strewn with his books and writing materials. The surroundings are harmonious and symmetrical. The artizan is in his workshop. Aside from from being the workshop of our immortal poet, it was the room in which Gen. George Washington made his headquarters, directly after the battle of Bunker Hill.

We shall offer this engraving till February 1st, on the following conditions:

EVERY NEW SUBSCRIBER paying $2, in advance, for the PRESS, will receive a copy FREE.

Old Subscribers, in arrears, who will settle to date and pay one year in Advance, will receive a copy.

Subscribers who pay in advance can have the PRESS and engraving by paying $2.50.

The insurance on the stock of Wm. F. Murphy, burned in the old Jacobs factory several weeks ago, has been adjusted for $1825.

O. B. Chadwick has presented "Jack" the fire dog with a handsome leather collar with a silver plate on which is the inscription "Central Fire Station, Three Ones and a Two," and the intelligent animal seems very proud of it.

The Selectmen at their last Saturday's meeting re-appointed the present board of Engineers of the fire department. John H. Tibbetts, Alfred E. Johnson, Horace A. Southwick, Samuel H. Buxton and William W. Reed, for the ensuing year. The engineers will meet to close up the business of the old year, organize and approbate firemen for the coming year Wednesday evening, April 28th.

The committee on fire alarm met Monday afternoon and made the final location of the fire alarm boxes as follows: Central Station, corner of Lowell and Kosciusko streets, opposite Amos Hutchinson's house on Lowell street, corner of Andover and Endicott streets, corner of Cross and Andover, corner of Hardy and Central, corner of Upton and Walnut, opposite Endicott School on Tremont, Burbeck's soap factory, Grove street, corner of Sewall and Washington, corner of Aborn and Sutton, Pumping Station, W. E. Reed's store, Lynn street, Scales opposite Raddin's, Lynnfield street, corner of Oak and Foster streets, and an electric button at Brown's grocery store in West Peabody. This will be an independent line direct to the Central Station from which point an alarm from West Peabody would be given. The poles are being set on different streets around town but it will be some time yet before any great headway will be made in the system. z

The Methodist Conference at Newburyport has closed and the appointments are out. To this town is appointed Rev. G. A. Phinney. Danvers will listen to the exhortations of Rev. C. A. Merrill. Other appointments of interest to our people are as follows: Salem, Lafayette street, Rev. A. L. Gracey; Wesley Chapel, D. W. Bishop; Lowell, Rev. S. B. Sweetser; Trinity, Cambridge, Rev. Albert Gould; Natick, Rev. J. O. Knowles; Howard Avenue, Boston, Rev. Daniel Steele. On the superannuated list have been placed Rev. C. N. Smith and Rev. V. M. Simons, both formerly pastors of the Methodist church in this town.

Miss Ida C. Clothier, of Boston, who is to speak at the W. C. T. U. meeting on Friday afternoon, is a young lady of most pleasing and able qualities. She is superintending two important departments of State W. C. T. U. work, and, as a new comer on the lecture platform, seems destined to be most successful. John B. Finch has spoken of her with high approval. A general invitation is given to all to hear her in Franklin Hall. Meeting commences at 2.30. Miss C. begins her address about 3.30.

A branch of the Young Women's Christain Temperance Union was organized in Franklin Hall Monday evening by Miss Elizabeth Gordon. The following officers were elected:—President, Miss Hattie M. Saunders; Secretary, Miss Eva Goldthwait; Treasurer, Miss Mary Barrell. Another meeting will be held next Monday evening.

Rev. Mr. Hall's Sermon.

There was an unusually large congregation assembled last Sunday morning at the South Church, to welcome the new pastor, Rev. George A. Hall. The preacher announced as the subject of his discourse "The Source of Spiritual Power," and his text from Acts 1:8. "But ye shall receive power after that the Holy Ghost is come upon you; and ye shall be witnesses unto me both in Jerusalem and in all Judea, and in Samaria and unto the uttermost part of the earth." The preacher said that this chapter introduces us to the last meeting of Christ with his disciples before his ascension. It was hard for them to part, and Jesus had often told them that he should go away from them. "If I do not go the Comforter will not come." Yet they had no realization of the meaning of his words or what this "Comforter" would be to them. They could not bear it all, and after the crucifixion they ceased to hope He was the Messiah until He appeared to them in that upper room and breathed upon them his power. When He was about leaving them He gave them one injunction: "Tarry ye in Jerusalem until ye be imbued with power from on high." Of this, too, they had a weak conception. Was it the power of arms? Christ finally brings them to understand the promised power, which was to be baptised with the Holy Ghost.

This was the great power they were to receive when the Holy Ghost had come. The disciples returned to Jerusalem and to the upper room. They continued steadfast in prayer day after day, yet there was no sign. Why this long delay? At last the glad day came, on the second Lord's day after the ascension. Peter was there; John was there; Thomas was there—all were in one place; "Suddenly there was a sound as of a mighty rushing wind." The promise is fulfilled. This is the power—the tongue of fire—by which Christianity is to be established. With it kings shall tremble; without it all labors are fruitless. It is not seen by the human eye, but by the human conscience. Embued with it the eleven are to go forth to conquer; to be his mighty witnesses. How great the undertaking! The strongholds of Jewish pageantry, the temples and synagogues, false rites—all barriers are to tumble before these humble ministers of God's power.

The history of this pentacostal season furnishes many lessons. (1) It is the source of power by which the world is to be regenerated. The organizations of the church for the redemption of the world were never so complete as to-day. But the real power lies not in the machinery of the church; the true secret is not in the appliances which the church has invented. There is danger of thinking so from the magnitude of our resources. We say that we can get up this power. Now all this machinery is most valuable in the right place. But we should beware lest we put too much reliance upon it, and not mistake the channels of power for the power itself. Think of the first disciples. How extensive was their apparatus! See Peter. What was the power that through him so pricked the conscience of men? What was the secret of that day when 3000 souls were saved? Peter was filled with the Holy Spirit. Here was the secret of the success of the early disciples. It was the power of heaven—the presence of the Holy Spirit. So now all the church needs is a baptism of fire from on high, to shake the battlements of sin to their foundation. There can be no such thing as Christianity without the Holy Spirit. The truths of Christianity never converted a soul. They are an instrument but not the agent—the divine channel but not the power itself. This power must come from above not below. We must go back to the fountain source of power. To bring spiritual results we must go to the source of spiritual life. Where can we go but to Him, the divine one? If it needs divine power to create life, how much more does it need to recreate life?

(2) How to obtain this power? How did they obtain it at first? It seemed hard and strange for the disciples to tarry. Everything was ready. Why should they tarry? But there were certain conditions to be observed. Earnest prayer was needed. So it is needful for us to-day, if we expect the same blessing. A praying church is a mighty engine for the conversion of the world. A church is suddenly visited with the power of the Holy Spirit. Souls are converted. Way off in a little hamlet a humble, poor woman has been praying for this blessing. She cannot even come to the meetings. But she has been praying that the Spirit may come upon the church. How great is this power of prayer! We kneel how weak, we arise how full of power! The disciples all continued in prayer. May we have such a spirit! We must continue in prayer. May God help us all to pray earnestly and much; to lay hold of God; to cling steadfastly to the mercy seat, that our hearts may be kindled and filled with the Holy Spirit.

The preacher said that he and his people had embarked together in the work of the master. As we stand at the threshold of this work let us plead for the baptism of the Holy Spirit. The preacher thought of the duties he would be called to perform, to the dying as well as the living—of the souls unsaved it was their duty to bring into the Kingdom. It was a great work, but a glorious work. If we have the presence of the Holy Spirit success will crown our efforts. There will be new duties, but new strength will be given. Let us pray earnestly for the greatest of all blessings. If we do it will surely come. His promises will be fulfilled. A cloud has taken Him from our sight, but faith can pierce the cloud, and we shall receive power when the Holy Spirit has come. His promise is not only for the disciples but for us now. There is no limit to the measure of this Spirit. Its wings never weary. O that it might come now! That we may go forth as mighty witnesses, and lead many to the heavenly home.

Rev. Mr. Hall is a graduate of Amherst College in the class of 1882. On the completion of his college course he entered Hartford Theological Seminary from which he is a graduate. This is, therefore, his first pastorate. Rev. Mr. Strong, of Beverly, was his classmate in the Theological Seminary.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

The hoodlum element from this town and Salem, beginning with boys and afterwards augmented by those of more mature years, till the number reached 200, gathered about the tannery of Charles Harrington & Co., and began hooting and insulting the men employed there, which was replied to by the men as defiantly, till the war of words was followed by a shower of stones which broke the glass and did other damage. The police were sent for and under the charge of the Chief the crowd was dispersed, although the officers were compelled to show their revolvers before the desired effect was accomplished.

About midnight last Thursday, a woman residing on Aborn Place heard a noise about her window, and parting a curtain, saw a man there who had probably been trying to effect an entrance. She gave an alarm and the would be burglar fled.

There was considerable excitement last Saturday afternoon at a house on Main street, when the discovery was made that a box containing a new ten dollar silk hat had been stolen from a rear entrance. The man of the house started for the police, and found on the street, the box in the possession of some boys, who had taken it under the belief that it was empty.

Last Saturday afternoon Mr.s William Fairfield of Lynn, accompanied by three lady friends, were driving across Andover street bridge, when a load of hay came along. The ladies attempted to pass to the right, and just as they did so, another team going the other way drove in between them and the load of hay. The result was a collision, which at one time threatened to demolish both teams and but for the backing out of the horse owned by the stranger, who seemed to have more sense than the driver, that would have been the result. The ladies screamed and jumped from the carriage, but after all was settled, only a few scratches and one broken spoke could be counted.

A little boy named Connors was knocked down and stunned on Tremont street, last Thursday forenoon, by Ryan's vegetable team. The driver picked up the child and carried him to his home, where he had recovered before the doctor arrived.

Mr. Rufus Sargent, the designer of our town hall, is suffering from the effects of a dislocated shoulder at Palatka, Florida.

Last Thursday evening as Mr. E. W. Jacobs was driving up Lowell street, his horse shied as he was passing Mr. W. F. Pingree's carpenter wagon, and the forward wheels of the buggy were demolished.

Willie McCarthy, a son of D. P. McCarthy, jumped from a horse car in front of the PRESS office last Friday, and fell, striking on his head. He was stunned, and removed to Mrs. Osborne's boarding house where he soon recovered. It was fortunate the accident did not prove more serious.

Mr. James E. Galway the unfortunate young man who lost a leg under a freight train last Wednesday, died from the effects of his injuries at the Salem Hospital last Saturday. He was buried from St. John's Church Sunday and the funeral was largely attended.

Mr. Nathan H. Bushby complains that the boys are stealing his cultivated dandelions. Lay for them with a shot gun.

The police called on James Tummelty on Harris street, and Elizabeth Mc'Carthy on Hancock street last Wednesday evening, in search of liquors. None were found.

As a freight train on the B. & M. was passing Gilman Andrews factory last Thursday afternoon, a horse attached to a wagon containing two boys, became frightened and backed on the track in front of the engine, and the horse was killed and the wagon demolished. The boys jumped from the team and were not injured. The team belonged to a fruit dealer named Crosby.

The house of Mrs. Lawrence Pearson on Aborn street was discovered last Sunday to have been entered by thieves and thoroughly ransacked. The family were in New York.

The police were notified last Friday that a man living not far from Aborn street, was making a nuisance of himself, by looking into a sleeping room of residents in the vicinity. He was easily tracked by the imprints of his shoe in the mud. Now if he isn't careful, he will be made an example of.

Mr. Francis Callahan while in a shooting gallery in Boston last Monday, was shot in the finger by a bullet from a rifle used there. The ball was embedded near the bone and was extracted at the City Hospital.

Mr. Walter Hanson met with quite a considerable loss last Sunday, by the explosion of an incubator lamp. The incubator was not much burned, but the eggs in progress of hatching were all spoiled.

Mr. Elijah Wallace of Wyoma, formerly of this town, broke his leg last Sunday, while jumping in a vacant lot near his house. The fracture is a compound one and serious.

As Mr. W. H. Fellows' horse was standing on the bridge that covers the brook in front of his paint shop yesterday, the planks gave way, and the forward leg went through. The horse pulled it out, and took another step and again went down, but was rescued before any serious damage was done. This bridge gives out annually, and could all the money spent on it be put together, there would be enough to pay for covering it with marble.

For a long time a crowd of young fellows have made life a burden to the conductor and patrons of the last car from Salem on the Danvers street railway, and last Saturday night was no exception. Conductor Brown tried to prevent their singing such pleasing selections as the "Milwaukee Fire," "Take Mother's Advice" and numerous others, and was greeted with vulgar and profane language. One of the gang thought he could run the car better than the conductor and announced his intention to run it through to Andover. A couple of the ringleaders named Francis J. Kelley and Timothy Connors both of Danvers, were arrested and appeared in the police court this morning. There were several witnesses for the prosecution, and the balance of the gang who according to their own evidence, should have also been arrested, were there to testify in behalf of the defendants. Judge Merrill fined them $10 and costs each. It is hoped that arrests will follow every disturbance.

Mr. Maurice Sullivan, the flag man on the South Reading Branch of the B & M, should be remembered by the Humane Society, as last Monday he saved the life of a man, and the wrecking of a team and driver who were on the track, by his prompt action.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Mr. Warren Shaw is making improvements around his place on Lynn street. It is one of the most attractive in this part of the town.

Work was commenced in Cedar Grove Cemetery Monday, for the season.

The work of relaying the track of the L. & B. R. R. in Wyoma is progressing rapidly.

The water at Brown's pond is about a foot deep around the back of the ice house on Lynn street.

About one hundred dollars was realized from the recent fair held at the church.

Mr. Wm. Tudbury has been quite sick at his home on Lynn street the past week.

Mr. W. F. Wiggin is fencing in his house and making other improvements

The Twiss estate was sold at auction by Mr. Frank E. Farnham, Thursday, and was purchased by Mr. Calvin Ainsworth, of Salem, for $1,110.

GREATEST LUXURY OBTAINABLE

For Impaired or Diseased Vision is a pair of

B. LAURANCE'S

Axis Cut Pebbles.

The frauds that have been perpertrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlers by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all important subject of the preservation of the sight. There are only two articles from which spectacle lenses can be manufactured, viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name, it still remains glass. Pebble on the other hand is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crytal found generally in freestone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald and nearly as hard as the diamond. The pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone cut by the aid of diamond dust, and the greater amount of power is placed immediately over the center of the grain found in the pebble. It will give to the spectacle wearer a coolness, freshness and a pleasant feeling that the ordinary spectacle lenses cannot by any possibility impart. All spectacles and eyeglasses are stamped B. L. A. C. P. and can only be purchased from

SAMUEL TRASK & SON.

MILLINERY.

Round Hats, Bonnets, Children's Hats, Trimmed Hats, etc., etc.

We have two experienced Milliners in charge of this department—Misses Goodwin and Harvey—who will be glad to show customers every kindness and attention. Our stock never was better and our facilities to trim are first class. We shall keep on hand a good stock of ready trimmed hats and bonnets, of our own make, and will trim to order at short notice. Our stock of flowers, feathers and ribbons, is not surpassed, and we presume not equalled in this city. An early call will convince any one of the above facts.

KID GLOVES.

We have a lady in charge of this department who has had several years experience in the Metropolis, and knows the ins and outs of the glove business thoroughly. Our stock is excelled by no other in the city. Good Gloves in Tans, Browns and Opera Shades, for 50 cts. per pair. Very nice four button Kids in all the new street shades, for 85 cts. A bargain in a five button Kid—warranted real kid—for $1.10 per pair; worth anywhere $1.50—only $1.10 to start the season. Gloves in all colors, and with laced or button wrists. We shall lead in the kid Glove business this season, as we have for the last ten years.

Fabric Gloves.

Lisle and Silk Gloves are shown in all the new and pretty shades of tans, fawns and drabs; also in black and white. We have a very choice and extensive stock of these goods, and confidently call attention to it as being the most complete and desirable line in the city. As usual, our prices will be as low as the lowest in all cases, and on many styles we shall undersell any and all competitors. Gloves for ladies, misses and children. Examine and compare for yourselves.

HOSIERY.

We lead in the Hosiery business, and our stock is so large and so full of choice styles that we dare not attempt to describe or enumerate them. We have everything wanted for men, women and children, and cordially invite an inspection.

The hearing on the petition of the Salem & Danvers street railway for the right to run its cars on the Naumkeag and Lynn tracks as far as Lynnfield, took place before the Selectmen last Thursday. Each road was represented and there was no opposition. That section of the petition relating to the Lynn road was struck out until such time as the Danvers road builds to Lynnfield.

The two Banks, the town, and Danvers Bleachery have each purchased an automatic bank punch, as it is called. By pressing on keys or levers, somewhat similar to the type writer, the desired figures are automatically cut from a check quicker than the amount could be written with a pen. Quite a number of business men will adopt it if it works satisfactorily with those who have purchased.

Last Wednesday night the master carpenters held a meeting in Salem. They considered the request of the Knights of Labor for an increase of wages, and it was learned that the wages paid in Peabody were not so much by 25 cents as was paid in Salem They formed an association and will try and agree on prices for general jobbing and building, and thus be enabled to meet the prices demanded by the men.

Hallowell & Smiley have received a notice from the Knights of Labor that they had been informed that the firm were selling goods to the employes at Harrington's, and requesting them not to do so. It is evident that some one is trying to injure the business of Hallowell & Smiley, knowing that their trade is largely with the laboring men, by making these reports to the Assemblies. The firm say they have not knowingly sold to these men, and if complaints are to be made it would be better in our opinion to go to the firm instead of the Assemblies.

The handsomest window display ever made in town may be seen in Geo. H. Jacobs & Co's store, which has been especially arranged for Easter, by the manager, S. A. H. Willlams. A beautiful cross, floral archway supported by pillars, a profusion of cut flowers and potted plants, together with an artistic show of fine neckwear and gent's furnishing goods, contribute toward an attractive sight, which gives evidence of much taste and is worth taking considerable trouble to see. The decorations will be allowed to remain for a day or two. The flowers came from E. & C. Woodman at Tapleyville.—Danvers Mirror.

The Citizens' Law and Order League held a meeting in the Selectmen's room at the town house, last Wednesday evening. Mr. Edgar Upton, the treasurer, reported at the beginning of the year a balance of $4.02. The amount raised was $704.47. Of this amount there was paid for extra police $197.50; for legal services, $410; miscellaneous, $39.50, leaving a balance on hand of $61.40. Officers were elected as follows:—President, Daniel Woodbury; Vice President, J. W. Hudson; Secretary, S. E. Cassino; Treasurer, Edgar W. Upton; Executive Committee, C. C. Pike, I. A. Drown, D. S. Littlefield, Elbridge Rust; honorary members of Executive Committee, Geo. F. Barnes, B. F. Southwick, Philip T. Nelson, Samuel Simonds, Nathaniel Simonds. It was the opinion of the Secretary that the work should extend to the closing of the stores on Sunday.

Spring Opening.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

SECOND FLOOR

We cordially invite the Ladies of Salem and vicinity to our Opening of the largest and most carefully selected stock of Millinery Goods ever shown in this city, including Trimmed Bonnets and Round Hats, both imported and of our own design and execution. In Fancy Laces and Silk Lisses, we have many elegant patterns, and in some of the most delicate tints, fairly rivalling the shadings of nature. In Flowers, which are to be so largely used the coming season, we have a most attractive display, as fresh as from the garden, only lacking fragrance. We have also in Untrimmed Hats and Bonnets, a very large assortment from the strongest School Hat to the finest foreign make. In fact everything which goes to make up a complete stock. Mrs. A. C. Washburn, our manager, was in New York at the Importers' Opening in Feb. securing many choice things at that time, and has kept close watch of the market up to the present time. Having through years of experience formed a large acquaintance with Importing as well as Jobbing Houses, which gives her great advantage in selecting Desirable Styles and making Lowest Prices. Miss Sadie Bushby will remain with us, as will also Miss Etta Brown and Miss Hattie Gliddin. We have also secured the services of Miss Carrie Palmer, who will join our corps of popular sales ladies. And now we feel sure almost every lady calling on us next week, or after, will meet an old acquaintance who will gladly show them every attention, and will take a personal interest in pleasing.

Cloaks, Suits and Shawls.

SPRING. 1886.

We take pleasure in announcing to the Ladies of Salem and Essex County, that we have now open and ready for inspection our full line of Ladies, Misses and Children's Outside Garments, Wraps, Shawls, etc., for Spring and Summer wear. We may venture to say without any egotism, that our selections in this department far surpass anything we have previously offered. The increasing demand for superior Ready Made Garments and Suits has led us to exercise unusual care in selecting none but the best, both in material and workmanship, and we guarantee all to be just as represented. We have every style and quality a lady can wish for. Long Garments for driving and travelling, Short Wraps and Jackets for street wear in every available shade and colors, both Foreign and American make. Suits, stylish and of superior quality. Shawls, India Chuddas, Boucle, Cashmere, and Fancy Embroidered Scarfs in all grades and shades. Children's Garments, simply beautiful in Boucle, English, German and American Goods. Our Infants' Department requires especial mention for its variety of Long and Short Robes, Cloaks, Slips and Blankets.

Jersey Waists, fancy colors beaded. Mikado fronts, Vest fronts, Plain fronts and braided, in every variety; and a great many more equally good things that we have not space to mention.

We cordially invite you to come and see for yourselves, assuring all courteous attention, and any information we can bestow.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER,

252 Essex Street, Salem.

Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds, Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skylights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bousley.

Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated with courtesy whether anything is esired or not.

Poet's Corner.

The New Church Organ.

They've got a bran new organ, Sue
For all their fuss and search;
They've done just as they said they'd do,
And fetched it into church.
They're bound the critter shall be seen,
And on the preacher's right
They've hoisted up their new machine,
In everybody's sight.
They've got a chorister and choir,
Agin my voice and vote;
For it was never my desire
To praise the Lord by note.

I've been a sister good an' true
For five an' thirty year;
I've done what seemed my part to do,
An' prayed my duty clear;
I've sung the hymns both slow and quick,
Just as the preacher read,
And twice, when Deacon Tubbs was sick,
I took the fork an' led!
And now, their bold, new-fangled ways
Is comin' all about;
And I, right in my latter days,
Am fairly crowded out.

To-day, the preacher, good old dear,
With tears all in his eyes,
Read, "I can read my title clear
To mansions in the skies."
I al'ays liked that blessed hymn—
I s'pose I al'ays will;
It somehow gratifies my whim,
In good old Ortonville;
But when that choir got up to sing,
I couldn't catch a word;
They sung the most dog-gondest thing
A body ever heard!

Some wordly chaps was standin' near,
An' when I seed them grin,
I bid farewell to every fear,
And boldly waded in.
I thought I'd chase their tune along,
An' tried with all my might;
But though my voice is good an' strong,
I couldn't steer it right;
When they was high, then I was low,
An' also contrawise;
And I too fast, or they too slow,
To "mansions in the skies."

An' after every verse, you know,
They played a little tune;
I didn't understand, an' so,
I started in too soon.
I pitched it pr'tty middlin' high,
I fetched a lusty tone.
But oh, alas! I found that I
Was singin' there alone!
They laughed a little, I am told;
But I had done my best;
And not a wave of trouble rolled
Across my peaceful breast.

And Sister Brown—I could but look,
She sits right front of me;
She never was no singin' book,
An' never went to be;
But then she al'ays tried to do
The best she could, she said;
She understood the time, right through,
An' kep' it, with her head;
But when she tried this mornin', oh,
I had to laugh or cough!
It kep' her head a bobbin' so,
It e'en a'most came off!

An' Deacon Tubbs—he all broke down,
As one might well suppose,
He took one look at Sister Brown,
An' meekly scratched his nose.
He looked his hymn book thro' and thro',
And laid it on the seat,
An' then a pensive sigh he drew,
And looked completely beat.
An' when they took another bout,
He didn't even rise,
But drawed his red bandanner out,
An' wiped his weepin' eyes.

I've been a sister, good an' true,
For five an' thirty year;
I've done what seemed my part to do,
An' prayed my duty clear;
But death will stop my voice, I know,
Now, he's on my track;
An' some day I to church will go,
An' never more come back;
An' when the folks get up to sing—
Whene'er that time shall be—
I do not want no patent thing
A squealin' over me!

A Real Necessity.—We presume there is hardly a lady to be found in our broad land who, if she does not already possess a sewing machine, expects some day to become the owner of one. But after the mind has been fully made up to purchase one of these indispensable articles, the question arises as to what kind of a machine to buy. It should be so simply constructed that the most inexperienced can successfully operate it. The other points mainly to be considered, and which are the most desirable, are durability, rapidity, capacity for work, ease of operation, regularity of motion, uniformity of tension, and silence while in operation. The Light-Running New Home fills the above requirements, and is said to combine the good points of all sewing machines, with the addition of many new improvements and labor-saving devices. The price is no higher than that of other machines, and every lady who is the happy possessor of one may rest assured she has indeed a treasure. For sale by D. B. H. Power & Co., Marblehead.

After Diphtheria.—Diphtheria is a terrible disease, requiring the greatest medical skill to effect a complete cure. Even when its power is broken, it clings to the patient with great persistency, and often leaves the system poisoned and prostrated. Just here Hood's Sarsaparilla does a vast amount of good, expelling impurities from the blood, giving it richness and vitality, while it renovates nd strengthens the system. (c)

Pruning and Scraping the Orchard.

BY RICHARD W. HURLEY.

If orchards were properly cared for there would be no need of tree scraping, but with this as with pruning it is a too frequent practice to allow the trees to get in as bad a condition as possible and then have a serious time at pruning. It would be my advice to give the trees each spring some alkaline wash and there would be little use for the scraper. If one once puts the trunks of his trees in healthy condition they will look a great deal better and really are more healthy and thrifty. If one has a neglected orchard he should not let a spring go by without an attempt to renovate it. Old trunks covered with scales of bark and coated with mosses should have in the first place a thorough pruning and scraping, and this should extend along the larger limbs so far as is necessary. After this scraping they should receive a good strong alkali wash, and I know of nothing better than good home made soft soap, made from lye or potash and grease mixed with a certain amount of sulphur. I do not refer to the boughten soft soap, which is mainly a fraud, it being only cheap hard soap made into a jelly with water. If soft soap can be had mix it with enough water to make it so thin that it will apply evenly with a brush. It may be necessary to use hot water and it should be only so diluted that it will work readily and be applied with a white wash brush or large paint brush. The best time to do this is in the long damp and foggy spells that are common in the month of March or April. The soap liquid will not dry soon but have several days to act before it is washed off by the rains. If the home made soft soap is not to be had then use a wash made of potash, a pound to every three gallons of water, and apply it in a similar manner. The advice occasionally given to make a wash by heating salsoda and then dissolving is simply nonsense. Salsoda is not rendered caustic by heating and it is no different when dissolved than the same would have been without heating.

The orchard is the only part of the farm that is expected to yield two crops and so long as the practice prevails of taking off a crop of hay or grain in addition to one of fruit, so long shall we have complaints of bitter rot and other evils. Not only should the land be given up to the trees when of bearing age, but these should be manured if not every year at least every other year. Not by putting a small heap next to the trunk but by spreading a good dressing over the whole surface and then turn it under by shallow plowing. There are multitudes of orchards throughout this town too good to cut down yet bearing fruit only fit for cider making or feeding to swine. The trees are full of "suckers" which take the whole strength of the tree and deprive the fruit of its nourishment. I have asked some why they did not trim them and they say they don't have enough fruit on them to pay for the trouble. How can they have fruit when waste wood and suckers are eating the whole life out of the trees? Some owners frequently ask what shall we do with them? First, if the fruit is poor change it by grafting. It is often the case that pruning should go along with grafting, particularly the tops of the trees which have become thick and matted together. But in pruning let no one mount the trees rough shod and with ax and saw hack away at the lower limbs and those in the interior. Instead of this thin out the old decayed limbs, cut out a few of the upper limbs as well as the lower, and try to preserve the symmetry of the tree. In grafting begin at the top and renew about one-third of the tree each year. The ground will need renovating also by plowing and manuring. The work should be done carefully without barking the trees or breaking their roots. When the trunks and limbs have become mossy and so rough as to harbor insects on their eggs, scrape them and wash them with strong soft soap as stated above.

WEST PEABODY.

THE GREAT PLOUGHING MATCH AT LORING'S.

This long advertised event came off on Wednesday last in presence of a vast concourse of people, assembled from all sections of the district. There were five contestants for the grand prize offered to the most successful competitor, to be awarded about the middle of November next, to wit,—the owner of the premises, the present occupant of his seat in Congress, Gen. Cogswell, of Salem, Haskell, of Gloucester, and Blunt, of Haverhill. Other competitors had been somewhat expected, but for reasons satisfactory to themselves, as well as to the general public, they failed to put in an appearance. Among these was the worthy President of the County Agricultural Society, who said that his horses had had nothing but ensilage to eat through the winter, and that in consequence of his position upon the question of the division of his town, he would be unable to command a single vote therein. Another expected contestant was a distinguished Editor, who had so angered the Knights of Labor by his attacks upon them in his journal, that he did not believe that all the prayers of Harrington's New Brunswick scabs would be able to save him. The West Peabody Crank was offered a sulky, but he remarked that the honors already thrust upon him by his town were all that his modesty could bear.

The five selected competitors now prepared themselves for the struggle, by partaking from the same board of that kind of nourishment which they believed would best fit them for the work before them, and by attireing themselves in such garments as in their judgment would enable them to bring all their energies into play. Loring's plate was heaped up with corn beef, cabbage and parsnips. Haskell dined upon corn bread and halibut steak. Stone had before him a liberal supply of blue fish caught from the mouth of the Merrimac. Cogswell had Ipswich clams on the half shell and Limberger cheese; while Blunt had asked to be supplied with alewives from the Shawsheen and Spicket, remarking that while they were awful bony, they were very sweet and nourishing. Loring, who had just arrived from Washington to take part in the match, wore a swallow tail coat cut from the finest broadcloth. Stone had on his usual congressional suit, which was threadbare and shabby from the long service it had rendered him. Gen. Cogswell had on a sack suit of liberal dimensions, his tailor having long since abandoned all efforts to fit any garment to his person. Haskell, so far as his attire was concerned, might have passed for a Cape Ann fisherman, while Blunt's outfit was that of any ordinary office boy.

The hour had now arrived at which the match was to commence. The men mounted their sulkies. The team driven by the handsome Doctor was a splendid pair of cherry-red horses, with crimped manes and tails, and wearing gold mounted harnesses, the Doctor's coat-tails falling over the seat of his sulky. The Newburyport contestant, who rode next to him, had a spanking pair of grays, which had long been the pride of all the aristocrats of High street and Newbury Old Town. Cogswell brought out from a Beacon street stable, a pair of milk white steeds which all Hubdom affirmed could not be equalled on the continent. Blunt had before him a span of blacks as glossy as silk woven in the looms of Lyons. The fair ladies living in the city located on the bluffs of the Merrimac, were willing to match them with anything that Arabia herself could produce. Haskell's team was selected with more regard to strength and training than to beauty.

The word was now given, and the start was made, the vast throngs locating themselves in knots where they could best survey the entire field, each contestant having his special admirers. The Blaine republicans who came into the party about the time that Voorhees fled to Canada, predicted success for the Doctor, while the great Seedman of the County, who had kept a three masted ship plying between Marblehead and Washington, loaded down with seeds one way and public documents the other, was equally hopeful. The smart ploughmen of Essex worth, with farmer Huse at their head, encouraged Col. Stone by repeating the old saw which he understood so well, that "possession was nine points of the law." The old soldiers who had ploughed with Cogswell from Atlanta to Washington, assured him that he would have no difficulty in running his sulky from Essex to the door of the Capital. They reminded him that he had done a good deal of successful ploughing on the fertile fields of Salem, and of his own senatorial district, and that he might hope for equal triumphs on a larger arena. The admirers of Haskell, who embraced most of the old fugle-men, wire-pullers, and pipe layers of the State, assured him that, although he had done very little ploughing on his

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS.

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

Regulation 1st. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

Regulation 2d. No house offal, filthy water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fish-monger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

Regulation 3d. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

Regulation 4th. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

Regulation 5th. No hogs or goats shall be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water and regularly and freely disinfected.

Regulation 6th. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

Regulation 7th. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

Regulation 8th. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall NOT allow their children thus withdrawn to re-enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

Regulation 9th. Night soil carts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov. 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

own account, yet, having superintended a good many matches for others, they believed his outlook was brilliant in the extreme. Beard, the great advocate of Civil Service Reform, had been promoted to one of the most lucrative offices in the Commonwealth, and why should not he who had been so efficient in all minor positions, be called, in the ripeness of his years and abilities, to go up higher. The friends of Blunt encouraged him with the reflection that as no Haverhill ploughman had been selected for a full generation to ride his sulky to Washington, the whole district could not now do otherwise than bid him God speed in his undertaking.

While all this conversation was going on among the several groups of admirers, the contestants with their sulkies were going round and round, the furrows turned, although of an unequal breadth and thickness, not as yet showing anything particularly worthy of condemnation. At this point Loring's plough hitting a concealed rock, he was thrown headlong from his seat to the earth, to the utter ruin of the finest hat which had ever adorned the rider's head. Not long after he had regained his seat, making light of his loss and remarking that new hats were plenty in Washington, and that the Agricultural Department had not as yet got all of his money, Stone's grays came into proximity to his sulky. The off one suddenly became vicious, seized the Doctor by one of his coat tails, and tore the garment to the collar. The Doctor, turning upon the Colonel, condemned him for not restraining his steeds, while the latter rejoined that he either should go to the rear or keep out of his way. The Doctor sent the ruined garment to the house, with directions to his wife to forward instantly his next best coat, delays being always dangerous, and frightfully so in this emergency. Mrs. L. staring at the ruined claw-hammer, cried, "Mercy on me! That garment was gotten up at vast expense by the Doctor, to be worn at our next Washington reception;" nevertheless, as in duty bound, she delivered at once to the servant the Doctor's next best coat, remarking "it was the only decent coat left in the house, and begging the servant to keep Stone and his horses at a safe distance in the rear. Notwithstanding these mishaps, and others that need not here be described, the Doctor's furrows, creditable at the first, grew deeper and broader, to the delight of many an old ploughman's heart. The cherry-red steeds, though whitened with foam, showed strength and endurance of the highest order. His admirers, while conceding he might not win the great prize, which he so ardently coveted, said that no defeat could ever dishearten him, or divert him from his course.

The attention of the observing throng was now directed to ploughman Stone, who sat upon his sulky without sweating a hair, or manifesting the least anxiety. Some said that this was owing to the fact that his plough had been in constant use for a long series of years, so it had been impossible for a particle of rust to gather upon it. Its point and mould-board were as bright as a Bland dollar fresh from the mint, and the lightest touch was sufficient for its guidance. Others said that the Colonel's garments, which were threadbare, were of the lightest description, and such as would not vex or irritate the flesh. Indeed his life-long training in the plough field had worn away all his surplus adipose matter, and not leaving a quart of liquid of any kind in his entire organism, perspiration was impossible. At this stage it was remarked that the High street grays, while moving fast and gracefully around the field, did not seem to be taxed at all in their strength, while the steeds driven by the other contestants were sweating from every pore. One iniquitous ploughman from Essex south, said that the horses had caught the temper of their High street admirers, none of whom were likely to die from over exertion. At this point a scene occurred which it is somewhat unpleasant to relate. The inspectors began to examine his furrows, which they found by rule and marker to be very narrow, and mere ribbons in thickness, which explained at once the coolness of the ploughman and the easy movement of his High street grays. The Colonel excused himself by saying that he could plough deep and broad upon an emergency, for they all knew that he had buried Butler in his first great campaign, and he thought he might presume a little in his advancing years upon the reputation which was then won. But for his efforts, the cock-eyed monster would have slain Gov. Long, in which case Virgil would never have been translated into immaculate English. He appealed to them in view of his great services to the State and to English literature on that occasion to pardon the little sleight of hand work which had attracted their attention. He freely admitted that if he had done his duty as he might have performed it, the Doctor's claw-hammer would have remained intact. He added that his local Editor had told him that he might presume to any extent upon the stupidity of the plough-joggers of Essex south, but having learned his mistake, he would henceforth turn a deeper and broader furrow.

Cogswell, with his milk white steeds, was the observed of all observers. The latter were soon covered with foam and begrimmed with dirt, the weight of the driver forcing the plough deep among the stones, while the shortness of his neck prevented his turning his eyes so as to give proper breadth to the furrow. He run terribly to land. If Stone was too narrow and shallow, he was too deep and broad, and was often involved in difficulty. His adipose was against him, and every one wondered how that, with the length of his body and the shortness of his legs, he could have marched from Atlanta to the sea. His admirers, while admitting that he could not wade the Atlantic, said that he had faced rebels by the score, and had come out victorious every time; that no matter how his sulky run, he could not be thrown from it, and you always knew where to find him; that though his inordinate appetite for shell fish and Limberger cheese, had sometimes overtaxed his gastric energies, he had a vast deal of vitality left, and they believed that he stood a good fighting chance of winning the prize.

The Gloucester ploughman meanwhile was giving evidence that his education had not fitted him for the work in which he was engaged. His horses were moving with great irregularity, the driver declaring that he had looked his sulky all over, and he didn't believe the blasted thing had any helm, for the jib-boom was making all points of the compass. He declared that his larboard horse was crowding the starboard animal all the time, whereupon one of his listeners, noticing he had hitched his reins into his hame rings, instead of connecting them with the bits of his bridles, informed him of his mistake, whereupon Haskell dubbed him a land-lubber, and asked him if he didn't suppose he knew every rope in the ship. He was approached at this point by an old Gloucester sea captain, who asked him what headway he was making. The rider informed him that his sulky was rolling terribly, and asked him if, in view of the heavy head winds he was encountering, it wouldn't be well for him to cast anchor where he was, or scud for the nearest port, whereupon the old tar said to him that he was a long way in the rear, and might as well abandon all hope of the prize. At this point another old tar coming up, remarked that, while the out look was not promising, if it were his case, he should throw the freight overboard, crowd on all sail, and let the sulky drive before the wind. The rider said he would take his advice, but before he had proceeded far, a sunken ledge was encountered, which he declared was not laid down on his chart, and the damage occasioned by it was too great to be repaired. He declared that his sulky had stove in her bottom, and must be abandoned right where she was, which was accordingly done.

The Haverhill ploughman, although from the first regarded as an adventurer by all the other contestants for the grand prize, was doing creditable work. Before the trial commenced, he had been advised by the marine husbandmen of Cape Ann to pool issues with their favorite, but he declined the invitation, adding that if he were to pool issues with any one, it would be with the Newburyport ploughman, who had won so many prizes that he probably would not in any event ride again, although but little dependence could be placed upon his word to that effect, as past experience had abundantly proved. There was indeed too much truth in the old saw, that ploughmen seldom die and never resign. At any rate, leaping upon the seat of his sulky, he said, "I mount this instrument in the interest of but one man, and that man is Blunt," to which asseveration all the ploughmen of his section cried, Amen. His coal black steeds, which showed speed and endurance, were admirably handled at the beginning, his furrows being straight, and of the regulation width and depth, but the other sulky-men making him all the trouble they could, toward the end of the contest his strength seemed to abate somewhat, although there was no failure even now. Every one remarked that if he had dined on Merrimac salmon, instead of Shawsheen alewives, his prospect of winning the grand prize would have been excellent. His work was without trick or subterfuge, and he may win it still.

While the grand trial for the prize, to be awarded next November, was going on, young Colcord of West Peabody, pulling an immense cigar in his mouth, mounted his sulky, and performed, without looking for the prize, by far the best work of the occasion. He was asked to put in his claim. He would not do so, but was heard to say that he was ashamed of much of the work that had been done, and doubted if either of the contestants won. It was time that some of the ploughmen were making their wills, and getting ready to die, leaving the sulky to be run by new men who were better acquainted with the modern methods of agriculture. He was informed at this point by an old sodder that modesty was becoming in the young. He said he knew that, but he would bet his sulky that there were scores of ploughmen in the District who could do better work than any they had seen that day, and he hoped that some one of them would get the prize. The correspondent of the PRESS said to him that, as he had but a page of note paper left, he hoped he would study brevity, which he accordingly did.

The trial being over, the contestants partook of refreshments in the farm mansion. In addition to these gentlemen, there were present at the tables, the President of the New Hampshire Agricultural Society, who has ploughed for prizes in his day; the Seedsman of the General Government under the late Commissioner of Agriculture; the Reverend horse-trainer of the District; the Soldier's Friend; the West Peabody Crank; Benj. P. Ware, who is anxious to have the Massachusetts Legislature incorporate his frying-pan as an independent town; and the humble correspondent of the PRESS, who shown conspicuously beside the superannuated reporters of the Boston journals, who were also among the invited guests.

The large furniture establishment of W. C. Packard & Co., of Salem, is attracting considerable attention at the present time for several reasons. First, this firm are about to make a new departure in their business by increasing their accommodations and adding carpets and a general line of house furnishing goods. Secondly, in making preparations for this change which is to be made at once, they are offering inducements to purchasers in the line of furniture which exceed any offers ever made by them. It is a pleasure to commend this firm to our readers, on account of the well known reliability of all their goods. They can be depended upon, and at the same time can be purchased at very low prices. As we were shown through the warerooms crowded full with parlor suites, chamber sets and everything in this line of furniture, we were struck with the low prices of all these goods compared with the prices of only a few years ago, making it comparatively easy, financially, for a couple to go to housekeeping. When nicely upholstered parlor suites can be bought for forty and fifty dollars, such, for instance, as it took double that amount to purchase a few years since, there is certainly reason for remark. On the first floor is displayed a choice line of baby carriages—made up in every conceivable style for comfort. This firm have a large trade in these goods, and are ready to make prices which will compare with any house in the country.

The additions proposed are to be made by taking down the partitions on their second floors and extending their room over the crockery store and Price's dry goods store. When completed they will have a carpet room 125x21 with an elegant plate glass front. They will keep here a line of oil cloths, matting of all kinds and window curtains, as well as the regular assortment of carpets. Their upholstery department will be moved [illegible] stairs where they will have increased accommodations and be ready for any grade of work. In the rear, on the first floor, when the addition is made, they will have a large room for stoves, and they will carry also a full line of house furnishings. They propose carrying all grades of goods,—low priced goods and the finest to be had in the country. With one or two exceptions there will not be a store east of Portland of larger dimensions, or carrying a larger amount of goods. They will have eight rooms 125 feet deep. The repairs are to be completed about June 1st, the frontage of the present store is to be altered, painted and covered with new signs, making the store more attractive in every way from the outside. We congratulate the firm on the success of their business which renders these alterations and improvements necessary.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THE REPORTS which have been published of the last meeting of the Law and Order League give a recommendation of the Secretary of that body in favor of closing the stores on Sunday which are kept open. Whether this is the sentiment of the League we are not informed. But we consider that the League will listen to good advice if they decide to "go slow" in this business and devote their attention to the sales of intoxicating liquors.

The movement, if such there be, is directed, we presume, against the two horse car stations on the square. Our opinion on this matter was stated in these columns when a prosecution was begun against Geo. Stevens, at the outset. We see no reason for changing our views as therein expressed, when there are two stations instead of one.

Briefly stated, lines of horse cars must have waiting rooms, and it is usual to have them in some place where light lunches can be provided, not only Sunday but every day. By common consent, the law relative to Sunday sales is waived in these cases. This is because persons waiting are many times under the necessity of obtaining such lunches. Dining rooms and all places where meals and lunches are provided are allowed nearly everywhere to keep open on Sundays not only during meal time to serve their regular guests, but to serve transient customers as well.

If the two places referred to sold anything of a contraband nature, if there was any suspicion of any intoxicants being sold there, if there was ever any disturbance on the premises, there would be some reason in the attempt to close them on Sunday. But there is no such suspicion. The goods sold on that day are only eatables, soda or ginger ale, and cigars.

And when it is considered that this town is "no license," the Law and Order League ought to encourage such temperance places as those of George Stevens and John F. Pickering, where light drinks take the place, and in many instances fill the place, of lager beer and other intoxicants. Close these places and others will be sought, and ten chances to one, it will be where other than temperance drinks are sold.

A waiting room must be had by the railroads, open on the Lord's day. That is admitted. It may be that they will pay for one, solely for waiting. If they are obliged to, of course they will. It will be a necessity. But why make them do it? Why not allow the matter to remain as it is? Is there any reason except that certain parties want the old Sunday law enforced? We know of none. No one is harmed, no disturbance is made, no one is intoxicated as a result of the keeping open of these stores.

As we said before in these columns, if an attempt is made in this direction, we want the Sunday law enforced in every particular. There is no reason for enforcing one part of it, or against a few parties, to the exclusion of others. Every shop must be closed, even to the apothecaries. The bake shops must not be allowed to sell, deliver, or keep open. The sale of Sunday papers must be stopped. Riding on the Lord's day, except under the provisions of the law, must be prohibited, and offenders prosecuted. Any thing short of this wholesale enforcement is persecution of particular parties. Such persecution will not be sustained by the citizens of this town.

THE ANNUAL report of the School Committee is in the hands of the binder, and will soon be ready for distribution. By it we learn that the whole number of pupils registered in the schools for the year was 2009; the average membership 1696; the average attendance 1442; the per cent. of attendance 85. The amount of tuition received from non-resident scholars has been $76.

The committee speak in favorable terms of the free text books, and that the opinion of School Boards and teachers elsewhere coincides with their own in the promptness in which the school work is begun at every term. There is not the usual delay in obtaining books, causing a loss of time which seemed to be unavoidable, under the old system. Considering that a greater part of the opposition to the free text book law came originally from School Boards, this conclusion is worth attention.

The County Commissioners are the subjects of censure on the matter of truancy. The report says: "The County Commissioners have not established a truant school, and evidently do not intend to do so." This may or may not be true. There is certainly little disposition on the part of our citizens to question the opinion of the School Board that such a school is imperatively needed.

The reports of the sub-committees are fuller than last year, and that of the Chairman of the Board, on the High School, is worthy the reading of every citizen of this town. We hope it will not only be read but carefully considered by the parents of children in our schools. The committee wisely consider the High School the key of the whole educational system, and state the emphatic decision of the committee that in future admission to this school does not mean graduation, and that pupils to obtain a diploma must maintain the average of 65 per cent. in scholarship.

Much stress is laid, in all the reports of the sub-committees, on the influence which the study of music has exerted in the schools. Mr. Carroll, in the report of the Wallis School, says that the schools have improved in discipline and that the scholars are more tractable and better tempered. If music will do this, a result which is not unexpected to its advocates in the schools, it surely deserves the fifteen minutes daily which is devoted to its exercise. Mr. Farnham, in his report of the Bowditch School, bears the same testimony. Mr. Farnham has not always been of this opinion; but with the frankness which is characteristic of this gentleman, he acknowledges that its fruits are too evident to be misinterpreted. We quote from Mr. Farnham's report: "The addition of the study of music to our school curriculum has proved a most valuable one. Many, including the writer, were inclined to think that music was not one of the necessaries of a common school education, and that therefore the committee should hesitate to appropriate the money of the town for the purpose. As a purely mental acquisition, this opinion may yet be entertained of this study, but to the surprise and gratification of those who have become cognizant of the fact, a most powerful moral educator has been developed in what appeared to many a mere accomplishment. In many homes of this town, music, as learned in the common schools, is operating to strengthen the influence of home and morality, and to weaken the influence of the grog shop and other contaminating forces. Let us, by all means, have as many of such additions to our school course as possible, even if the merely mental curriculum be abridged. Let us, if possible, have that symmetrical training of all the faculties of our children that shall prevent that too common warping of the mind, which makes it reason clearly in matters of business, but fail to see the effect of votes in a wrong direction."

APROPOS OF music in schools the following sentence in the School Report, on the subject of Music, is given for what it is worth: In music the Wallis school still holds the lead, and for no other reason than that the teachers, one and all, give to it their very best efforts; and give to the pupils that encouragement and drill which is indispensable to their progress.

If the above statement is true, and we presume it is, in the main, it suggests several inquirers. If the encouragement and drill given in this school is "indispensable to the progress" of the scholars in music, and the study of music is as valuable as the Committee consider it, why is not the same encouragement and drill insisted upon in the other schools? And if the Wallis school holds the lead for no other reason than that the teachers give to it their best efforts, where does the teaching of Prof. Bill come in? Why would it not be a good idea to let these best efforts continue, let the "encouragement and drill" go on without Mr. Bill, and let him devote more time to the other schools?

We do not question the truth of the statement regarding the Wallis school. When Mr. Barnes was teacher in the Bowditch, before there was any musical instructor in our schools, there was instruction in music in this school. This is because Mr. Barnes is a musician; he is competent, perhaps as competent as is Prof. Bill to give such instruction. As it is essential to the success of music that more time than the weekly visits of Prof. Bill should be given to it, if music is to be taught, it should be supplemented in all the schools by the "encouragement and drill" which is commended in the Wallis school. The Committee should see to it that teachers are placed in our schools who are competent to so supplement the work of the musical instructor. In the city of Boston, and in many other cities, no teacher can obtain a position without being qualified in this direction. This is of course impracticable here; but it ought to be possible to have some teacher in every building who is able and willing to devote a little time to such "drill and encouragement" as has brought the Wallis school to its high standard.

Much as we value the aid which music gives to the school curriculum, we might question the advisability of the teachers devoting to it their best efforts. We do not consider it of the greatest value to our schools, but we do consider it of sufficient value to receive help and encouragement to the extent at least of the fifteen minutes drill which is prescribed in the rules of the Committee, as published in the Report. If it does not receive this time, who is at fault? Certainly not the musical instructor. Possibly the teacher, but surely the School Committee, who are responsible for the enforcement of their own rules.

In the death of Mrs. Lydia G., widow of the late Anthony Snow, which occurred in Peabody on April 14th, we note the departure of one of the very few, who, between the age of 80 and 90 years have lingered on the invisible line, waiting to step across into the unseen world. Mrs. Snow was a resident here nearly all her life of about 85 years, and has lived most of the time within a short distance of the Lexington Monument. She has been a member of the South Church for more than fifty years, and was one of the oldest upon its roll. She had ten children, of whom four survive, two sons in the banking business in Boston, and two daughters, one a resident of Peabody, and one of Cambridge. She was truly a helpmeet to her husband, a faithful and devoted mother to her children, an exemplary Christian, and a lover of everything good. To the poor she was always the sympathizing helper. To her neighbors she was an efficient friend in time of need, always ready to do anything in her power to relieve distress, and to console the bereaved. She was a great lover of children, and drew them to her by her kind words and winning smiles. She had a large and generous heart, and all the woes of humanity which came to her knowledge, awoke a response in its wide sympathies.

A strong Christian character she possessed, which enabled her to bear many trials and bereavements with calm submission to the divine will. Amid the cares of a large family, her little ones were trained to the Sunday School and the church, and to habits of industry and virtue. For many years she has been an invalid, and at times subjected to great suffering; but for the past few years has been in comfortable health at home, while unable to go out except at rare intervals. Some two years ago, a slight stroke of paralysis impaired her strength and vigor. On Monday the 12th inst, an attack of pneumonia proved too much for her strength, and in three days proved fatal. She passed away gently, sustained by a firm trust in her Redeemer, and comforted by the ministries of her children, she passed on to join the larger number of her family who had gone before her and awaited her on the "Shining Shore". "Blessed are the dead who die in the Lord." *

EASTER SERVICES.

At the Universalist Church, Rev. Mr. Sprague preached from Luke 20:38; "For He is not the God of the dead but of the living; for all live unto Him." This declaration is from the highest authority, said the preacher, and teaches the resurrection as a fact. There is not one who is dead in the sight of God. Christ here spoke in answer to the Sadducees, who did not question the number, or the time or the manner of the resurrection, but denied that there was any future life. They held that death meant annihilation. They came to Jesus with the supposed case of the woman who had seven husbands, asking whose she should be in the other life if there was any. It was an unanswerable argument to them, but Christ easily controverts it, showing that it was founded on false analogy. They were in error because there is no marriage in the other life. Christ then goes on to explain the duration, moral condition and scope of the future life. First it is endless. Neither can they die any more. Next their moral condition, for they are equal to the angels and are the children of God, being the children of the resurrection. Lastly, its scope, for all live unto Him.

Christ's reply was most effective. The Sadducees were put to silence. The impression left must have been profound, and their feelings were intensified by the mention of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob—who though long since passed from earth, yet their souls survived and with all the hosts of the departed were still in existence, for God is the God of the living, not the dead. It was a most wonderful statement, and we are prepared to read that when they heard these things they were astonished at his doctrine. So were the disciples and women on the first Easter morning; they were spellbound and quite overwhelmed.

The theme was too vast and glorious. Then as now the human mind fails to conceive the sublimity of a universal heritage to immortality. It is the central force in all christian teaching and motive; as a belief its influence is second to none. When Christ died nothing appeared more weak than the kingdom which He established. There was only a handful of his followers, poor, unlearned, obscure. Even they who most loved Him had forsaken Him and fled. Who could prophecy that they should establish Christianity? How were they to triumph? What was it that brought strength out of their weakness? There is but one answer—the power of the resurrection from the dead. It kindled a new life in all who heard—the glorious news went from heart to heart. The block, the gibbet and martyrdom all failed to stifle the faith and zeal of the young church. It successfully resisted all the attempts of the Roman Emperors to crush it out. The dead rise—why fear to die? Before Christ was risen the truth of immortality was faintly seen. There was no answer to the question "shall a man live again?" In Him the answer comes. "Because I live ye shall live also. I go to prepare a place for you." His resurrection is the assurance and pledge of our own.

The preacher was induced to consider the extent of the resurrection more in detail because of the belief by some in the annihilation of those who were called wicked. They would rather believe that for the impenitent this life ends their existence, than that God would maintain or permit endless torture. But in looking to the scriptures the preacher found nothing tending to confirm this doctrine of annihilation. He could not find any conditions or restrictions on the resurrection from the dead. All men, irrespective of blood or condition at death, are equally privileged. It is even a constitutional necessity, and there is no exception to this absolute rule. Suicide is an impossibility. The scriptures are clear upon this point. Our text is an illustration of it. "God is not the God of the dead but of the living, for all live unto Him." There is the evidence of Paul. "As in Adam all die, even so in Christ shall all be made alive." "As we have borne the image of the earthy, we shall also bear the image of the heavenly. The mortal must put on immortality." Upon this basis all are to be crowned with the gift of continued life and immortality beyond the river.

The resurrection becomes more interesting when we consider the time or method. When does the resurrection take place? Does it occur immediately or are all raised simultaneously at the end of the world? If as the old theology teaches there is to be a general resurrection at some future time, when the material bodies and souls are to be re-united, there must be a state of spiritual existence meantime. There must be an intermediate state in which all souls must wait. This is not proved by scriptures. They only recognize two states—corruption and incorruption, mortal and immortal, the earthly and heavenly. Resurrection is the process by which those who die are introduced to the other life. So we are raised the day we die. Christ said to the thief on the cross: "To-day shalt thou be with me in Paradise." Paul in his second epistle to the Corinthians expressed the hope of entering the next world without delay. "We are always confident and willing rather to be absent from the body and present with the Lord." Now if Paul were going into an intermediate state, it is difficult to see how absence from the body would bring him into presence of the Lord. Again he says: "For me to live is Christ—but to die is gain; for I have a desire to depart and be with Christ." If he supposed or the Philipians were to suppose that he was to lie in a dormant state to the end of time or until a general resurrection, how was it a gain to die then? Evidently he desired to go, because he would be with Christ immediately. Therein was the gain.

The scriptural interpretations of our church on this point are clear, reasonable and positive; and they hold the field against all partialistic and agnostic views. We do not claim to have apprehended, but we do possess a belief and proclaim it to the best of our ability and opportunity. The Universalist Church teaches that all souls are raised as soon as death ensues—leaving forever the natural body to mingle with the dust. Christ is the first fruits superior in rank and dignity of all that are raised up. Those who remain on the earth when the end comes will be changed in a twinkle—changed to immortal beings. Then all souls will have put off corruption and be adorned with the spotless robes of immortality, even with a spiritual imperishable body. All physical suffering, diseases, sinful surroundings shall be forever put away. Then indeed "will the creature be delivered from the bondage of corruption into the glorious liberty of the children of God."

At the Methodist church, Rev. G. A. Phinney, the new pastor, occupied his pulpit for the first time, preaching from Matthew 37:63; "After three days I will rise again." The preacher said this was Easter Sunday, and he thought it appropriate to direct attention to themes suggested by that day—leaving what he would say relative to the new relations of pastor and people till the next Sunday. The preacher continued, that we are sometimes called to sit by dying friends, and the first question that arises is, Is this the end? A writer has said that the life of the Saviour ended with the last sigh. It is not so. There are pages beyond the miracles. There is the history of the resurrection—the ascension—and all the posthumous works of Christ. He was placed in the tomb. The Roman soldiers were put on guard. On the third day Christ breaks the bonds. The women miss the Saviour and the word goes forth that he has risen.

The preacher considered some of the objections to the resurrection. It has been said that it is unphilosophical. It rests on human testimony which is not to be trusted. It may be true that it rests on human testimony but it is not true that it rests on invalid testimony.

It is also said that it is a physical impossibility—that God's laws are uniform—that miracles never occur. It is easy to see the fallacy of this reasoning. Miracles and the resurrection are a part of the plan of God. Miracles are natural events in heaven. The resurrection supplies an inherent want in nature. If the want exists it must be natural.

It is objected that it is a mystery and a myth. Did the disciples steal him? If it is a myth it must have grown up between the years of 20 and 100. Chronologically this is impossible. It is admitted that the epistles to the Corinthians and Galatians were written previous to 60, and by the epistle to the Galatians Chapter 2d, Paul went to Jerusalem from Arabia fourteen years after. That would bring it to the year 37, and it is conceded that the death of Christ took place about 34. Between 34 and 37, then, the myth must have been formulated. This is impossible.

It is argued that the resurrection is a legend. The disciples loved the Saviour; they followed him in his work and to the cross of Calvary. If a legend it must have been created, and must have the form of a legend. But we read in the gospels the simple truths of history.

If we are going to criticize the witnesses to the resurrection, we would argue that their testimony must be positive, that there must be an objective reality, and that their character must be unimpeachabe. The preacher then reviewed the testimony which is given in the Scriptures by the different witnesses—Mary, Cleopus, Thomas, Peter and Paul. All these are sufficient testimony. In addition there is the testimony of Christianity—of the personal forgiveness of sins. Christ has been moulding the world through its witnesses in the church. There is also the testimony of the Church militant who sing of the resurrection and echo the song of the Arab, "I know that my Redeemer liveth."

In the glass ball shoot at the Forrest street range, last Friday, Joseph Lowd of Salem won the medal from the present holder, Mr. Charles Buffum. In the Clay pigeon shoot Mr. Geo. Walton won the medal.

It is probable that a large number of Peabody people who are interested in the Enos electric railroad will visit New York the first of next week to inspect the operation. Special rates have been made by the Fall River line, and about sixty expect to go from this vicinity.

There is a robin on Washington street that is keeping up an aggressive warfare on a cellar window where its own self is reflected. This is the second season that the bird has picked away at the glass, having spent most of last season in the foolish attempt to drive away his shadow.

C. C. Farwell & Co's. factory at Danvers was shut down to-day in respect to the memory of Mrs. Laura (Merrill) Blake, daughter of Mr. H. M. Merrill of the above firm, who died at her home in Haverhill a few days ago of pneumonia. Mrs. Blake was a native of this town and was a graduate of our high school. She leaves a husband and three children.

The committee on the acoustic properties of the town hall have decided to put transoms over the doors of the small halls, and ventilate the small hall in the same manner and also by connection with the ventilators now in the building. This will make some improvement. Probably the arrangements in the larger town hall will be carried out later, as the appropriation recommended covered this also in the estimate.

The West Peabody Farmers's Club will give a first class musical and variety entertainment Friday evening, April 30, 86, at West Peabody Hall, consisting of songs and character acting by the Diamond Quartette of Salem, Sheldon and Downing in banjo and bone solos, singing by Mrs. E. A. Needham, singing and guitar playing by the Ingraham sisters. The Peabody Orchestra will furnish music; violin solos and dramatic readings by well known artists, beside a pleasing variety of other entertainment.

There is a doubly bereaved family on Washington street. About two months ago Mr. Moody B. Cone lost his wife by consumption, and last Friday morning his only daughter, Mrs. Alice Huntoon, died very suddenly of diabetes at the age of 17 years, 10 months and 22 days. She was able to be about on Wednesday and appeared to be in usual health. Her funeral took place last Sunday and was attended by Rev. J. W. Colwell of South Peabody. The remains were taken to Campton Village, N. H., and buried with those of her mother which were placed in the receiving tomb at the time of her death. The father and husband have the sympathy of the community.

Word was received in town Monday that the Enos Electric Railroad had made a very successful trial trip at the Taft electrical works in Greenville, N. J., on that day. This caused a flutter of excitement, as a large number of our citizens are stockholders, and Mr. John A. Enos, of this town, is the inventor. About 500 feet of the railway is built of a section one-eighth of a mile in length and it is expected the whole will be completed by the last of the week. The section will be built with curves and steep grades that the test may be a severe one. Mr. C. J. Messer, the treasurer, and Mr. Allen Foster, the general manager, left for New York last night to superintend its construction. The trial trip was made in an elegant new car and more than pleased those who were present to witness it.

The Victor Manufacturing Company have purchased of J. E. Chapman the novelty works of the latter on Bayley's wharf, and J. C. Stanley and Irvin Besse have purchased the balance of the wharf property, all on private terms. Messrs. Stanley and Besse will at once improve the wharf property, and the Victor company will move into the novelty works as soon as Mr. Chapman vacates, which will probably be in about two months. Mr. Chapman will be obliged to give up his business of manufacturing veneer goods in this city, owing mainly to inability to have his logs brought to this port from the British Provinces, as cheaply as anticipated, in fact he has a cargo which has been ready for shipment for sometime past but cannot get a vessel to take it, except at exorbitant rates. The place will just suit the Victor company, their present quarters in the rear of the factory of A. F. Ross & Co., having become too small for their increasing business.—Newburyport Herald.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Last Sunday the police made a raid on Elizabeth McCarthy who lives on Hancock street, and secured a quantity of hard liquors. The case was called in the police court this morning, and Mrs. McCarthy was represented by Col. Sweeney of Lawrence, and the government by Frank E. Farnham, Esq. According to the testimony of the officers they had quite a tussle. As they approached the house, her son knocked on the window and said "cheese it." Officer Goodwin with Jones and Barnaby rushed in, the former saw Mrs. McCarthy with something under her apron, and he reached for it and secured one side of a three pint pail of whiskey. While he and Mrs. McCarthy were struggling for possession, an eighteen year old daughter mounted the shoulders of the officer, and then officer Barnaby came to the rescue of Goodwin, who with Mrs. McCarthy were badly mixed up on the floor, and the whiskey was spilled over the officers Sunday uniform. The pail was secured with sufficent liquor for the officers to taste of, and with the rest that was found, the judge thought there was enough for a case, and fined her $100 and costs for selling, and $50 and three months for maintaining a liquor nuisance.

A balky horse belonging to B. S. S. Milton, the extract peddler, caused a small crowd to gather on Lowell street Monday morning. After pushing on the reins and the wheels for a while, the animal started.

A sad affair occurred on Saturday at the residence of Mr. James E. Stone, at the corner of Mall street and Western avenue in Lynn. Mr. Stone is a sportsman and has several guns. At about half past seven o'clock in the morning his little son went up stairs to call his father to breakfast and found Mr. Stone dead on the floor with a bullet wound in the left side of the abdomen. A gun was beside him. The supposition is that Mr. Stone was drawing the charge when the weapon was accidentally discharged. He was 40 years of age, and respected by all who knew him. His wife died about a year ago, and he leaves three children. Mr. Stone was a charter member of Sagamore Tribe of Red Men. He was a brother in law of Mr. Simon P. Buxton of this town, and was engaged with him in settling his father's estate.

Mr. Albert Carleton has had a lot of fowls killed by his neighbor's dog.

Poultry thieves are operating in the vicinity of Dublin.

A man was picked up hopelessly drunk the other day on Foster street, and in his pocket was an empty Hostetter's bitters bottle. The query is did he get drunk on that?

During the services at St. John's Church last Sunday morning, there was considerable excitement caused by the sudden death of Mrs. Edward Caden who lives on Hancock street. She had taken her seat in the pew only a few minutes before she expired. Mrs. Caden was about 46 years of age, and left a husband and eight children. It was a sad affair and cast a gloom over the otherwise pleasant Easter service.

There was a runaway this morning, on Union street. A farmer from Middleton got upset, scattering eggs, butter, etc., in profusion. His wagon was badly smashed.

Mr. John Linehan lost a valuable horse by death last Thursday. Mr. L. is not having good luck with his horses.

Daniel J. Cassidy, a boy about a dozen years old, was arrested last Thursday, charged with throwing a stone through the window of a passenger car on the B. & L. road on the same evening. The case was continued.

Mr. Royal Wilson, foreman of the tannery of L. & G. H. Poor, badly cut his foot with an axe last Thursday evening and is compelled to use crutches. Mrs. Wilson, we also learn, is quite sick.

Warren Newhall, a young lad from So. Peabody, was before Judge Merrill this afternoon for an assault on Luther L. French Monday afternoon. The boys had some words after school and the Newhall boy threw a sickle at the French boy tearing his stocking and cutting his leg. His Honor fined the Newhall boy $3.00 without costs, but the father of the lad took an appeal to the higher court and was held in bonds to the amount of $50.

While a lad named Timothy Whalen was playing ball on Northend street, Monday forenoon, the bat slipped, striking Joseph Butler on the nose, breaking it.

Mr. Milo Lawrence, while getting off a wagon in Salem, last Friday, was thrown to the ground and the wheel passed over his hand and one finger was badly bruised.

There was about one hundred present at the Unitarian New England supper last Thursday evening.

The operetta to be given by the Murray Club is to take place May 12th and 13th.

AYER'S SUGAR CATHARTIC COATED PILLS

CURE

Headache, Nausea, Dizziness, and Drowsiness. They stimulate the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels, to healthy action, assist digestion, and increase the appetite. They combine cathartic, diuretic, and tonic properties of the greatest value, are a purely vegetable compound, and may be taken with perfect safety, either by children or adults. E. L. Thomas, Framingham, Mass., writes: "For a number of years I was subject to violent Headaches, arising from a disordered condition of the stomach and bowels. About a year ago I commenced the use of Ayer's Pills, and have not had a headache since." W. P. Hannah, Gormley P. O., York Co., Ont., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for the last thirty years, and can safely say that I have never found their equal as a cathartic medicine. I am never without them in my house." C. D. Moore, Elgin, Ill., writes: "Indigestion, Headache, and Loss of Appetite, had so weakened and debilitated my system, that I was obliged to give up work. After being under the doctor's care for two weeks, without getting any relief, I began taking Ayer's Pills. My appetite and strength returned, and I was soon enabled to resume my work, in perfect health."

SAM JONES ON BASEBALL.

"I learned how to love a man once by a game of townball. When I was a boy we used to play townball. But I will tell you what, if I had a dog and he were to get out and look at a game of baseball an hour, I would go and kill him, I would. None of your baseball in mine. There is not a more corrupting thing this side of hell than baseball. Now, put that down. They all thought I had forgotten that. I never have had any use for it. The idea of a great big young buck twenty-five years old running all over creation for a ball. If your mother wanted you to cut a stick of wood she couldn't get you to do it to save her life, but you dress up in a fool's garb and run after a ball, the hottest day, until your tongue lolls out, you fool you.

"That aint all. It is one of the finest fields for gambling in America. And that is not all. I wouldn't wipe my feet on any crowd that would go out and play baseball on the Sabbath. Those are my sentiments. I couldn't put it in any more concise way than that. I don't know whether you agree with me or not; but you understand me, I reckon, don't you? I will let my boy play ball until he is ten years old, but after he is fifteen years old I believe I will work him out if I catch him at such foolishness as that."

SHOCKED THE DIVINE.

A prominent divine was the invited guest of Mr. B and family. Miss Alice, the charming daughter of the host, was gracing the festivity, and said impulsively:

"Oh, mother, I've been roasting up in my room all afternoon. It's hotter than—"

"Alice!" said the father, sternly.

"I say it's hotter than—"

"Alice!" said her mother, excitedly, and the divine looked at her in alarm.

"I say it's hotter than I ever saw it before," continued the young lady coolly, "and I just sat there without a thing on—"

"Oh, Alice," said her father, in alarm. This time the divine was thoroughly frightened.

"I just sat there without a thing on—"

"Oh, Alice!" said the mother, almost crying.

"I say I just sat there," continued the girl, not noticing the interruptions, "I just sat there without a thing on except my very lightest summer clothing, and read my Bible all the afternoon. Will you have some more soup, doctor?"

THE LAZIEST MAN ON RECORD.

I once knew a man who was afflicted with more lassitude than it would take to stop a saw mill. His name was Joseph Spot, and he was so confounded lazy that when he signed it he would write a lower case, labor-saving j, and then drop his pen on the paper to make the Spot. On one occasion he was in a hotel that burned down. He slept on the first floor because he was too lazy to go up stairs, and when the alarm was sounded he got into the elevator and went up to the top of the house and dropped out of a window because he was too lazy to walk out of his room below, through a hallway ninety feet long. He was hurt pretty badly, but he was too lazy to suffer, and died because the doctor told him it would require great effort to induce him to recover.

A SINGULAR COINCIDENCE.

Directory Canvasser—"And your occupation, please?"

Householder—"Manufacturer of plug tobacco."

Directory Canvasser—"Rather a singular coincidence; the man next door makes shoes."

Householder—"How is that a coincidence?"

Directory Canvasser—"The explanation is simple. He makes shoes, and is therefore a shoemaker. You manufacture plug tobacco, ergo you are a chewmaker, too."

No inquest.

ESSEX, SS. PROBATE COURT.

To the Heirs-at-Law, and others interested in the estate of EDWARD SHERRY, late of Peabody, in said County, laborer, deceased. GREETING:

WHEREAS, James Sherry, Administrator of the estate of said deceased, has presented to said Court his petition for license to sell the whole of the real estate of said deceased for the payment of debts and charges of administration, and for other reasons set forth in said petition:

You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be holden at Salem, in said county, on the first Monday of May, next, at nine o'clock in the forenoon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same; and said administrator is ordered to serve this Citation by publishing the same once a week, three weeks successively, in the Peabody Press, a newspaper printed at Peabody, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, George F. Choate, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twelfth day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

TESTIMONIALS.

"I regard Mr. Eddy as one of the most capable and successful practitioners with whom I have had official intercourse."
CHAS. MASON, Commissioner of Patents.

"Inventors cannot employ a person more trustworthy or more capable of securing for them an early and favorable consideration at the Patent Office."
EDMUND BURKE, late Com. of Patents.

BOSTON, Oct. 19, 1870.

R. H. EDDY, Esq.—Dear Sir: you procured for me, in 1870, my first patent. Since then you have acted for and advised me in hundreds of cases, and procured many patents, re-issues and extensions. I have occasionally employed the best agencies in New York, Philadelphia and Washington, but I still give you almost the whole of my business, in your line, and advise others to employ you.

Yours truly, GEORGE DRAPER.

in time. Kidney diseases may be prevented by purifying, renewing, and invigorating the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. When, through debility, the action of the kidneys is perverted, these organs rob the blood of its needed constituent, albumen, which is passed off in the urine, while worn out matter, which they should carry off from the blood, is allowed to remain. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the kidneys are restored to proper action, and Albuminuria, or

Bright's Disease

is prevented. Ayer's Sarsaparilla also prevents inflammation of the kidneys, and other disorders of these organs. Mrs. Jas. W. Weld, Forest Hill st., Jamaica Plain, Mass., writes: "I have had a complication of diseases, but my greatest trouble has been with my kidneys. Four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla made me feel like a new person; as well and strong as ever." W. M. McDonald, 46 Summer st., Boston, Mass., had been troubled for years with Kidney Complaint. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, he not only my appetite and digestion improved, and my health has been perfectly restored."

DOG LICENSE.

Dogs must be Licensed before MAY FIRST.

The attention of all owners or keepers of Dogs is called to the following Extracts from the Public Statutes, viz:

CHAP. 102, SECT. 80.

"Every owner or keeper of a dog of three months old or over, shall annually, on or before the thirtieth day of April, cause it to be registered and licensed for one year from the first day of the ensuing May, in the office of the clerk of the city or town wherein said dog is kept, and shall cause it to wear around its neck a collar distinctly marked with its owner's name and its registered numbered.

SECT. 82. The fee for every license shall be two dollars for a male dog, and five dollars for a female dog.

SECT. 87 Whoever keeps a dog contrary to the provisions of this chapter shall forfeit fifteen dollars, five dollars of which shall be paid to the complainant, and ten dollars to the treasurer of the county in which the dog is kept: except that in the County of Suffolk the ten dollars shall be paid to the treasurer of the city or town wherein said dog is kept.

ESSEX, ss. PROBATE COURT.

To the Next of Kin, and others interested in the Estate of DANIEL C. GOODWIN, late of Peabody, in said County, currier, deceased, GREETING;

WHEREAS, Levi Spaulding, the Administrator of the estate of said deceased has presented to said Court for allowance the second and final account of his administration on said estate and application has been made for a distribution of the balance in his hands among the next of kin of said deceased. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court, to be holden at Salem, in said county on the first Monday of May, next, at nine o'clock before noon, to show cause, if any you have, why said account should not be allowed and distribution made according to said application.

And said administrator is ordered to serve this Citation by publishing the same once a week, in the Peabody Press, a newspaper printed at Peabody, three weeks successively, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, George F. Choate, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this ninth day of April, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M.]

The spectacular piece The Black Crook, at the Boston Theatre, is quite different in many of its essential features from the piece that had such an immense run several years ago. So many new and attractive novelties are introduced, that it is quite like another piece. Since its revival this season in New York, it has packed Niblo's nightly. The tableaux are magnificent; the Mikado ballet is a great feature. Mons. Arnold as Ko-Ko and Mlle. de Rosa as Katisha do wonders in the way of pantomime, and the three little maids are excellent. There is a large chorus of pretty girls, and many specialties of the best are introduced.

For this holiday week, the last of A Rag Baby at the Park, new music and novel bits of business are to be introduced, so that those who have laughed over the mirthful success before will not be content with one sight and hearing of Mr. Hoyt's comedy. Frank Daniels, Fanny Rice, Clara Lane, Harry Conor and Albert Riddle have all won the tribute of heartiest laughter and applause during the week past, and are sure to delight crowds all the remaining nights of this engagement.

Admirers of the charming Austrian actress, Janish, will find, the coming week, opportunities for enjoying one of her best impersonations. She is to act the title role in Sardou's drama, Princess Andrea, and on the stage of the Boston Museum will have the advantage of the co-operation of Mr. Field's stock company. Mr. Charles Barron is to appear as Prince Maurice de Sagan, J. B. Mason as Frederick, Alfred Hudson as the minister of police. Gabrielle Du Sauld has been especially engaged as Stella, the dancer, and the distribution of characters will include Helen Dayne, Helen Standish, Charles Kent and others.

Nancy and Company, the bright comedy success of the season in New York, will introduce Augustin Daly's company at the Boston Museum Monday. This is the farewell engagement of these artists previous to their departure for Europe. It is limited to a week. A Night Off is to be acted on Friday, and the bill Saturday is to include The Country Girl, A Woman Won't and A Wet Blanket.

Engaged, Broken Hearts, Old Love Letters, Our Society, Saints and Sinners, and Sealed Instructions are included in the repertory of the Madison Square company, who appear at the Park May 3. The artists include Agnes Booth, Maud Harrison, Annie Russell, Mrs. F. J. Phillips, Marie Greenwald, Herbert Kelcey, J. H. Stoddart, C. P. Flockton, W. J. Le Moyne, L. F. Massen and Frank Drew.

Mr. William Redmund and Mrs. Thomas Barry appear at the Museum in their new emotional play, Adolphe Challet, May 10, for its first production in Boston.

The engagement of John T. Raymond will commence May 17 at the Boston Museum. He will have the support of the home company in an excellent repertory.

Mr. H. A. M'Glenen, business agent of the Boston Theatre, has taken a cottage at Newport for the coming season, though how much rest he, himself, will enjoy there is a conundrum. He is a very busy man in summer as well as during the theatrical season.

The first two chapters of William Henry Bishop's new serial, "The Golden Justice," appear in the Atlantic for May. The scene of the story is laid in a western city, and the novel opens in so original a manner as to pique the curiosity of the reader. Charles Egbert Craddock's installment of In the Clouds is in her best manner. Henry James continues his Princess Casamassima, in characteristic style, transporting his hero to Paris, of which he gives some interesting incidental description. Mr. John Fiske continues his papers on American History by one treating of The Weakness of the American Government under the Articles of Confederation. Criticisms of the new Life of Longfellow, and of some recent books of travel and other volumes, with the Contributors' Club and Books of the Month, complete a number altogether admirable. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

We have received the May number of Ballou's magazine. It gives the opening chapters of what promises to be an exceedingly interesting Serial Story by Theodore Arnold, entitled "After the Wedding," handsomely illustrated; together with a choice and varied selection of complete stories, sketches and poetry by the best authors, Puzzle Page, The Housekeeper, Humor, etc. Subscription $1.50 per year, postpaid. For sale by newsdealers, price fifteen cents. Published by G. W. Studley, 23 Hawley St., Boston, Mass.

I was troubled with Catarrh and Hay Fever for thirty years. Have suffered a great deal. My eyes, ears and throat were greatly affected. Mr. Kinney, the druggist, induced me to try Ely's Cream Balm, and for the past two years have had very little trouble. I have lived in Webster, Mass., and Rockville, Conn. Very resp'y, J. W. Pratt, Monson, Mass.

I have improved greatly since using Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. I feel like a new man. It is a blessing to humanity. John D. Farrell, Hartford, Conn.

That household pest, the moth miller, is quite numerous.

Remove boils, pimples, and skin eruptions, by taking Ayer's Sarsaparilla to purify the blood.

THE LADIES'

DONGOLA!

OFFICE OF ORDWAY & CLARK,

MANUFACTURERS OF

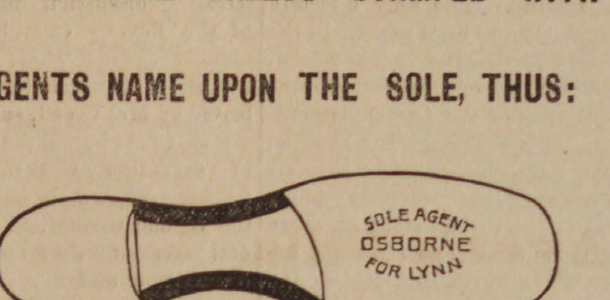
LADIES' FINE BOOTS AND SHOES.

HAVERHILL, MASS., February 25, 1886.

MR. WELLMAN OSBORNE, Lynn, Mass.

DEAR SIR: We have this day sent you a large invoice of our justly celebrated DONGOLA BOOTS. You will find they are all that has been claimed for them, and far ahead and entirely different from Kangaroo, Glove or Mat Kid. There is no other boot made for Ladies' wear which, for softness of finish, elegance of fit combined with such lasting durability, will give the entire satisfaction of this boot. They are something that has long been needed, as they wear better than French or American Kid, and will not stretch, turn purple, or look rusty. So popular and unprecedented has become the demand for these goods throughout the country, as the merits of the leather have become known, and so limited the importation of skins out of which the goods are manufactured, and so many imitations under similar names have been placed upon the market, that it has been found necessary to copyright the name.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED WITH OUR AGENTS NAME UPON THE SOLE, THUS:



Also the word "DONGOLA" upon the inside lining.

We shall give you the EXCLUSIVE SALE OF THESE BOOTS IN YOUR CITY, feeling confident with your large trade that they will find a ready market, judging from the large sales they have met with in other cities. Respectfully yours,

ORDWAY & CLARK.

The Board of Engineers will meet this evening, approve the pay rolls of the old companies and close up the business of the old fire year, which ends at 12 o' clock Friday night. They will also organize for the ensuing year, and approbate the firemen for that time.

The poles for the fire alarm have all been set, and the work of stringing the wires begun. Over 2 miles of the best copper wire were put up on Endicott, Andover and Warren streets last Thursday.

Richard L. Conklin, of the Hook & Ladder company, has removed to Merrimac, where he will engage in the carriage business.

The annual meeting of the Relief Association will be held Monday evening, May 10th.

The various companies in the fire department will organize either Thursday or Friday evening, for the ensuing year.

The committee of arrangements in charge of the ball and concert of the Three Ones and a Two, held a meeting Tuesday evening and settled up all unfinished business. The sum of $150.20 was cleared.

The light of a large fire was seen in the direction of Andover last night.

Masconomo Tribe of Red Men worked the Warrior's degree last Thursday evening. For the uninformed we would say this consists of giving the new candidates Indian ponies to ride around the hall, before scalping them.

A large audience was present at the Easter Monday party given at the rink last Monday, by the A. H. B. A. Skating and dancing interspersed with an exhibition by Prof. Lassalle. The Milo Brothes who were advertised did not appear much to the disappointment of the committee and audience. The party was a grand success.

Owing to its being Holy week the attendance at the benefit of Mike Boyle at the rink last Thursday evening was wasas large as desired, but a fair sized audience was present and the attraction was a game of polo between the old Peabody and Salem teams and resulted in a victory for the latter, four goals to one. The game was quite exciting and the friends of the boys were ready to urge them to do their best.

In the evening an Easter concert was given by the members of the Universalist Sabbath school, consisting of recitations and music—all appropriate to the day. There was an abundance of flowers and in the evening there was a special offering consisting of an elegant arrangement of roses and lilies, sent by Mrs. Chadwick, as a memorial of Miss Alice Chadwick, who was a member of this school. The music was under the direction of William P. Clark, Esq.

THERE ARE people who habitually read on the street and steam cars who would avoid doing so if they only could appreciate the extent of damage they are doing their eyes. An occulist says that the harm done to eyes by this habit is almost beyond belief that the relation between eyes and brain are mysteriously wonderful, and that a defective vision often accompanies a defective power of thought. People who lie in bed or upon a lounge and read either by daylight, or artificial light, are doing that which they ought not to, and they will, no doubt, some day, regret having done it. There is a terrible strain upon the eyes when one is reading lying down, and usually the strain is greater on one eye than the other—that farthest from the window that admits the light.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The second and last concert of the season by the Salem Oratorio Society was given Monday evening, consisting of J. C. D. Parker's Redemption Hymn, Mendelssohn's Hear My Prayer and Spohr's Last Judgment. The soloists were Mrs. E. Humphrey Allen, Miss M. Gertrude Edmands, Mr. J. H. Ricketson and H. L. Cornell. Carl Zerrahn was the conductor, as usual, and the chorus under his lead were responsive and fully equal to the demands made upon them. Many of the numbers were inspiring in the grandeur with which they were rendered and the audience, which was thoroughly musical, were attentive and sympathetic. Owing to the length of the performance and the necessity for closing in time for the train to Boston, little opportunity was given for applause, as Mr. Zerrahn took his baton in hand promptly at 7.30 and suffered no unnecessary delay till the close. Occasionally, notably on the entree of Mrs. Allen, the only soloist familiar to a Salem audience, the applause would break out, and none of the soloists had reason to feel ashamed of their reception. The concert was thoroughly enjoyable from beginning to end. Miss Edmands was a stranger to a Salem audience, but she made a very pleasing impression and easily led in the quartette of soloists. The only difficulty was that she had so little to do. In the Redemption Hymn, she was the soloist, and after that, her only appearance was in the quartette of the Last Judgment. What she did was done with clearness, intelligence and feeling. The richness and melody of her voice, combined with an evident careful study of every phrase she rendered, and especially the modesty of her demeanor before the audience, which is becoming too rare in concert singers, all were apparent to the audience. In the quartettes, her voice added a richness and harmony at once perceptible, and unusually conspicuous. We trust the society at some future time will allow us to hear more from her. Mrs. Allen is always an intelligent singer in oratorio work. Her expression is clearly defined and in the solo work of the Last Judgment there was little to condemn and much to praise. Her phrasing was careful, and she gave a delicious rendering of Mendelssohn's Hymn of Praise. The range of her voice is becoming limited, however, and the effort to reach and sustain ordinarily high notes was painfully apparent. Mr. Ricketson, the tenor, has a sweet voice, and he gave a smooth rendering of his solos, which was in marked contrast with the forced tones of Mr. Winch, who was the soloist at the last performance of the piece. But his voice is light for oratorio work, and this was especially manifest in the beautiful soprano and tenor duet in the second part. Mr. Cornell naturally suffered some from contrast with Mr. Babcock, who has done so much of the bass work of the society. But he gave a good rendering of his parts, was well received, and justly so. His intonation and phrasing were admirable, and it will be a pleasure to hear more from him. In both performances of Spohr's Last Judgment the society have suffered the disadvantage of engaging a soprano soloist who could not sing on the high notes. The numbers don't require florid execution, and we hope if the piece is given again, they will secure some younger, fresher voice—a singer, who, if not the possessor of an extensive reputation, will at least possess a voice capable of interpreting the solos without such labored effort. The work of the orchestra was careful, some of the best solo performers in Boston being noticeable in their ranks.

For a Boston Daily of the claimed lead which the Boston Globe asserts to have, the following bit of enterprise is the richest thing we have seen. After some half a column of description of the performance of Elijah at Music Hall Sunday evening, saying that it is unnecessary to mention in detail the excellent solos, it gives the public the following interesting bit of musical criticism: "Miss Kehew in solo or quartet, interpreted the composer's ideas with all the fidelity necessary; and although the presence of Mme. Fursch-Madi made comparison very easy, Miss Kehew was equal to all that her numbers required of her." Inasmuch as Fursch-Madi was not present at all, making no comparison necessary, and inasmuch as Miss Kehew took the parts assigned to Fursch-Madi, the reliability and beauty of the Globe's account is seen in all its grandeur. The performance of Elijah by such an organization as the Handel & Haydn Society, is worth something more than a notice that was written up beforehand, or by a critic who did not know Fursch-Madi from a local soloist.

The music of the choirs in this vicinity on Easter Sunday was unusually good. Particularly was this the case at Grace Church Salem, and the Unitarian church in Peabody.

That same harmony in the choir which existed at Grace Church during the life of Dr. Tuckerman seems to characterize the present choir. The music last Sunday gave direct evidence of this.

This evening the second and closing concert of the Salem Schubert club is to be given in Plummer Hall, when Mendelssohn's Athalie and other pieces will be rendered. W. S. Fenollossa will play a piano solo, and the leading soloists for "Athalie" will be Miss Gertrude Swain and Mrs. Jennie Noyes. Arthur Foote will conduct and it will be an interesting concert, as "Athalie" has never been given in Salem. No evening tickets are sold—the number being limited to the associate members.

It is now reported that the repetition of the Mikado entertainment, by members of the Schubert Club, will take place May 13 and 14.

Miss Marian Osgood, the violinist, well known in this vicinity, has recently recovered from a serious illness and will give a concert in Chelsea early next month.

Prof. Bill, teacher of music, took a class of scholars from Beverly to the New England Public School Music Teachers' Association to demonstrate "time in music." The Beverly Citizen thus speaks of the matter: They sang exercises in various keys from the board, beating the time and using the time language by which they study rythmical forms and conclusively demonstrated their ability to sing quite difficult music at sight with accuracy and precision. A very lively and interesting discussion followed the work of the Beverly class, in which a large number of the teachers participated, at the close of which the class was again tested by Mr. Veazil, supervisor of music at Chelsea, and the same readiness of execution was shown with the teacher selected to test them, as with the regular teacher. The class on several occasions drew applause from the Association and both by their deportment and intelligent execution of their work reflected credit upon the town, school and teachers.

It is a good while since we have hung Quakers on Boston Common, but the spirit is not wholly dead in this vicinity, though tamed a little. A well known Boston soprano has recently lost a church position because she sang Saturdays in the synagogue. She had her choice, the synagogue or us. She chose the synagogue, and in this city that claims to exercise religious tolerance, it if to be hoped that some church will step forward quickly to see that she does not lose by her courage.—Boston Home Journal.

The music at St. Augustine's church, South Boston, Easter Sunday, is spoken of as being of a very high order. There wrs a chorus of 75 voices, and the Globe Theatre Orchestra, with Thomas Henry, cornetist, all under the direction of J. J. Carew, formerly organist of St John's church in this town.

The members of the choir of St. John's church presented Charles A. Clark with an elegant Easter boquet last Sabbath. The presentation was made by Miss Ducey. Mr. Clark is a great favorite with the members of his choir.

How will the friends of Miss E. Buffington Kehew, in Salem, relish this from the Boston Advertiser, relative to her performance of the leading soprano role in "Elijah" last Sunday evening, with the Handel and Haydn society? "Gifted with a voice of remarkable brilliancy, roundness, power and evenness, Miss Kehew has yet a great deal to learn and to do before she can be a fully competent or acceptable oratorio singer. Her vocal method is blighted by an inexcusable portamento which is almost a drawl, and which utterly precludes the simple, clear cut enunciation which sacred music imperatively demands, while of declamatory delivery in general she seems to have no idea, as of the value of verbal precision she apparently makes but slight account. In "Hear ye, Israel," however, of which she has evidently made special study, she was surprisingly good, her phrasing being honest and direct, and the few phrases of recitative being squarely spoken, thus proving her ability to accomplish much when her own reflection and opposite training shall have purified her style and educated her in legitimately dramatic delivery."

THE YOUNG man who was raised a pet is becoming a nuisance. He is seldom of any good. What is wanted nowadays is a practical man who can do something else besides smoke cigarettes and twist a cane. The time to learn to work and to learn business habits is in one's youth. He who leads the life of a butterfly until he is twenty-five or thirty years of age and then recognizes the fact that he has made an ass out of himself has precious little to recommend him when he applies for a job. This may be a chestnut, but it fits not a few young men of every city in the Union. The boys at the Reform Farm are better off if they only knew it than thousands of the boys who are at large. There is nothing like being practical, and there is but one way to be so. Acquire business habits and train yourself to good, honest, hard work. Don't waste your time learning to tie a cravat. You can buy cravats already tied.

I learn that one of the insurance companies of the co-operative kind, which does quite a business in this town, has been making an extraordinary proposition to a large number who have during the last few years fallen from its ranks. That is, to take them at the same risk as when they were members in good standing, and continue them as regular members. This is hardly just to the rest of the members who have paid their assessments regularly and kept the company going. How does the company know that the person would pass an examination as well as he did a year or two before. It looks to me as if the company was afraid it was losing ground.

A Peabody youth not over twenty-two years of age, went to Boston a few weeks ago, and fell in love with two Court St. nymphs, and after a few hours he found himself in the street without a dollar in his pocket, although he had $25 when he left home. He borrowed money enough to get home with and hasn't wanted to talk much about it since.

The other day I met a man well known in the vicinity of Lowell street, who was mad, thoroughly mad; he would have signed a dozen petitions for a change of postmaster. The cause of all this trouble was, that he was positive he mailed a very important letter two days before to a Boston party and it had not been received. He was on his way to the post office to raise a row about it. I mildly suggested that perhaps he had made a mistake and didn't drop it. Mechanically he put his hand into the inside pocket of his coat and when it came out it brought with it the missing letter. He felt a little cheap, said he owed the postmaster an apology gave me a cigar as a bribe I suppose not to say anything about it, and then dropped into a barber shop to cool off.

A popular young man in one of our boarding houses has been paying for considerable many cigars this week. A few mornings ago there were boiled eggs for breakfast, and Charlie laughingly said he would keep one for luncheon and put it in his pocket. Alas for man's calculations! In an unguarded moment Charlie "barr'd down" too heavily on that hen fluid, and it was transformed to scrambled egg. A fellow boarder who was going out of town for a week gave it to Mulcahy.

THE

For Impaired or Diseased Vision is a pair of

B. LAURANCE'S

Axis Cut Pebbles.

The frauds that have been perpertrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlers by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all important subject of the preservation of the sight. There are only two articles from which spectacle lenses can be manufactured, viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name, it still remains glass. Pebble on the other hand is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crytal found generally in freestone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald and nearly as hard as the diamond. The pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone cut by the aid of diamond dust, and the greater amount of power is placed immediately over the center of the grain found in the pebble. It will give to the spectacle wearer a coolness, freshness and a pleasant feeling that the ordinary spectacle lenses cannot by any possibility impart. All spectacles and eyeglasses are stamped B. L. A. C. P. and can only be purchased from

Spring and Summer Opening.

Friday, May 7th,

We shall commence our

GREAT ANNUAL SALE

— OF —

SPRING & SUMMER CLOTHING,

Hats, Caps and Furnishing Goods.

We are now prepared to show the largest and most complete assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing for Men, Boys and Children's of any time since commencing business in Salem.

It is our attention this season to increase our sales very largely, consequently we shall offer our patrons greater inducements than ever before. Our enormous stock is the powerful agent that speeds on our business assisted by the following auxiliaries:

A keen foresight as to the wants of all classes.
A strict adherence to the one price system.
Always ready and willing to exchange goods or refund the money.
Strongly protesting against the common practice of trickery and deception.
Always making our prices consistent with the laws of economy.
Believing in doing a large cash business on a small profit basis.
Maintaining business principles that have made us the acknowledged leaders in Essex county.

We have added a new department this Spring for the sale of Hats and Caps, under the management of the well known Hatter, ASA HOOD. This department has already proved a great success, from the fact that it is conducted upon the same system as the clothing department. Patrons can now select their Hats with their clothing and save both time and money.

Our stock of Men's and Young Men's Dress and Business Suits comprises about 3000, over eighty different patterns to select from. Business Suits in plain sacks, straight front sacks, and four button cutaway frocks manufactured from checks, plaids, plain and fancy mixtures. For dress suits the 4-button cutaway and Prince Albert ara the correct styles for the spring and summer of 1886, and are manufactured from the different shades of whipcord worsted.

We have now in stock a fine assortment of Gent's Spring Overcoats comprising about 800, over 40 different patterns to select from.

The handsomest styles and the largest variety of Gent's Pantaloons we have ever shown.

Without doubt we have the largest and finest assortment of Boys and Children's Clothing ever shown under one roof in this country. We have now about 3000 suits representing all the different styles of cut and fabrics. For children from 4 to 14 years of age, the Norfolk, Creedmoor, Rough and Tumbleand Sailor Suits are the popular styles. 2500 Boys' Shirt Waists and Woolen Blouses.

In our Furnishing Goods It is impossible for us to enumerate all our departments, but to our old customers it is only necessary to say that our variety is larger than ever, and that low prices will rule.

Z. A. GALLUP, - - - - - MANAGER

Owing to improvements being made in the parsonage, the new Methodist minister will not take up his residence here for a week or two yet.

Capt. W. M. Ward and Lieut. H. C. Farrington of Company K. 8th Reg., attended the funeral of Col. Trull, in Charlestown, last Sunday.

Behold the Assessor at your door; he calmly knocks, has knocked before; open the door and let him in, show him your gold, your silverware and tin.

The programme as announced in last weeks' PRESS was carried out very successfully by the West Peabody Farmers' Club last Thursday evening.

Mr. J. Arthur Trask has the contract to build a brick addition to the pumping station. It will be used as a kitchen and be about fifteen feet square.

Steer clear of the fellow who wants to make you rich for a small sum of money. If he was not a fraud he would keep his secret and get rich himself.

A new piazza in the front and rear of Mr. David Loud's house on Franklin street has been built, and other internal and external improvements are being made.

It will be seen by our advertising columns that the homestead estate of the late Joseph Bushby on Central street, will be sold at auction, Thursday, May 13.

Mr. W. O. Hood, formerly of the firm of Sanger, Hood & Co., is on the road selling the Winter Measuring Machine for the Union Leather Measuring Machine Company.

Frederick G. Preston as constable, will sell the equity of redemption in Winslow's property on Juniper Point at his office in Allen's building, Wednesday June 2nd.

Massachusetts Total Abstinence Society has offered a prize of $5 for the best temperance essay written by public school pupils in each town or city. Now children try for it.

The shipments of leather from Peabody and Salem for the week ending May 1, were 5431 rolls, 605 sides, 273 bundles, 19 barrels of leather, 6 bundles and 1 barrel of skins.

Alfred E. Adams, son of Jones Adams, will in future reside in Albion, Maine, whither he has gone to wed Miss Ellie Moody, one of the fair daughters of that place.

S. S. Littlefield has recently had a new buggy built at Amesbury and drove up over the road with it last Monday. It is a credit to the manufacturer and to the taste of the owner.

We return thanks to Representative C. T. Batchelder for a copy of the Manual of the General Court, and the report on drainage. They will be found of advantage in the office.

Mr. William Knapp has returned to this town after a five years' sojourn at Amador City, Cal. He will remain in the east if he secures a situation. He speaks very lightly of the climate.

Alma Polish is the only dressing that will preserve the leather. Ladies who use it once will never use any other dressing on their shoes. Only 15 cents per bottle at Nugent's Shoe Store. *

Four bottles of liquor were found by the carpenters at the old hotel, while tearing away an old closet, which was nailed up some ten years ago. The liquor was just as good, so they say.

Mary A. Dunney, who was bitten by the dogs at the Upton farm, last November, was discharged from the Salem Hospital last week. Her wounds have healed and her strength is returning.

Dr. C. R. Eaton, who has been in practice in a New York hospital for the past five years, is thinking of locating in this town if he can find a suitable tenement. He is a homeopathic physician.

Mr. William Trask, of the firm of Samuel Trask & Son, is confined to the house, threatened with pneumonia. Mr. Samuel Trask is recovering slowly, being able to sit up a few hours a day.

We learn that Mr. James P. King went to Lynn to attend the camp fire last Monday night, but did not gain admission, much to the regret of the Peabody boys, who had depended on him for a speech.

The Boston & Maine has been forced to obtain its bituminous coal in New Brunswick, and unless the labor troubles in Pennsylvania are speedily settled contracts will soon be made for coal from England.

A man named Patrick Regan, who boarded with Mrs. McNeil in Linehan's court, is missing. He started to work as usual about two weeks ago and has not since been seen. He was about 50 years of age.

Mr. F. P. Goss of Salem, the well known plumber, is doing some fine work in brass piping at James P. King's, 187 Lowell street, for hot and cold water, and also putting in a bath tub, set bowls, etc.

Mr. George Stevens continues to serve his customers with the best line of fruit offered in this town, including oranges, bananas, figs, dates etc. Mr. Stevens has fresh baked small and large peanuts every Saturday.

Mr. W. H. Baldwin has been employed to-day in painting his barn. The color was red and the artist succeeded in covering himself as well as the barn with paint. If he only had red hair, he would pass for a Red Man.

Mr. and Mrs. Daniel J. Sweeney had hardly commenced to receive the congratulations of their friends on the birth of their daughter, when the little one was taken from them. It died on Friday morning. We extend our sympathy.

The delegates from the W. C. T. U. to the semi-annual meeting of the Mass. Union, held in Springfield yesterday and to-day, will give reports of the meeting, Friday afternoon, at 2.30 in Franklin Hall. All are cordially invited.

Nearly forty of the executive officers of the new Massachusetts Liquor Dealers' Association held a meeting last week, in Boston, and took measures toward calling a general meeting for all distillers, brewers, dealers, clerks, bartenders and teamsters in the liquor business in Massachusetts, on May 11. This is just what is needed to strengthen the temperance sentiment.

Spring Opening.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

SECOND FLOOR

We cordially invite the Ladies of Salem and vicinity to our Opening of the largest and most carefully selected stock of Millinery Goods ever shown in this city, including Trimmed Bonnets and Round Hats, both imported and of our own design and execution. In Fancy Lacęs and Silk Lisses, we have many elegant patterns, and in some of the most delicate tints, fairly rivalling the shadings of nature. In Flowers, which are to be so largely used the coming season, we have a most attractive display, as fresh as from the garden, only lacking fragrance. We have also in Untrimmed Hats and Bonnets, a very large assortment from the strongest School Hat to the finest foreign make. In fact everything which goes to make up a complete stock. Mrs. A. C. Washburn, our manager, was in New York at the Importers' Opening in Feb. securing many choice things at that time, and has kept close watch of the market up to the present time. Having through years of experience formed a large acquaintance with Importing as well as Jobbing Houses, which gives her great advantage in selecting Desirable Styles and making Lowest Prices. Miss Sadie Bushby will remain with us, as will also Miss Etta Brown and Miss Hattie Gliddin. We have also secured the services of Miss Carrie Palmer, who will join our corps of popular sales ladies. And now we feel sure almost every lady calling on us next week, or after, will meet an old acquaintance who will gladly show them every attention, and will take a personal interest in pleasing.

Cloaks, Suits and Shawls.

SPRING, 1886.

We take pleasure in announcing to the Ladies of Salem and Essex County, that we have now open and ready for inspection our full line of Ladies, Misses and Children's Outside Garments, Wraps, Shawls, etc., for Spring and Summer wear. We may venture to say without any egotism, that our selections in this department far surpass anything we have previously offered. The increasing demand for superior Ready Made Garments and Suits has led us to exercise unusual care in selecting none but the best, both in material and workmanship, and we guarantee all to be just as represented. We have every style and quality a lady can wish for. Long Garments for driving and travelling, Short Wraps and Jackets for street wear in every available shade and colors, both Foreign and American make. Suits, stylish and of superior quality. Shawls, India Chuddas, Boucle, Cashmere, and Fancy Embroidered Scarfs in all grades and shades. Children's Garments, simply beautiful in Boucle, English, German and American Goods. Our Infants' Department requires especial mention for its variety of Long and Short Robes, Cloaks, Slips and Blankets.

Jersey Waists, fancy colors beaded. Mikado fronts, Vest fronts, Plain fronts and braided, in every variety; and a great many more equally good things that we have not space to mention.

We cordially invite you to come and see for yourselves, assuring all courteous attention, and any information we can bestow.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER,

252 Essex Street, Salem.

Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds, Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skylights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bousley.

Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated with courtesy whether anything is esired or not.

Dreamers.

Many a beautiful sunbeam plays in the forest deep,
Many a beautiful starbeam strays in the children's sleep,
Many a dewdrop glistens unnoticed by mortal eyes,
And lips that we see not breathe us the fragrance of other skies.
Deep in the depths of the heart strays many a golden gleam,
Many a beautiful star ray enters the dreamer's dream;
Jewels that sparkle and glisten, breezes from balmy skies
Live in the soul, ideal, all hidden from mortal eyes.
All the delightful landscapes outstretched to the mental view—
Beautiful worlds receding beyond the horizon blue—
Glories that blend above it in streams that eternal flow,
Are to the dreamer's fancy as visions of long ago.
'Tis thus in the sweet ideal beauty and truth are found—
Unheard, unseen as the treasures deep in the silent ground;
The soul, in its flights of fancy, its hidden and pensive dreams
Lives more in the world that's real, and less in the world that seems.

In Search of the Tide.

Mr. Perkins laid down the newspaper and briskly stirred the fire, as he casually remarked:

"There was a great tide last night; the highest water known here for years. I suppose the full moon and the strong east wind we have had for the last week account for it."

"How high was it, father?" asked Charlie, as he buttered the fifth piece of toast.

Charlie was fourteen, and the other Perkins children looked up to him as the head of the family.

"Sixteen feet," answered Mr. Perkins.

Harry, who was not quite seven, and who was always trying to find out things for himself, looked thoughtfully out of the window. The cottage stood a stone's throw from the water, and Harry could look through the open channel between the islands out to the wide sea that was tossing restlessly in the distance.

"Father," he asked, "where does the tide come from?"

Mr. Perkins sipped his tea before he carelessly replied:

"Oh, from a long way out at sea."

"But where does it start from?" still persisted Harry.

"I don't think it starts from any particular place," said Mr. Perkins. "I should say the surface waters run in from all over the sea."

"But it must start somewhere," said Harry.

Mr. Perkins had not studied up the subject of tides, and feeling that his answers had been rather vague, did not try to say anything more.

When supper was over, the family went out on the piazza which stretched across the front of the house. Mr. Perkins lighted a cigar, Mrs. Perkins brought out some pretty worsted thing she was knitting. Charlie walked down to the beach and began skipping stones across the water, and Harry sat down on a large rock and watched the tide running up and down on the beach. The sun had gone down, and left a few rosy clouds trailing after him, the mountains were growing dim in the distance, and among the islands of the bay the water lay quiet and dark. It ran up the beach as if it meant to travel far inland, and then something stopped it and drew it back with a long wash that sounded as if all the wet stones over which it ran were slipping back with it.

Harry had often watched this advance and retreat of the tide, but it had never seemed so curious to him as now. "What sends it up the beach, and why does it go back instead of going on?" were questions he was trying to answer. The long, low wash of water along the line of shore as far as Harry could see grew more and more mysterious to him as it became darker, and the sights began to change into sounds. The great sea beyond the island seemed to be sending its waves in, and then suddenly stopping them, and the murmur of the waters seemed to be the many voices of the sea calling its waves back again.

At last Mr. Perkins took out his watch and looked at it by the light of his cigar.

"Why," he exclaimed, "it's later than I thought; it's after nine."

Mrs. Perkins called to Harry, who very unwillingly left the shore and went to his room. When he had undressed and blown out the candle he opened the blinds and looked out. The moon had just risen and was sending a silvery light over the sea, and the trees on the islands stood out dark and motionless. Up to the window, in the stillness of the night, came the murmur and splash of the rippling tide, almost at its flood.

"Where does it start from?" said Harry to himself as he fell asleep.

It might have been two hours—it was probably more—when Harry suddenly awoke. The moon was shining into the room, and the cool plash of the sea on the beach came in at the window.

"Where does it come from?" said Harry to himself again.

Then, quick as a flash, the thought came to him to go and see. Why not? The sea was only a little way off, the night was almost as light as day, and at the little dock below the cottage Charlie's boat "Sallie" was tied. He slipped out [illegible] and ran to the window; the tide was falling, and this would be the best time to go out and find where it came from.

In five minutes Harry was dressed, and taking his shoes in his hands, he crept softly down stairs, opened the door into the piazza, and shut it again so quietly that no one heard a sound. Once on the ground, he sat down and put on his shoes, then ran swiftly down to the dock where the "Sallie" was dancing on the water, slipped the rope off the iron rod, and jumped into the boat.

Harry had spent no end of time in the boat, and knew more about sailing than many older boys. The tide was falling fast, and the water along the shore was rough. The "Sallie" danced up and down, and before Harry could get an oar he was thrown over a seat into the bottom of the boat, which drifted rapidly out into the bay. It was a still night and a light mist had spread over the sky, making the stars dim and faint. The islands looked strange and vague to Harry, and the sea was white and weird. Things did not look at all as they did by daylight; everything was queer and ghostly. Not a sound came from the cottages scattered along the shore as the boat drifted away from them; not a light was burning in a window anywhere; the whole world had gone to sleep except the sea, and a strange dream had come over that.

When the tide falls as far as it did in this bay it makes a good deal of commotion, and there are swift currents between the islands. In one of them the "Sallie" was caught, and swiftly carried seaward. Soon cottages and islands lay behind, growing dimmer and dimmer every minute, and the sea was close at hand. The water along the beach was white and foaming, and around the rocky head at the entrance of the bay the sea rushed and roared mightily.

Harry was not at all frightened; he loved the water, and had not so much as thought that he might have trouble in getting home again. The tide was running swiftly out, and if he followed it he would surely find where it came from. On and on, out into the strange, lonely sea, the little boat drifted; once in a while the moon would look out for a moment between the clouds, but most of the time she was hidden by them. Sometimes the foam on the crests of the waves would flash in sudden points or lines of fire; sometimes a quick gleam would show itself at a distance, and Harry would wonder if it were not the fin of some great fish cutting the surface of the sea.

He had left the silver watch which his father had given him on his last birthday, hanging on the head of his bed, and so he could not tell what time it was; but he noticed after a while that the stars began to grow pale, and the heavens a little less dark. A fresh breeze had sprung up, and went singing over the sea; fortunately it was a light wind, and did no harm beyond making Harry a little chilly. The boat drifted wherever the waters carried it, and they carried it straight out to sea. When the sun rose, and the morning mists had rolled themselves out of sight, Harry saw far behind him the island from which he had sailed, its mountains standing out green and solemn against the sky; far ahead were the barren rocks from which at night a lighthouse sent its solitary beam over the sea.

Breakfast time came, but no breakfast, and no sign of any. The sun marched steadily up the steep circle of the sky, and found it such a hard climb that he not only got very warm himself, but put everybody else into a profuse perspiration. On Harry he fairly poured his heat until the poor little fellow's head buzzed and ached, and he began to wish himself safe at home, tide or no tide.

Dinner time came, but no dinner; and finally, after a long hot afternoon, tea time, but no tea. The boat had floated further and further, but Harry had not found where the tide started from; the further he went the wider the sea spread out, and there was no sign of a beginning or an end anywhere. Harry began to think he had passed the place where the tide started; certainly, if it got out as far as this, it would lose itself and never get anywhere.

The sun, tired with his long day's work, went down hot and red; by and by, one by one, the stars began to steal out from the places where they had hidden away from him. Harry, tired, hungry and a little frightened, had fallen asleep in the bottom of the boat, and was dreaming of sitting down to a nice dinner, when the moon came up and found him lying there, far out to sea, when he ought to have been in his bed at home.

CHAPTER II.

Capt. Peleg Waters was coming home with a goodly load of fresh mackerel; wind and tide being favorable, he expected to make Rockland sometime the next afternoon. Capt. Peleg was rather a rough looking old fellow, but he had the kindest heart in the world. At the time he sailed into this story he was taking his turn at the tiller, and was enjoying about equally the beautiful moonlit night and the short pipe from which he blew occasional puffs of tobacco smoke.

"This is the purtiest night we've hed this trip," he said to himself, as he looked up at the full moon sailing serenely through the clouds, and at the silvery sea whispering to itself as if in a dream.

Just then something ahead caught the captain's eye.

"Wa'al, I declare," he exclaimed aloud, "if there ain't a boat! What's she doing twenty miles out to sea?"

In ten minutes Capt. Peleg had brought the schooner alongside the little boat, and was looking down at the small boy still fast asleep.

"Wa'al, I vow," said the captain, "if that ain't the littlest crew and the sleepiest that I ever see afloat."

Capt. Peleg whistled to himself, as he always did when puzzled; then he leaned over, and called out softly,—

"Ahoy, there!"

Harry opened his eyes wide, and jumped up in a second. He was a bright, honest boy, and the captain knew it the minute he laid eyes on him.

"Where you from?" he asked, as gently as he could, for a voice that gets used to bawling in the teeth of all sorts of winds, isn't very soft.

"Bar Harbor," answered Harry, promptly.

Capt. Peleg's eyes twinkled. This was the queerest craft he had ever fallen in with on the sea.

"Where you bound?" he continued.

"I want to find where the tide comes from, sir," was the quick reply.

Capt. Peleg whistled long and loud.

"What you got in yer locker?" he said, looking quizzically at the boy.

"Nothing," said Harry, dolefully, for he knew this was the weak point of the voyage.

"How long you been out?"

Harry hesitated a moment, for he was rather confused by the absence of dinners, teas and clocks; finally he said he had been out a day and night.

"Anything to eat?" asked Capt. Peleg.

"Nothing," answered Harry, mournfully, for he was becoming very weak, and there was a strange feeling in his stomach.

The captain whistled again.

"Hi, there, Jim!" he called out, in a very loud voice.

In a minute Jim came stumbling up from the little cabin, looking very frouzy and sleepy.

"Just you take this tiller," said Capt. Peleg. Jim took the tiller. "Now," said the captain to Harry, "throw me that rope."

Harry threw the rope, and the captain made the little boat fast to the big one. Then he held out his hand, and with one vigorous pull the boy was on the schooner and the little boat was floating behind.

Meanwhile the captain disappeared. When he came back he handed Harry some big slices of well-buttered bread.

"Just stow that away in your hold," he said to Harry.

The boy needed no second invitation, and the bread speedily disappeared.

"Now, you turn in, and in the morning we'll take our bearings," said Capt. Peleg, as the last piece of bread went out of sight.

Harry was thereupon slipped into the captain's bunk and within a few minutes he was fast asleep. When he awoke it was after ten the next morning. He found Capt. Peleg on deck, with his short pipe in his mouth.

There was a fresh breeze blowing, and the schooner was dashing along, sending little showers of spray right and left from her prow.

"Mornin'. Hope you slept well?" said Capt. Peleg, when he spied Harry.

Harry thought he had never slept better.

"Well, I've followed the sea going on forty-five years, and my advice is, give up this ere voyage of yours and put fer home," said the captain. His eyes twinkled, but his face was perfectly sober. "I'll take you into Rockland, then you can telegraph to your friends."

Harry thought this was the wisest plan, and was quite willing to give up the matter of the tides if he could only get home.

About three o'clock in the afternoon the schooner came up to the dock, and Capt. Peleg went straight to the telegraph office, and sent this dispatch:—

ROCKLAND, Aug. 3d, 1884.

GEORGE PERKINS, Bar Harbor, Mt. Desert, Me.

Boy Harry and small boat "Sallie" picked up at sea. Send directions.

PELEG WATERS.

This little sheet of paper which bore this good news filled the Perkins family with joy. They had found the little boat gone, had guessed what had happened, and had telegraphed in every direction without getting any news of the lost boy. Mr. Perkins ran down to the office and sent this message in reply:—

BAR HARBOR, Aug. 3d, 1884.

PELEG WATERS, Rockland, Me.

Heartfelt thanks. Send boy and boat by steamer to-morrow.

GEORGE PERKINS.

The next day the steamer came along the dock at Bar Harbor, and Harry ran off the gang plank among the first, and was kissed and hugged and cried over to his heart's content.

Charles got into the "Sallie" and rowed home, but Harry had had enough of boats for the present, and preferred to walk.

About a week later Capt. Waters was surprised by the arrival of a small and very nicely tied package. He opened it cautiously and discovered a very substantial watch, with the graceful regards of Mr. George Perkins and family.

Harry has not yet found out where the tide starts from.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The last concert of the Salem Schubert Club was given Wednesday evening of last week in Plummer Hall, at which time Mendelssohn's Athalie was given, preceded by part songs by the club, and songs by the soloists, Miss S. E. Bingham, Miss Gertrude Swayne, and Mrs. J. M. Noyes. Mr. W. S. Fenollosa contributed two selections for the piano which were well received. The work of the Club under Mr. Foote's direction has steadily improved, being especially conspicuous in such a pretentious work as "Athalie". The membership of the club is not the same this year as previously, and some good voices are missed in the chorus, but on the whole the singing was fully up to the previous performances of the club, and reflects much credit on the conductor.

The work of the soloists gave good satisfaction. Miss Swayne is no stranger to the club or its audiences, and her voice, which though light is sweet and true, was at its best in the "Echo" by Eckert. Miss Bingham has a much more prowerful voice, and in her song and in the solo work of "Athalie" with which she was familiar, gave evidence of careful study. Mrs. Noyes' singing was marred by a tremulo, although in the concerted work she made a good impression as did the other soloists. The club will give two performances of Mikado selections shortly, as seen by advertisement in another column.

Arrangements are being made by Prof. C. R. Bill, the School Committee, and the masters of the schools, for a musical exhibition by the children of the public schools June 17th. It will be given in the Town Hall, and pupils of the Center, Wallis and Bowditch schools will take part. The music to be rendered will be of such a character as to show the proficiency of the scholars, and pieces will be given them on the evening of the concert to sing at sight. This will be music that they have never seen, and they will sing it without accompaniment, and without any "giving out" of the tune. We are glad such an exhibition is to be given. The public at large have little idea of the work being done by Prof. Bill in the schools. It will also serve as a patriotic and appropriate manner of celebrating June 17th.

Mr. Andrew Fitz, tenor of the First Unitarian church, in Salem, sang in the choir of the Unitarian church in this town last Sabbath afternoon, instead of Mr. Macgregor.

Mr. E. V. Emilio has accepted the position of organist at St. Peter's church in Salem, beginning his duties very soon. Miss Carrie Martin is supplying for Mr. Emilio, and Miss Abbie W. Streeter at the New Jerusalem church.

Miss. Sopha C. Hall will have a complimentary concert at Chickering Hall, Boston, next Tuesday evening, May 11. Miss Hall has many friends in Salem and vicinity and we trust they will show their appreciation by attending the concert. She is to have the assistance of Miss Clara Hunt, soprano, Mrs. Alma Faunce Smith, pianist, F. Clayton Record, violinist, the Beacon Quartette and the Oxford Male Quartette. With such talent the concert cannot fail to be enjoyable.

Miss Abby Noyes' annual concert takes place this evening in Boston Music Hall. Miss E. B. Kehew, Miss Mary H. How, Chas. R. Adams, J. H. Ricketson, the Oxford Male Quartette, and other talent will take part.

It was a happy thought of Manager Rich to secure, through arrangement with Mr. Stetson, the original Mikado company that so long and so prosperously maintained the joint reign of Gilbert and Sullivan at the Fifth Avenue Theatre in New York. The engagement is limited to four evening performances, with special matinees on Wednesday and Thursday, and on these occasions the Hollis street is likely to be thronged. Geraldine Ulmar will be the Yum-Yum, Kate Foster the Pitti-Sing, Elsie Cameron the Katisha and Geraldine St. Maur the Peep-Bo. Everybody who has seen the other Mikado productions is sure to take a lively interest in this especially attractive representation.

There is a deal of truth in the following from the Boston Herald relative to the Handel & Haydn society in Boston. It would be strange, and not so very strange, either, if the present illiberal management continues, to find that the Worcester Musical Convention is to be universally acknowledged the leader in all musical matters in this State. Among musical people, we are inclined to think that this is the case at the present time. Mr. A. C. Munroe, the popular and efficient secretary of the latter organization, has done much to bring about the result.

From a strictly financial standpoint "the season thus ended has been a successful one, but this result has been gained by a course of proceeding that can but be deplored by all who realize what can and should be done by this organization in the interest of the advancement of a love of oratorio music. In former years the Handel and Haydn Society of Boston has been known and recognized, abroad as well as at home, as the most powerful organization in America in its own chosen field of musical undertaking. The possession of a library of great practical value, as well as a permanent fund of some $25,000, gives it a standing and character which is only approached by the old Worcester County Musical convention, and a comparison of the present relative value to the public of these two musical societies would not be flattering to local pride. The officers of the Handel and Haydn Society during the year just ended have signed the death warrant of the triennial festival scheme by abandoning any attempt to carry out that falling due this spring. They have neglected to make a single attempt to cultivate a wider appreciation of oratorio music by affording the general public an opportunity of hearing repetitions of their performances at popular prices, and have, in fact, conducted the society's affairs exactly as if they were directing a private enterprise with a view to securing the largest possible returns from the smallest possible patronage. Their course of action is not in harmony with the object for which the society was organized; it has not given a just and equitable return to the public for the financial consideration shown the corporation under its charter, and the results can but be deplored by all who know how much might have been accomplished by a more intelligent and liberal carrying out of the duties assumed by the president and board of directors when they accepted the positions to which they were elected for the current year."

R. L. Reinwald, leader of the Salem brass band, has dedicated a march to Capt. W. M. Ward. PRESS please copy.—Peabody Cor. Telegram.

With pleasure. Mr. Reinwald has also dedicated a march to Agawam Tribe of Red Men in Danvers. We may as well have it all, while we are about it.

At the funeral of Col. Trull, in Boston, last Sunday, the Salem Cadet Band were assigned the most important position in the line of the procession, and their music was very favorably commented on.

The Salem Brass Band and Salem Cadet Band were in the grand procession at the Lynn Camp Fire, Monday evening.

Next Saturday afternoon the Salem Cadet Orchestra will give the last of a series of three concerts in the new Academy Hall, at 3.30 P. M. The attendance at the second Concert was largely in excess of the first one, and the prospect is favorable for a full house at the closing one. The admission fee is only twenty-five cents, and the music is very fine. Such concerts as these should have every encouragement.

Miss Marguerite Hall, Mme. Hope Kirk and other musical artists sail for Liverpool to-morrow on the steamer Gallia, of the Cunard Line, from Boston.

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M]

Kiralfy spectacle rules for another week the spacious stage of the Boston Theatre. The Black Crook has proved a great drawing card, with the Mikado ballet, the performances of the Migani family, Duncan's ventriloquism and other taking specialties, and the sale of seats indicates a continuance of public favor for this famous production.

For a farewell week Augustin Daly's company appear at the Boston Musuem prior to their departure for England. Nancy and Company, the latest of Mr. Daly's adaptations from the German, is to be performed Wednesday and Thursday evening and at the matinees on Wednesday and Saturday. Ada Rehan has a charming role. By particular request, A Night Off is to be revived Friday evening—its only performance. The engagement will close with The Country Girl, introducing Miss Rehan as Peggy. A Woman's Wait and another little comedy, new to Boston, A Wet Blanket, are to be offered on this occasion.

There are to be four important dramatic representations at the Boston Theatre. Tommaso Salvini and Edwin Booth appearing in conjunction. The greatest of Othellos will have the support of the greatest Iago, and in turn the world famous Hamlet will have the support of an actor who, as the Ghost, will throw a new light on the character of that perturbed spirit. No such opportunity will probably ever be afforded again upon any stage. The management in order to add more brilliancy to these performances, have specially engaged Mrs. D. P. Bowers to play Emilia in Othello and the Queen in Hamlet. They have also engaged Miss Marie Wainwright, Mr. C. W. Couldock, Mr. Barton Hill, Mr. Alexander Salvini, Mr. J. A. Lane, Mr. Geo. W. Wilson and other artists of merit. Othello will be given Monday and Wednesday evenings and Saturday afternoon May 10, 12 and 15, with Salvini as Othello, Edwin Booth as Iago. Hamlet is to have one performance—on Friday, the 14th—with Booth in the title role, Salvin as the Ghost, Mrs. D. P. Bowers as the Queen. The sale of season tickets (only) will begin Wednesday, May 5, at 9 a. m. at $12 for the four performances. The sale of seats for single performances will begin on Thursday, May 6, at 9 a.m.

Those who remember the production of Gilbert's charming comedy of Engaged, at the Park several seasons ago, need not be reminded of its neat crisp dialogue, its amusing complications and its laughable business. In the latter is included the great tart eating scene by Agnes Booth, one of the funniest bits of special comedy acting ever seen on the stage. This noted artiste will repeat the performance during the nights Engaged is played at the Park the coming week.

Nothing more uproariously funny has been seen in Boston than Vim. It is greeted with peals of laughter by the audiences at the Bijou, and everybody who sees the piece not only makes up his mind to go again, but tells his neighbor about the mirthful impersonation of Mrs. Puffy by Neil Burgess, the side-splitting circus scene, the revolving stage and other special features of the performance. Mr. Burgess, with Mr. Joseph Palmer and his assoctates, are to be congratulated on the favor accorded Vim, and the brilliant prospects for a long and most successful season of the piece.

Besides having Augustin's Daly's celebrated New York company at the Museum next week, Mr. Field has one section of his company with Mr. Mansfield at the Madison Square Theatre, New York, and another in The Magistrate on the New England circuit. This has been a very busy and most successful season for the Museum management.

The friends of Mrs. Thomas Barry are making preparations for a complimentary benefit to that lady, to take place during her engagemunt of one week at the Boston Museum. Saturday evening May 15, will probably be assigned for this most interesting event.

For the benefit of J. C. McGarrey, the efficient advertising agent of the Park, May 31, a fine entertainment will be offered. Kate Forsyth, Frederic de Belleville, Frazer Coulter, D. J. Maguinnis and other favorites are to appear. It is not unlikely that Stella will be the attraction.

Manager William Redmond has secured the services of the well known comedian, D. J. Maguinness, to support Mrs. Thomas Barry and himself in the new play Adolphe Challett.

Leading medical authorities indorse Ayer's Sarsaparilla as the best blood purifying medicine in existence.

100 Doses

One Dollar. Hood's Sarsaparilla is the only medicine of which this can be truly said; and it is an unanswerable argument as to the strength and positive economy of this great medicine. Hood's Sarsaparilla is made of roots, herbs, barks, etc., long and favorably known for their power in purifying the blood; and in combination, proportion, and process, Hood's Sarsaparilla is peculiar to itself.

"For economy and comfort we use Hood's Sarsaparilla." MRS. C. BREWSTER, Buffalo.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla takes less time and quantity to show its effect than any other preparation I ever heard of. I would not be without it in the house." MRS. C. A. M. HUBBARD, North Chili, N. Y. 100 Doses

One Dollar

Hood's Sarsaparilla cures scrofula, salt rheum, all humors, boils, pimples, general debility, dyspepsia, biliousness, sick headache, catarrh, rheumatism, kidney and liver complaints, and all affections caused by impure blood or low condition of the system. Try it.

"I was severely afflicted with scrofula, and for over a year had two running sores on my neck. I took five bottles of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and consider myself entirely cured." C. E. LOVEJOY, Lowell, Mass.

"Hood's Sarsaparilla did me an immense amount of good. My whole system has been built up and strengthened, my digestion improved, and my head relieved of the bad feeling. I consider it the best medicine I have ever used, and should not know how to do without it." MARY L. PEBLE, Salem, Mass.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

A CIRCULAR was recently issued by the Secretary of the Law and Order League, giving the provisions of the law regarding sixth class licenses substantially as was stated in these columns a few weeks since. The circular grew out of an investigation by the League among the druggists in Boston, and revealed a state of things very similar to that existing in this town. It was found that nearly all of the druggists had been selling liquor under their license without keeping certificates signed by the purchaser, as the law directs. They had kept the record book of their sales, as the druggists here had done, and Mr. Dudley says that there is no evidence to show that in omitting the certificates the druggists were guilty of intentionally violating the law. The contrary appeared to be the case.

The League, however, announced its intention of giving more attention to the sixth class licenses, and this has violently angered the Boston Globe which gives vent to its feelings after this style:

"Our apothecaries may feel the consolation of knowing that while these modern disciples of Titus Oates stand ready to bear false witness for hire, the average Massachusetts judge and jury will give them no countenance. One of the most respected members of the judiciary some months ago openly pronounced it useless to expect to obtain convictions on the testimony of those mercenaries of the Law and Order League. The proposition is as true now as it was on the day when made.

The people of Massachusetts are abundantly able and willing to provide all officers necessary for the enforcement of the law. Convicted perjurers will not be called upon to assist, nor need our merchants fear their words."

This matter, if stated correctly by the League, and we believe it is, don't call for any "spotter" evidence or investigation by agents. Either the druggists have kept the proper certificates or they have not. In this town they have not, and admit it. We understand that in Boston also they admit it. It therefore does not require the aid of the League to establish the fact of the violation of their license.

Neither in Boston or here, however, does the League purpose making prosecutions for past violations, whether intentional or, as the League believes, from ignorance of the provisions of the law. It simply says in the future we want the provisions of the license of the sixth class carried out.

These provisions are very simple. The druggist can sell liquor for medicinal, mechanical or chemical purposes, to such persons only as certify in writing for what use they want it. They must also keep the record of sales, in a book provided for the purpose, and this book, with the certificates, must be open to the inspection of the authorities. That is all there is to it. If they sell liquor according to this law, there need be no concealment, no necessity for spying—but all may be open as the day. So long as the druggist does not sell to an intoxicated person, one known to be a drunkard, or a minor, he will fear no League or its agents.

But in order to thus sell liquor, he must be fortified with a sixth class license. Without it he can sell nothing, either for medical, mechanical or chemical purposes. We do not see that he can fill a physician's prescription containing liquor—having no sixth class license. The law is clear, and its provisions are plain. The Law and Order League purpose that these simple provisions shall be lived up to, and in this, both here and elsewhere, they will have the support of the law abiding community.

THE PEABODY POST OFFICE

LEVI PRESTON AN APPLICANT.

Democratic Town Committee Snubbed.

PUBLIC OPINION.

The announcement in the PRESS last week that Mr. Levi Preston, our present tax collector, had made a move for the position of postmaster of this town, caused considerable comment on the streets the next day, as it had been generally supposed that no move would be made in that direction until the expiration of Mr. W. M. Ward's term which has till December, 1888, to run. As there had been no petition circulated in the interest of Mr. Preston, we have taken the trouble for the benefit of our readers to see where the powerful array of "influence" is coming from which is to place Mr. Preston in the only local office in the gift of his party in this town.

Inquiry brings out the facts that his endorsement has not come from the local leaders, and that the Democratic town committee has not been consulted in the matter at all. In fact it was learned that at an informal meeting of that body the name of Mr. Thomas M. Jackman for the position was talked of, and it is learned that Mr. Jackman, acting on the suggestion of several members of the committee, had seen a number of prominent men in the county who would be likely to have influence with the administration, including Congressman Lovering, Richard S. Spofford and others. It was generally conceded that no move should be made to oust Mr. Ward, but in the event of a change Mr. Jackman was to be ready for immediate action.

Mr. Preston, on the other hand, discovered that the administration does not recognize any local sentiment in making such appointments and that the wishes of the State Central Committee and intimate members of his cabinet are the ones to whom the President listens, whether they run contrary to the desires of the people most interested in securing good public service or not. And it is not a surprising fact that his application is endorsed by such men as Secretary Endicott, Leverett and Henry Saltonstall, Wm. H. Brown, member of the State Central Committee R. H. Brown and Thomas E. Proctor.

It is well known that the only claim Mr. Preston has to the office is that to the "victors belong the spoils." Peabody does not want a postmaster whose sole claim to the office is political. The position is an important business trust which demands and should receive the undivided attention of the incumbent. We do not say that Mr. Preston would not make a good postmaster. On the contrary he has successfully filled administrative positions before, but on the other hand it would be well to look around a little and see, if a change is to be made, if there is not some deserving soldier with a war record like Mr. Ward's that might need just such a position. In further consideration of this subject a PRESS reporter has been enabled to secure the opinion of several prominent men and they may be said to voice the sentiments of the community.

Eugene T. McCarthy, Esq., Secretary of the Democratic town committee, when called upon, said he had heard that Mr. Preston had sent on his papers for the office and he presumed he would receive the appointment. He believed the office should be given to a democrat. When asked if Mr. Preston had the endorsement of the Democratic town committee, he said he had not, nor had they been asked to endorse him. He understood that he was endorsed by the "silver tops" and probably Mr. Preston thought, as in the case of Dedham, they had more influence with the administration than the "horny handed voter," who makes up the rank and file of the party. To the question, as to whether another candidate with the endorsement of the town committee would stand any show if a fight was made, he said he thought it would be a useless attempt, as Endicott and Saltonstall were backing Mr. Preston. He thought Mr. Preston had made a mistake in ignoring the town committee and thought he could have secured their endorsement.

Mr. Thomas H. Jackman had been knowing to the movement for some time, but thought the principal move had been made during the past two weeks, or after Mr. Preston had found that the custom house was not available. He said he should have advised consulting the town committee. In reply to the question, "were you a candidate for the office?" he said several of my friends had urged me to make a move for it, but I positively refused while Mr. Ward's term had not expired, but was willing to allow the use of my name if he was to be removed or his time was out. I know Mr. Ward to be a disabled soldier and entitled to serve out his term. I think there will be no doubt about Mr. Preston's appointment, as he has a very strong endorsement by men who are near to the President."

Mr. William Flanagan, representing a large body of laboring men, said he was a democrat but did not believe in removing Mr. Ward, who had a brilliant war record, and has made a good postmaster. He knew of no claims Mr. Preston had for the office and he should regret to see Mr. Ward removed.

Mr. Thomas J. Relihan, a member of the Board of Selectmen, had not heard of Mr. Preston's petition until he saw it in the PRESS. He was confident that Mr. Preston would not send on a petition without, at least, an endorsement of the chairman and secretary of the town committee. It is probable that if he had been elected assessor he would not have made a move for the post office. In reply to the question whether Mr. Preston could have a Custom House job or not, he said that while he was not authorized to speak for Mr. Preston, he had understood that he did not care to pass a civil service examination. He believed that it was proper to have a change in the post office and was sure that with the very strong endorsement of Mr. Saltonstall and Mr. W. H. Brown of the State Central Committee, Mr. Preston would secure the appointment.

Frank E. Farnham, Esq., said a change was naturally to be expected during this administration. Mr. Preston would undoubtedly make a good postmaster. He had expected, however, that Mr. Thomas H. Jackman would be the first democratic postmaster of Peabody.

Mr. S. S. Littlefield, a leader in the democratic party, said he saw no need of a change. Mr. Ward was serving the public in a very acceptable manner, and he did not think it was the desire of the democrats, generally, to have a change made. He was of the opinion that if there was to be a change it should go to some democratic veteran with a record that would compare favorably with Mr. Ward's.

Mr. Thomas F. Lyons, chairman of the Democratic town committee, said that as a representative of that body he knew nothing of any petition for Mr. Preston. The committee had had no meetings since last fall, but individual members had signed a petition for the present incumbent of the West Peabody post office. He knew of no claim Mr. Preston had to the office, he had always fared well at the hands of his party, and he did not believe in removing a soldier like Mr. Ward to make room for any democrat. He did not believe that the President would remove Mr. Ward as long as his work was as faithfully performed as at present. He believed Mr. Ward's war record was sufficient to entitle him to the office and he stood ready to sign a petition to keep him there. In reply to the question whether there was anything in the report that he was a candidate for the office, he said: "I was asked by a member of the State Central Committee to run for the office and I declined, giving him the same reasons I give you."

Postmaster W. M. Ward said he knew but little about the move on the part of Mr. Preston to secure the office. He did not feel like asking his friends to make a move for him because his term was not out and he knew of no grounds for his removal. He thought that the President, if he lived up to what he said, would not remove him for political reasons. There was no doubt that Mr. Preston had a strong endorsement from people outside the town, but he saw no reason why residents of other places, who had never visited the office, should be asked to name a postmaster for Peabody. He was willing to stand on the endorsement of his fellow citizens who knew him, and came in daily contact with his management of the office. He thought that it was doubtful if the senate confirmed the nomination of Mr. Preston even if the appointment was made by the President.

Mr. Daniel Woodbury, President of the L. & O. League, said that he had been through the experience of a postmaster. He thought there was no need of a change, but was indifferent as to the result. He thought it was not the intention of the President to make changes without cause and he knew no reason for his removal.

Mr. Franklin Osborne said he knew of no reason why the copper-heads should not have the offices. They have won and of course want them. It don't seem right to give them to those who represent the party who fought Mr. Ward but that is the way it is going. Between Mr. Preston and Mr. Ward there is not much choice, there are more competent men than either of them. The President has nominated Plaisted but he has not yet been confirmed, but is kept in office. Don't think it will make any difference in this case, if Preston wants the office he will probably get it.

Mr. W. F. Wiley had nothing particular to say about the post office; he didn't believe in a democrat for that office or any other; he didn't think Ward the best postmaster in the world, but preferable to any democrat; he thought there was not much choice between Jeff Davis and President Cleveland. Ward's war record should be considered, and his sympathy was with Ward.

We might go on and give the opinion of a large number of other prominent people had we the space, but the above will give a fair idea of the general public sentiment, and tend to show that if Mr. Ward is removed, it will only be for political reasons.

Wednesday Evening, May, 5, 1886,

HOME HAPPENINGS.

We regret to announce the decease, this morning, of John A. Messer, the well known agent and manager for the Salem Cadet Band. Mr. Messer was a son of Albert A. Messer of this town, and a member of the Peabody High School, and although a resident of Salem for many years, has been more or less identified with this town and its interests. He was a soldier from Peabody, being one of the first to offer his services, and his war record is honorable and praiseworthy. He enlisted in Co. D. 1st Heavy Artillery, July 5th, 1861. He was mustered out Jan. 4, 1864, and re-enlisted in the same regiment, where he served till the close of the war. During a portion of this time he was clerk at headquarters for the brigade to which he belonged. After the war he became Lieut. of Co. K., 5th Regiment of the militia of Massachusetts. Mr. Messer was a currier by trade, working with his father a portion of the time, and he was, also, with his brother, in business in Sutton's block, in gents' furnishing goods, the firm at that time being F. B. Messer & Bro.

Early in life he developed a talent for music. At school he was always ready to assist in anything in the way of singing. In the High school, he was one of a very few, at a time when music was considered an interpolation, to say the least, who aided in having there an occasional song. His talent developed in various ways. He could perform well on a number of musical instruments, when but a boy, and it is not strange to find that as he grew older, and after his service in defense of his country, that he should devote the most of the time to that art which he loved so well. When N. W. Saunders and others, in this town, organized Saunders' Band, they found in Messer an able and ardent assistant. He became connected with this band until it broke up, when he joined the old Salem Brass Band, continuing with it until the formation of the Salem Cadet Band, with which he has been connected continuously until the time of his death. During this time, and while with the Cadet Band, he travelled two seasons with the orchestra of Bennett & Moulton's Opera troupe, and with the orchestra of Whitmore & Clark's minstrels. He has also played in the Boston orchestras, more or less, at various times, being a ready musician, and one upon whom they could always rely. He arranged considerable music for the band, particularly for vocalists who desired to sing with the accompaniment of the orchestra. For the last few years, in addition to his duties as performer, he has been business agent for the Band, making all the dates, and arranging for the services of the members. The last course of entertainments in Mechanic Hall, for the benefit of the band, was solely under his direction, a duty for which he was especially fitted from his large acquaintance with the artists before the public, and his knowledge of what was essential for success, financially as well as musically. To the band as well as the musical public generally, his loss will be a severe one.

Jovial and companionable, his services were always in demand, making the Band popular through that magnetism which he personally exerted. He married Miss Sanborn of East Kingston, N. H., living in Peabody at first, but shortly removed to Salem, where he has since resided. His wife and four children survive him, the children inheriting in a large degree the musical talent of their father, two of them having successfully performed on several occasions in this town. He was born Feb. 29, 1844, in the old Prescott house on Wallis street. His funeral will take place Friday at 2 P. M. from the residence of A. A. Messer, on Elm street, in this town.

In a ledge near the gravel pit at Cedar Grove Cemetery a family of black snakes have established a home, and last Saturday afternoon some boys, prominent among whom was a lad named Quinn, who lives on Sherman street, appeared on the scene and as the slimy and loathsome beauties made their appearance they were greeted with a collection of clubs, stones and other bric-a-brac until seven of them were killed. One of them when stretched out measured five feet and three inches.

Mr. Henry Spencer, an aged and respected citizen, died at his home on Lowell street, last Friday, from a shock of paralysis which came over him on Wednesday. He came to this town in 1854 from Campton, N. H. He was a shoe maker by trade but for a number of years was town undertaker and sexton of the South and Universalist churches. He was respected by our towns people. For several years he has been unable to do any work. He leaves a widow and one daughter, Mrs. George F. Barnes.

An informal reception by the members of the South Church and Congregation, to the new pastor, Rev. George A. Hall, was given last evening in the vestry. The reception lasted from 7 until 10 P. M., and during that time most of the congregation had an opportunity of taking the pastor by the hand, and giving him a cordial greeting. The ladies' parlor and the large vestry were thrown into one room, and on a table in the former was a large and magnificent mound of the choicest exotics, from the green-house of Mr. Ward, arranged with the rare taste which is so characteristic of that gentleman. Suspended from the wall, also, was a floral horse-shoe, and in other parts of the room was a profusion of flowers. The exercises was entirely informal, and the affair was made as social as was possible. One pleasant feature of the occasion was a greeting to the pastor by four little girls, each of whom recited a verse and presented him with a bouquet of arbutus. There was music by the choir, or members of it, assisted by Mr. Frank Upton as pianist, and others of the society. Misses Louise Osborne and Alice Berry rendered a piano duet, as did also Misses Hattie Smith and Lizzie Poor; there were pieces by Misses Alice Patterson and Grace Stevens. Songs by Miss Lizzie B. Poor and Miss Bill of the choir, and duets by Mr. and Mrs. Chase, and Mrs. Chase and Miss Bill. The affair closed with a hymn sung by the entire assembly to the tune of "Federal Street."

The assessors started out on their rounds last Monday. The work is divided this year about the same as last except that Mr. Herrick who had West Peabody, has been given a part of what last year was Mr. Preston's district. This gives him West Peabody and Lowell street to the square, and the streets leading from it to the Lowell railroad track, and the other way from Lowell street including glue hill, W. H. Brown's and Major Allen's. Lyman Osborne takes Mr. Southwick's district, which includes Central street and that part lying north of the Lowell railroad track from Wallis street to Hog hill. Mr. Relihan takes the same as in former years, which includes Dublin and South Peabody above Tapley's brook. Rev. Mr. Spaulding will have the central part of the town, until this year in charge of Mr. Preston, including the square to the Lowell railroad, and Main street to the Salem line and streets leading from Main to Tapley's brook. This includes Foster street and most of the business portion of the town. There are a few extra questions the assessors are obliged to ask this year. The board are anxious to be able to list the names of all tax payers correctly so that the voters need not have any trouble on that score when election comes again.

The Selectmen did considerable business at their meeting last Saturday. They gave an intelligence office license to B. F. Stevens, an innholder's license to William H. Baldwin, and a junk dealer's license to George Saunders. Thomas W. Peasley, Timothy D. Crowley and B. F. Goodwin were appointed day police. Thomas N. Barnaby, George W. Jones, John J. Sweeney and Michael H. Grady were appointed night officers. Jerry B. Mack, John D. McKeen, John Ruth and Alfred E. Johnson, were appointed evening and Sunday police. Michael Phelan and Alfred E. Johnson were appointed police at the town hall. Nathaniel C. Patterson was appointed janitor of the Town House, George H. Farrington head usher, and H. F. Canterbury scene shifter in the large hall. William G. Dix and William T. Lee, druggists, were granted sixth class liquor licenses.

People who wished to get naturalized have been considerably annoyed because the new naturalization laws did not affect Peabody, as it was in no district, and they were obliged to go to the superior court, where the costs were more and there were other inconveniences. To cover this case a bill has been introduced in the Legislature, amending Section 1 of Chapter 345 Acts of 1885, as follows: If the applicant does not reside in the district of any district of police or municipal court, applications to any of said last named courts shall be made, and in all cases to the court held nearest to the town in which said applicant resides." This will allow Peabody people to be naturalized in the Salem Police Court.

Mr. H. A. Southwick has been experimenting for some time to secure dongolas skins that could be finished with a polish. The trouble has been that these skins require so much grease in tanning that they cannot be polished. By a process of Mr. Southwick he has succeeded in getting an excellent polish on these skins, that gives them the appearance of French kid, and at the same time they are more durable.

We learn that the manager of the Enos Elevated Railroad was in town yesterday trying to buy the stock held by local parties including that of the late William Hall. We learn they are willing to take any stock that is for sale at the regular market price. A large party will probably visit the works in New Jersey next week.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

Mr. Thomas Ray, while alighting from a team on Railroad Avenue, last Saturday, was kicked in the abdomen and for a short time it was feared he was seriously injured.

Thomas Sweeney, employed by R. S. D. Symonds, on Spring street, fell down stairs and broke his collar bone one day last week.

James McGarra, Esther Pease and Agnes Sullivan were arrested last week for stealing bark from the cars on Railroad Avenue. They paid costs.

J. H. Donovan was arrested last Friday charged with assaulting his daughter. The story is that he had some words with his wife, and taking a pan of hot water from the stove threw it at her. Just as he did so his daughter stepped between them and received the contents of the pan on her face and neck, badly scalding her. The case was continued till May 10th, as the daughter was not able to appear.

Miss Kate O'Connell, employed by Rev. Fr. Masterson, in going down stairs last Saturday slipped and sprained one ankle quite severely.

Last Sunday morning a horse belonging to a Mr. Larrabee, of Tapleyville, had a fit on Central street and smashed the buggy to which he was attached near the stables of the Salem & Danvers road.

Daniel Goodwin was arrested in Lynn last Sunday for drunkenness.

John Dougherty was fined $1 and costs in the police court Monday and was sent to the alms house.

Mr. David Gleason, a veteran of the late war, being unable to obtain work, has gone to the alms house.

Mr. R. A. Peabody, a milkman from the outskirts, lost a valuable cow last Monday night by her getting into the barn and eating a lot of paint which was to be used about the premises.

A young son of Daniel Flynn, living near Boston street, was run over by a heavy express team on Aborn street last Saturday. He was getting on the seat when he lost his hold and fell. The team passed over his legs above the knees and they were badly bruised but not broken.

Mr. Levi Spaulding stopped with his horse and carriage in front of a house on Mall street, Salem, last Sunday evening, about 8.30 o'clock, and after hitching the horse entered the house. A few minutes later his wife, who was sitting near the window, saw the team driven off. Mr. Spaulding rushed to the door only to see the team disappear around the corner. It was found on Federal street about 11 o'clock by the police.

Mr. Frank Goldthwait lost a valuable horse last Monday after a weeks' sickness, with lung fever.

It is said that Mr. Daniel Haskell took the law into his own hands last Friday and chastised a boy named Crowley whom he caught on his premises digging dandelions. Haskell is said to have used undue severity in dealing with the boy, and his wrath was only appeased when the neighbors interfered. He evidently intends to break up trespassing on his premises. The boy was before Judge Merrill this morning on a charge of trespass and a counter suit was brought against Haskell for assault. Haskell was fined $3.00 and costs for assault, and the boy was fined $5.00 and costs for trespass. Crowley appealed and was held in $50 for appearance at the higher court.

We record another accident to Master Arthur Pettey, son of Mr. John L. Pettey at the pumping station. The young man is a pupil at high school and considerably interested in chemistry. Last Friday afternoon while experimenting at the home of Mr. Horace Bushby with a son of that gentleman, the mixture exploded and Arthur was quite badly bruised about the eyes. Doctor Pike attended him and it is hoped the eyes are not injured.

Mr. Walter C. Merrill left his team standing in front of his house on Main street, last Monday morning, when the horse became frightened and breaking the headstall ran up Main street and collided with a heavy ice team as he attempted to turn the corner of Foster street, throwing the horse down and overturning the buggy to which he was attached. The buggy and harness were considerably injured, but the horse seemed all right. A stranger who was crossing had a narrow escape from being knocked down.

Mrs. James Hickey made a mis-step and fell down stairs at her home on Spring street, last Thursday, badly bruising her side and shoulder.

Frank Childs, in the employ of the Peabody News Co., met with an accident yesterday in jumping a fence near Pemberton's shop, turning his foot in such a manner as to be unable to step on it.

George H. Bowers was before Judge Merrill this morning for drunkenness, and sent down for 30 days.

Lieut-Gov. Ames has invited all members of the Legislature and state officials to attend a reception to be given Gov. Robinson at his home on Commonwealth avenue this evening.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Copartnerships

having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will be doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal property can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

Should be kept constantly at hand, for use in emergencies of the household. Many a mother, startled in the night by the ominous sounds of Croup, finds the little sufferer, with red and swollen face, gasping for air. In such cases Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Mrs. Emma Gedney, 159 West 128 st., New York, writes: "While in the country, last winter, my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with Croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. Ayer's Cherry Pectoral was tried in small and frequent doses, and, in less than half an hour, the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the Pectoral saved my darling's life." Mrs. Chas. B. Landon, Guilford, Conn., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral and also the life of my little son. As he is troubled with Croup, I dare not be without this remedy in the house." Mrs. J. Gregg, Lowell, Mass., writes: "My children have repeatedly taken Ayer's Cherry Pectoral for Coughs and Croup. It gives immediate relief, followed by cure." Mrs. Mary E. Evans, Scranton, Pa., writes: "I have two little boys, both of whom have been, from infancy, subject to violent attacks of Croup. About six months ago we began using Ayer's Cherry Pectoral, and it acts like a charm. In a few minutes after the child takes it, he breathes easily and rests well. Every mother ought to know what a blessing I have found in Ayer's Cherry Pectoral." Mrs. Wm. C. Reid, Freehold, N. J., writes: "In our family, Ayer's medicines have been blessings for many years. In cases of Colds and Coughs, we take and the inconvenience is soon forgotten."

Saved My Life,

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral,

Poet's Corner.

An Heirloom.

A tuneful, rhythmic waltz we danced.
And then, as ceased the music's beat,
Among the fountains and the flowers
I led her to a quiet seat,
We sat there talking. Flirting? Well,
Perhaps I spoke of eyes that shine;
At least, she shyly dropped her own,
And quite avoided meeting mine.

With woman's skill in fencing, too,
She dropped the subject: "Do you know
This gown I'm wearing here tonight
Was bought— oh, years and years ago!
My grandma wore it, with these pearls,
This very necklace when she met
At some great ball in Washington
Our friend, the Marquis Lafayette.

It's pretty, don't you think it is?"
I turned and gravely looked at it,
The gown that, fifty years before,
Graced banquets given to Lafayette,
Soft greenish satin, here and there
Festoons of silver leaves between Pink roses, and a crimson tint
That lightly flushed the paler sheen.

I softly whispered, "Dear, believe
The same young Love is breathing yet
Who hunted satin roses through
Those days of General Lafayette.
Your grandma planned a ruse de guerre,
And silken plans of capture laid;
She knew no lover could resist
The glamor of the old brocade.

The scene is changed, and you will admit
A minuet is rather slow:
But modern love is very like
The olden love of long ago.
I would not care to change the date;
Those stilted airs no doubt were fine,
But no old fashioned lover's heart
Beat with a rapture strong as mine!

Give me a word of hope and joy!
It is not "no" I heard you say?
And you will wear the pretty stuff
Again upon our wedding day?
On this white finger may I place
A jewel old and quaintly set,
To celebrate that happy hour
When grandma danced with Lafayette?"

The Master of the House

He cannot walk, he cannot speak,
Nothing he knows of books or men,
He is the weakest of the weak,
And has not strength to hold a pen;
He has no pocket, and no purse,
Nor even yet has owned a penny,
But has more riches than his nurse,
Because he wants not any.

He rules his parents by a cry,
And hold them captive by a smile—
A despot, strong through infancy,
A king, from lack of guile,
He lies upon his back and crows,
Or looks with grave eyes on his mother—
What can he mean? But I suppose
They understand each other.

In doors or out, early or late,
There is no limit to his stay,
For wrapt in baby-robes of state,
He governs night and day.
Kisses he takes as rightful due.
And, Turk-like, has his slave to dress him.
His subjects bend before him, too,
I'm one of them. God bless him!
—John Dennis in the Spectator.

Dead Leaves Whisper.

[Two friends, artist and poet, found chalked on a wall in busy London these words "Dead Leaves Whisper."]

"Dead leaves whisper," so they show it,
Chalked upon a London wall—
Was it writ by unknown poet?
If we could but know it all!

Know from what fair trees they showered
On what garden path beneath,
Of its beauty all disflowered,
In these days of mist and death.

Dead leaves whisper in strange places—
Whisper in this city square—
Whisper where no faintest trace is
Of the summer once so fair.

And we listen, and we ponder
On the days before they fell,
When the world, with summer's wonder
Was more glad than tongue could tell.

Dead leaves in the twilight glistening,
Dead leaves shivering in the breeze—
What pale ghost-souls may be listening
'Neath the desolated trees?

Dead leaves, ah, my brother,
Whisper down life's tragic ways—
Will they whisper in some other
Life of unconjectured days?
—Philip Bourke Marston.

I was troubled with Catarrh and Hay Fever for thirty years. Have suffered a great deal. My eyes, ears and throat were greatly affected. Mr. Kinney, the druggist, induced me to try Ely's Cream Balm, and for the past two years have had very little trouble. I have lived in Webster, Mass., and Rockville, Conn. Very resp'y, J. W. Pratt, Monson, Mass.

I have improved greatly since using Ely's Cream Balm for catarrh. I feel like a new man. It is a blessing to humanity. John D. Farrell, Hartford, Conn.

GENTS:—I feel it my duty to say respecting Burdock Blood Bitters, that it is the best medicine I ever took. I suffered two or three years from stomach troubles and dyspepsia, as well as from liver and kidney complaint. I was not able to attend to my business. My wife was afflicted in much the same way. We read of your Bitters in the papers and made up our minds that we would try them. The result is, my wife and I began to improve at once, and I am now able to do more hard work than before in ten years. It relieved my kidney troubles as well. INDIGESTION

To strengthen the stomach, create an appetite, and remove the horrible depression and despondency which result from Indigestion, there is nothing so effective as Ayer's Pills. These Pills contain no calomel or other poisonous drug, act directly on the digestive and assimilative organs, and restore health and strength to the entire system. T. P. Bonner, Chester, Pa., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for the past 30 years and am satisfied I should not have been alive to-day, if it had not been for them. They me of Dyspepsia when all other remedies failed, and their occasional use has kept me in a healthy condition ever since." L. N. Smith, Utica, N. Y., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills, for Liver troubles and Indigestion, a good many years, and have always found them prompt and efficient in their action." Richard Norris, Lynn, Mass., writes: "After much suffering, I have been cured of Dyspepsia and Liver troubles

By Using

Ayer's Pills. They have done me more good than any other medicine I have ever taken." John Burdett, Troy, Iowa, writes: "For nearly two years my life was rendered miserable by the horrors of Dyspepsia. Medical treatment afforded me only temporary relief, and I became reduced in flesh, and very much debilitated. A friend of mine, who had been similarly afflicted, advised me to try Ayer's Pills. I did so, and with the happiest results. My food soon ceased to distress me, my appetite returned, and I became as strong and well as ever."

TOWN OF PEABODY.

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS.

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthy water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fish-monger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shal be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall NOT allow their children thus withdrawn to re enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soil carts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

WILLIAM S. OSBORNE, Chairman, THOMAS J. RELIHAN, Clerk, CHARLES P. ELLIGOTT.	Board of Health

*The Board shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety * * * Whoever violates any such regulation shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars. — [Extract from the Public Statutes Chap. 80, § 18.

* Section 1, chap. 98 of the laws of 1884. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of small-pox, diphtheria, scarlet fever or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the selectmen or board of health of the town in which he dwells, and upon the death, recovery or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the board of health. Any person neglecting or refusing to comply with either of the above provisions shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Book Notices.

The contribution that will attract first attention in the May Magazine of American History is the scholarly paper of Rev. Isaac S. Hartley, D. D., on Horatio Seymour. This is accompanied by an admirable steel portrait. In the second article, Historical Colorado, which is quaintly illustrated, Mrs. Hodges presents a stirring account of the progress of that young State within the past twenty-eight years. A well written article of special importance to all historical students is The March of the Spaniards across Illinois, by Edward G. Mason of the Chicago Historical Society. In the Civil War Studies General William Farrar Smith concludes his critical papers on Shiloh, pointing out clearly where the blame and the glory of that defeat and victory rested. The Notes and other departments overflow with choice reading. This May issue is assuredly one of the best numbers of this popular periodical ever printed. Typographically it is a model of excellence. Publication office, 30 Lafayette Place, New York City.

Out of respect to the babies, Babyhood for May urges the abolition of tobacco from all parts of the house frequented by young children, and notes a striking instance of the occasional serious effects of tobacco smoke upon infants. In the same number is a contribution from Edward King, Paris, giving some very interesting facts regarding the Baby Show now in progress in that city. Directions are given for various articles of Baby's wardrobe, illustrated. $1.50 a year; 15 cents a number. 5 Beckman St., New York.

R. F. Zogbaum contributes to the May Harper's some of his experiences of frontier life and adventure under the heading, With the Bluecoats on the Border. The article is fully illustrated from the author's drawings.

Lovers of nature will find a choice morsel in the article Sap Bewitched, by W. H. Gibson, in the May Harper's, beautifully illustrated by the author. Mr. Gibson's poetic fancy gives this title to a description of the strange swellings, commonly known as galls, which occur in surprising variety on nearly all plants and trees Many accurate facts of original observation are woven together with occasional touches of imagery in a style worthy of Thoreau.

Songs of Promise for Sunday Schools, Prayer, Praise and Conference Meetings, is the suggestive title of one of the most attractive books of its kind which has appeared in a long time. Besides old favorites, it contains many capital new pieces which all will be glad to sing. Edited by J. H. Tenney and Rev. E. A. Hoffmann, and published in a pleasing form by Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston.

The home player and the church organist will be alike interested in Mr. James C. Macy's latest compilation, Selected Gems and Modern Themes for Pipe and Reed Organ, published at $1 50, by Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston. The book is made up of preludes, postludes, festival and wedding music, marches, and a most pleasing variety of choice selections for special occasions, many of which are here introduced as organ pieces for the first time. Not too difficult for the Amateur, the book is elevated in style, and will be an efficient aid to the cultivation of a pure musical taste.

Miniatures is the title of a set of 9 choice easy piano pieces, from 25 to 50 cents each, elegant in style and well adapted to the use of teachers and pupils. They may appropriately be classed among modern classics of the lighter sort. Composed by Carl Weber, and published by Ditson & Co.

A. C. Mackenzie's latest composition, an unusually pretty song, If Love were what the Rose is, is published at thirty-five cents by Oliver Ditson & Co., Boston. The same publishers announce Entreaty, a song in the endearing Suabian dialect, by Hans Schmidt, having also English words and the best of music by Carl Rohm, thirty-five cents; also Spanish March Characteristic, by Robert Coverly, forty cents, a bright march in a minor key, full of snap.

The May number of the young Ladies' Journal has reached us from the International News Company and is just what the ladies want. If they want to know how to make over an old dress or how to cut in the latest style a new one, they will find an endless variety of styles from which to select. The fashion supplements are numerous, and a beautiful design for a sofa pillow is given. The reading matter is very interesting. Get a copy from Mrs. Gilson

The Floral Cabinet for May is a superior number, containing many interesting articles upon Floriculture and domestic Arts.

The May number of the Baby Pathfinder contains all the latest changes. Only five cents. On all news stands.

A man's wife should always be the same, especially to her husband, but if she is weak and nervous and uses Carter's Iron Pills, she cannot be, for they make her "feel like a different person," at least so they all say, and their husbands say so too!

Silver braid is used on street costumes.

"100 Doses One Dollar," is true only of Hood's Sarsaparilla, and it is an unanswerable argument as to strength and economy.

THE LADIES'

DONGOLA!

OFFICE OF ORDWAY & CLARK,

MANUFACTURERS OF

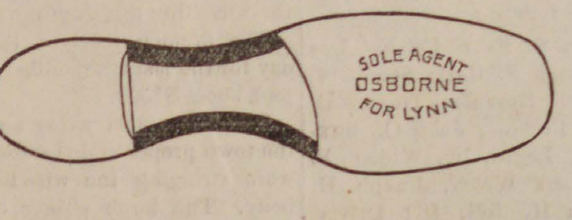
LADIES' FINE BOOTS AND SHOES.

HAVERHILL, Mass., February 25, 1886.

MR. WELLMAN OSBORNE, Lynn, Mass.

DEAR SIR: We have this day sent you a large invoice of our justly celebrated DONGOLA BOOTS. You will find they are all that has been claimed for them, and far ahead and entirely different from Kangaroo, Glove or Mat Kid. There is no other boot made for Ladies' wear which, for softness of finish, elegance of fit combined with such lasting durability, will give the entire satisfaction of this boot. They are something that has long been needed, as they wear better than French or American Kid, and will not stretch, turn purple, or look rusty. So popular and unprecedented has become the demand for these goods throughout the country, as the merits of the leather have become known, and so limited the importation of skins out of which the goods are manufactured, and so many imitations under similar names have been placed upon the market, that it has been found necessary to copyright the name.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED WITH OUR AGENTS NAME UPON THE SOLE, THUS:



Also the word "DONGOLA" upon the inside lining.

We shall give you the EXCLUSIVE SALE OF THESE BOOTS IN YOUR CITY, feeling confident with your large trade that they will find a ready market, judging from the large sales they have met with in other cities. Respectfully yours,

ORDWAY & CLARK.

Mr. R. F. Dodge at the Central Fish Market, has been exhibiting a 250 pound halibut. It quickly disappeared when he commenced to sell it at 10 cents a pound. By the way, Mr. Dodge has had new windows put in his shop, and a transom over the door, making a marked improvement in the place.

Spaulding is out with a new sign in soda, and it is a fine one, but no finer than his soda and syrups. He is particular in his selection of these; not all being of one make, but the firm who makes the best of a certain flavor sells him the syrup. We never tasted such delicious pine apple syrup anywhere.

The report of Chief of Police Peasley for the month of April is as follows: Whole number of arrests 21, of which 8 were for drunkenness; larceny, 6; assault, 2; using profane language, 2; receiving stolen property 1; keeping liquor with intent to sell, 1; maintaining liquor nuisance, 1; number of lodgers, 56.

The executive board of the Knights of Labor have begun to enforce the Harrington boycott, and workmen in the large shoe shops in different parts of the state will refuse to cut their leather, thus compelling manufacters to buy of somebody else. We trust both sides will soon see the advantage of ending this unpleasant business.

The warm spring days are bringing us the blue violets, the nodding anemone, the bluets, the trailing cinque-foil and even the sweet white violets of the meadow. On May day the blue butterflies hovered over the blue violets, fluttering their gauzy wings as if vieing with the blue beneath and the blue sky above.

The Atlantic Base Ball Association elected officers Monday evening as follows: President, James H. Crowley; Vice President, William H. Beers; Recording Secretary, Michael Lucy; Collector, William Carbrey; Treasurer, Michael Reagan; Board of Directors, Frank Smith, Dennis J. Murphy, Eugene Sweeney.

The organization of the Boston Press Club was perfected last week. They will open rooms for their accommodation. The list of members includes gentlemen from all the daily and weekly papers in the city. Mr. Edward H. Farnsworth, of the Boston Post, a brother of Mrs. W. T. Lee of this town, is a member of the executive committee.

The Board of Engineers held their last meeting of the old fire year last Wednesday evening and settled all unfinished business and dissolved. The new board then organized by the election of S. H. Buxton as Chief Engineer, Alfred E. Johnson, 1st Assistant, and Horace A. Southwick 2d Assistant. The Engineers were assigned as follows:—Engineer Southwick to the Central Station, Johnson to Hose 2 and 4, Tibbetts to Hose 3, and Reed to Hose 5. Chief Buxton, Engineers Johnson and Reed were appointed a committee on engines and houses and were given authority to make necessary repairs as last year. It was also voted that all firemen whose business called them out of town in the day time, be required to furnish substitutes. The matter relating to Hose wagon 5 was referred to the committee on engines. It was voted to use the room now occupied as a sleeping room by driver Price as a battery room for the fire alarm. The company lists were then taken up and the members approbated. Steamer 1, ten men; Steamer 2, twelve men; H. & L. 1, fourteen men; Hose 1, eleven men; Hose 2, 3, 4 and 5, twelve men each.

The annual meeting of the Relief Association of the Peabody Fire Department will be held in the Town Hall, Monday evening, May 10th, at 7.30 o'clock, for the purpose of electing officers and transacting any business that may come before it.

The annual meetings of the various companies constituting the fire department were held last Friday evening and resulted as follows:

Gen. Sutton S. F. E. Co. No. 1.—Foreman, Joseph F. Hart; Secretary, George H. Carr; Hosemen, Thomas E. Wilson, John Perkins, John O. Buxton, Alonzo L. Legro, Jr., William F. Littlefield, Frank Welch, Joseph H. Poor, William H. Joll, Jr.; Driver, Robert Tanch. The full organization has not been completed as yet.

Buxton, John F. Mahoney; Director Relief Association, Charles H. Hooper; Driver, Arthur P. Bodge.

Hose No. 4, Pierpoint street.—Foreman, John H. Moreland; Assistant Foreman, Charles J. Halpin; Clerk and Treasurer, Thomas F. Hutchinson; Charles H. Potter, Thomas H. O'Keefe, Horace G. Upton, Owen Devlin, John Morland, Jr., John Halpin, Thomas L. Nagle, Herbert J. Foan, Michael Brett; Charles J. Halpin, Director Relief Association; Driver, Alberto Marr.

Hose No. 5, South Peabody.—Foreman and Clerk, Walter Curtis; Assistant Foreman, Cornelius Murphy; Steward, Edward T. Jones; A. T. Parker, Daniel B. Brown, Edward C. Williams, William W. Thompson, William A. Giles, Frank E. Newhall, Charles E. Reed, Charles A. Wiggin, Elmer W. Skinner; Driver, F. E. Newhall.

Steamer 2 has elected D. S. Littlefield, Charles G. Folsom and Daniel B. Lord honorary members of the company.

Monday night at just 12 o'clock the bell on the house of Hose 4 gave an alarm of fire which was taken up by the other bells, and the whole department turned out and went racing down Main street, only to find that the bell had been rung by a young man who was returning from Salem, and seeing the light of the fire in South Peabody thought it was a fire in that vicinity and so gave the alarm. "Jack" the fire dog was in his element and ran barking ahead of Hose 1 all the way down Main street, but in returning he met with an accident which nearly cut his days short. Hose 3 was coming down the street at a rattling pace with about ten men riding on the reel, and "Jack," thinking that his services were needed there, ran to meet them getting in front of the horse and was knocked under the carriage, but whether it passed over him or not cannot be told, but he received a cut on one leg and toe cut and was pretty lame besides. This is the third time he has been injured by fire apparatus.

A heavy forest fire has been raging around Bartholomew's pond in South Peabody since last Sunday, and gangs of men were engaged in fighting the flames all day Monday and until 2 o'clock Tuesday morning.

It is hoped that the alterations at the Central Station will be finished by the last of this week.

The Board of Engineers will hold their meeting this evening.

The firemen received their pay Friday for the last six months' service. It took about $1500.

The fire alarm wires are all up for the town proper and yesterday the men were stringing the wire to West Peabody. The large striker on the Universalist bell will have to be dispensed with as there is not room enough in the steeple for the apparatus and weights. Probably strikers will be placed on the fire bells on the Central Station, Hose 3 and 4, and this with the whistle on the Pumping Station will give the alarm. Superintendent Rogers of the Gamewell company, was in town yesterday. z

Where Hours go Merrily.

The operetta of the "Berry Pickers" will be an interesting event to the Murray Club and their friends. There will be over fifty voices in the choruses, the music is bright and pretty and much time has been spent in preparation. This club never do anything half way, and we can assure the public that there has been nothing this winter more worthy of their patronage. The piece is to be given Wednesday and Thursday evenings of next week, and the audiences both evenings should be large, and we think they will be. Tickets are for sale by members of the club.

Miss Fannie, daughter of George C. Peirce, was given a suprise party by a large number of her young friends last Thursday evening. Seh gave each a cor dial welcome, and the evening was spent with music, games etc., followed by a bountiful supper.

Masconomo Tribe of Red Men worked the adoption degree on one pale face last Thursday night, and the forest rung with the wild yells of the savage tribe. In fact the woods were full of them.

The Peabody Dramatic Club attended the production of the "Long Strike" at the Windsor Theatre in Boston last Thursday evening. Some of the characters were not taken any better than by this club, when they produced it a few weeks ago.

The Kickapoo Indians opened at the rink last night, and will remain with us for two weeks, and perhaps a month. They will give a free exhibition every evening, and sell their medicine to those who desire to purchase.

The Ladies Association of the Unitarian church have presented Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Hudson with an elegant china tea set of 90 pieces.

Some unknown friend of Dr. Geo. M. Frost remembering recently that it was the doctor's birthday, presented him with an elegant easy chair. The article in question was left at the house, and the driver of the team refused to be interviewed.

Mr. H. O. Upton's dancing class will hold an assembly at the town hall, Thursday evening, May 6th.

The third entertainment by the Peabody Bicycle Club at the rink last Thursday evening, was well attended, considering the lateness of the season. Besides skating and dancing, an entertainment consisting of fancy bicycle riding was given by Marshall and Tripp and Lester and Wilson. This was followed by a game of polo on Star bicycles by the same, and won by the latter. A race between Master Henry Thomas on rollers, and a bicycle, was won by Master Thomas. Besides these there was an obstacle race for a silver cup won by a young man named Bagley. Lester and Wilson's funny acts on carriage wheels furnished much amusement. The unique owl order furnished by Kent & Boynton, the well known clothier, was kept as a souvenir.

Holten Lodge I. O. O. F. celebrated the sixty-seventh anniversary of Odd Fellowship in America, at the Peabody Rink last Wednesday evening by an entertainment, supper, and dance. There were about three hundred present, and the company enjoyed themselves till 12 o'clock. The following excellent program was finely rendered and the artists enthusiastically encored:

1. Overture—Mikado Sullivan
Cadet Orchestra.
2. Sophia, Phia, Phia.
Mr. J. W. Van Blarcom.
3. Clarinet Solo—La Place D'or.
Mr. Jean M. Missud
4. Song,—"Vanita" Howard
Miss Anna Liebsch.
5. Reading—Selected.
Mr. G. N. Winslow.
6 Song—To-day I'm Sixty-Two.
Mr. Van Blarcom.
7. Song—Two Little Ragged Urchins.
Miss Liebsch,
8. Xylophone Solo, Muller
Mr. Wm. E. McQuinn.
9. Song—No Ladies Child.
Mr. Van Blarcom
10. Song—Selected
Miss Liebsch.

The lower end of the rink was partitioned off with a curtain, behind which the tables were set. At the close of the entertainment a march was started and the curtain separating the banqueting tables were drawn to one side, and the large company were very soon enjoying one of Harvey Blunt's fine suppers. The supper was followed by remarks of Brother W. M. Hill, Deputy Grand Master of the Grand Lodge of Massachusetts, who gave a brief history of the Order from its foundation in America by Thomas Wildey, and his associates, until it stood to-day the most powerful secret society in America. He spoke of its wealth, and the noble manner in which it had been expended in aiding afflcted brothers, their widows and children. Dancing followed the supper, and it was enjoyed by old and young till 12 o'clock. Music was furnished by the Salem Cadet Orchestra.

A large party of the friends of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Hammond on English street, remembering that it was their wedding anniversary last Friday evening, called upon them, giving them a surprise. During the evening they were presented with a pair of beautiful hanging lamps, one from the company and the other from the children. A supper was enjoyed by the company.

About 75 members of Union Post 50 G. A. R. and the Salem Brass Band attended the grand camp fire of Post 5, of Lynn, last Monday evening. There was a fine street parade and a supper, after which there were patriotic speeches from the officers and the ranks. They returned home at a late hour.

The semi-annual meeting of the Mass. Womans' Christian Temperance Union will be held in the First Congregational Church, Springfield, Tuesday and Wednesday, May 4 and 5. Mrs. M. O. Stevens and Mrs. E. S. Osborne will attend as delegates from the Peabody Union and also Miss Hattie Saunders and Miss Florence Cassino from the Y. W. C. T. U.

There was a family reunion at the home of James Heland last Sunday. There were six brothers and four sisters present and each had their husbands and wives. The children were all born in Connecticut, and with the exception of two, who still remain in that state, are settled in Essex County.

J. S. Paul, an aged and well known resident of this town, died at his residence this morning of Bright's disease. Mr. Paul has been in feeble health and unable to work for some time, and has been confined to the house and his bed for many weeks. Mr. Paul was born in Eliot, Maine, was a currier by trade, and was well and favorably known among the workmen and manufacturers in this town. He was prominently connected with the Methodist church, was superintendent of the Sabbath School there for many years, one of the Official Board of the church, and interested in its welfare as in every good work. He was a member of Holten Lodge I. O. O. F. of this town, and was for some time Chaplain of the Lodge. His wife survives him. His age was 64 years.

Now doth the busy hen constitute herself a guard over the seeds and tender plants placed in their respective places by the thrifty housewife and ever and anon stirs up the earth and plants for a better chance of the sun striking them. The hen is wise; the housewife unwise.

GREATEST LUXURY OBTAINABLE

For Impaired or Diseased Vision is a pair of

B. LAURANCE'S

Axis Cut Pebbles.

The frauds that have been perpertrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlers by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all important subject of the preservation of the sight. There are only two articles from which spectacle lenses can be manufactured, viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name, it still remains glass. Pebble on the other hand is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crytal found generally in free-stone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald and nearly as hard as the diamond. The pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone cut by the aid of diamond dust, and the greater amount of power is placed immediately over the center of the grain found in the pebble. It will give to the spectacle wearer a coolness, freshness and a pleasant feeling that the ordinary spectacle lenses cannot by any possibility impart. All spectacles and eyeglasses are stamped B. L. A. C. P. and can only be purchased from

Spring and Summer Opening.

Friday, May 7th,

We shall commence our

— OF —

SPRING & SUMMER CLOTHING,

Hats, Caps and Furnishing Goods.

We are now prepared to show the largest and most complete assortment of Spring and Summer Clothing for Men, Boys and Children's of any time since commencing business in Salem.

It is our attention this season to increase our sales very largely, consequently we shall offer our patrons greater inducements than ever before. Our enormous stock is the powerful agent that speeds on our business assisted by the following auxiliaries:

A keen foresight as to the wants of all classes.
A strict adherence to the one price system.
Always ready and willing to exchange goods or refund the money.
Strongly protesting against the common practice of trickery and deception.
Always making our prices consistent with the laws of economy.
Believing in doing a large cash business on a small profit basis.
Maintaining business principles that have made us the acknowledged leaders in Essex county.

We have added a new department this Spring for the sale of Hats and Caps, under the management of the well known Hatter, ASA HOOD. This department has already proved a great success, from the fact that it is conducted upon the same system as the clothing department. Patrons can now select their Hats with their clothing and save both time and money.

Our stock of Men's and Young Men's Dress and Business Suits comprises about 3000, over eighty different patterns to select from. Business Suits in plain sacks, straight front sacks, and four button cutaway frocks manufactured from checks, plaids, plain and fancy mixtures. For dress suits the 4-button cutaway and Prince Albert are the correct styles for the spring and summer of 1886, and are manufactured from the different shades of whipcord worsted.

We have now in stock a fine assortment of Gent's Spring Overcoats comprising about 800, over 40 different patterns to select from.

The handsomest styles and the largest variety of Gent's Pantaloons we have ever shown.

Without doubt we have the largest and finest assottment of Boys and Children's Clothing ever shown under one roof in this country. We have now about 3000 suits representing all the different styles of cut and fabrics. For children from 4 to 14 years of age, the Norfolk, Creedmoor, Rough and Tumbleand Sailor Suits are the popular styles. 2500 Boys' Shirt Waists and Woolen Blouses.

In our Furnishing Goods It is impossible for us to enumerate all our departments, but to our old customers it is only necessary to say that our variety is larger than ever, and that low prices will rule.

NAUMKEAG CLOTHING CO.,

177 & 179 Essex St., Salem.

Z. A. GALLUP, - - - - - MANAGER

The family of John Richardson, residing on Tremont street, are moving to Pawtucket, R. I., where Mr. Richardson has been employed for some time.

All the best brands of B. P. Clark & Co's. cigars are for sale by Geo. Stevens. He is sole agent for this vicinity. Buy them and you will smoke no others. *

Nowhere in this country can there be seen such a magnificent display of choice Furniture as is exhibited by Paine's Furniture Company, 48 Canal street, Boston.

To-day the Naumkeag Street R. R. will begin trips to the Willows leaving the office in Salem at 9.50 and 10.35 A. M. and 1.35, 2.20, 3.05, 3.50, 4.35, 5.20 and 6.05 P. M.

The homestead estate of the late Franklin Osborne, on the corner of Foster and Oak streets, has been sold to J. B. Thomas. The price stated in the deed was $11,000.

The property of Willard Winslow, on Juniper Point, was sold by Frank E. Farnham last week, at the office of Geo. P. Daniels. It was purchased by Chas. N. Beach for $1100.

The steamer Providence of the Norfolk line, had six hundred passengers on board, on Friday, most of whom were seeking a summer resort on our New England coast.

William Reagan, the missing man, has been heard from. A postal from Boston was received by the chief of police saying that "he was all right and left the same way." Another mystery cleared up.

The Essex So. Conference of churches will meet to-morrow in Middleton, at which time Rev. Smith Baker, of Lowell, a prominent preacher in that city, will speak on Sabbath School teaching.

The two year old son of William W. Doughty, of this town, died last Friday of convulsions, after an illness of only one day. He was improving up to the last moment, when he suddenly passed away just as his father was returning to his home. His funeral took place Sunday.

Our readers will be glad to hear again from Rev. L. L. Wood, formerly of this town. His letter on Mormonism and the Mormons is full of interest, and we commend it to the attention of our readers.

Charles Sweeney, a respectable resident of this town, died last Friday morning at his home on Winter street. His age was about 80 years. He was at one time in the employ of A. H. Sanger.

The assessors will be obliged to return a copy of the valuation book, this year, to the State. This is another argument in favor of the publication of such a work. Our town is way behind in this matter.

Travel on the horse cars through this town commenced in earnest Sunday. 1105 through passengers were carried on the Lynn & Boston R. R., and the travel on the Naumkeag and Danvers roads was very heavy.

The bill limiting the rental of telephones in Massachusetts has passed the House, representative Batchelder voting in favor of it. The limit is $4, about the price now charged. It should have been made $3.

A man on one of the job teams of T. H. O'Keefe had a narrow escape last Thursday afternoon. He fell from the seat and if the driver had not thrown him away from the wheels the wagon would have run over him.

It is rumored that the Danvers Street Railway will build tracks to Proctor's crossing and will also build from Danversport to Asbury Grove. The possibilities of horse railroading in Essex County seem to be endless.

The report that H. M. Cross is not to deliver the memorial address before Post 50 G. A. R. is unauthorized. Mr. Cross has gone to Arkansas, but will undoubtedly return before Memorial Day, and is expected to deliver the address.

Mrs. Mary Stone, a well known resident of Andover street, died at her residence last Sunday evening, of gastric fever. She had been ill for many years. She was a sister in law of the late Daniel Buxton. Her age was about 60 years.

It is stated that the cars on the Naumkeag Street Railroad to Wenham, will run for the first time, on next Sunday, if the weather is suitable.

Mrs. R. H. Wilkinson expects to visit Kansas City, Mo., shortly, for several weeks. On her return Mrs. Moses E. Johnson will visit Peabody with her. We regret to learn that Mr. Johnson's health is not as good as it has been.

A petition for the Salem and Danvers Horse R. R. Co. to run their cars to the Willows is being circulated in Danvers, and largely signed. It would save change of cars for the people in that town. Some arrangement for transfer should be made at all events.

The members of the Methodist church and congregation will give a reception to their new pastor, Rev. G. A. Phinney, to-morrow evening in the vestry. All are invited. Music and readings will be provided, and an opportunity afforded for social converse.

We are under obligations to the Wakefield Bicycle Club for some tickets to a minstrel performance by members of that club, in the Town Hall, Wakefield, this evening. This club is enterprising and wide awake, and they deserve success in whatever they undertake.

Rev. V. M. Simons, formerly of this town, and for the past three years located in Springfield, has retired from the ministry and taken the agency of the branch office of the U. S. Compound Oxygen company, of Springfield, with an office at 37 Pearl street, in Worcester.

The friends of Mr. Herman Nathan, who keeps the barber shop under Baldwin's hotel, are getting anxious about him. He went to New York about a week ago and since then nothing has been heard from him. Quite a number of people are anxiously anticipating his return.

Bear in mind that Dodge keeps fresh lobsters, boiled every day, at his market on the square. Dodge keeps everything in the fish line. His goods are always fresh, and as the summer season approaches he is ready with the choicest assortment of all fancy fish to be obtained anywhere. Give him a call.

Spring Opening.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

SECOND FLOOR.

We cordially invite the Ladies of Salem and vicinity to our Opening of the largest and most carefully selected stock of Millinery Goods ever shown in this city, including Trimmed Bonnets and Round Hats, both imported and of our own design and execution. In Fancy Laces and Silk Lisses, we have many elegant patterns, and in some of the most delicate tints, fairly rivaling the shadings of nature. In Flowers, which are to be so largely used the coming season, we have a most attractive display, as fresh as from the garden, only lacking fragrance. We have also in Untrimmed Hats and Bonnets, a very large assortment from the strongest School Hat to the finest foreign make. In fact everything which goes to make up a complete stock. Mrs. A. C. Washburn, our manager, was in New York at the Importers' Opening in Feb. securing many choice things at that time, and has kept close watch of the market up to the present time. Having through years of experience formed a large acquaintance with Importing as well as Jobbing Houses, which gives her great advantage in selecting Desirable Styles and making Lowest Prices. Miss Sadie Bushby will remain with us, as will also Miss Etta Brown and Miss Hattie Gliddin. We have also secured the services of Miss Carrie Palmer, who will join our corps of popular sales ladies. And now we feel sure almost every lady calling on us next week, or after, will meet an old acquaintance who will gladly show them every attention, and will take a personal interest in pleasing.

Cloaks, Suits and Shawls.

SPRING. 1886.

We take pleasure in announcing to the Ladies of Salem and Essex County, that we have now open and ready for inspection our full line of Ladies, Misses and Children's Outside Garments, Wraps, Shawls, etc., for Spring and Summer wear. We may venture to say without any egotism, that our selections in this department far surpass anything we have previously offered. The increasing demand for superior Ready Made Garments and Suits has led us to exercise unusual care in selecting none but the best, both in material and workmanship, and we guarantee all to be just as represented. We have every style and quality a lady can wish for. Long Garments for driving and travelling, Short Wraps and Jackets for street wear in every available shade and colors, both Foreign and American make. Suits, stylish and of superior quality. Shawls, India Chuddas, Boucle, Cashmere, and Fancy Embroidered Scarfs in all grades and shades. Children's Garments, simply beautiful in Boucle, English, German and American Goods. Our Infants' Department requires especial mention for its variety of Long and Short Robes, Cloaks, Slips and Blankets.

Jersey Waists, fancy colors beaded. Mikado fronts, Vest fronts, Plain fronts and braided, in every variety; and a great many more equally good things that we have not space to mention.

We cordially invite you to come and see for yourselves, assuring all courteous attention, and any information we can bestow.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER,

252 Essex Street, Salem.

Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds, Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skylights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bousley.

Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated with courtesy whether anything is esired or not

Poet's Corner.

From Bad To Worse.

BY ALICE CAREY.

Come, children, leave your playing,
And gather round my knee,
And I'll tell you a little story:
Away across the sea,
In a meadow where the mosses,
And the grass were frozen brown,
Three little maids sat milking
One day as the sun went down—
Not cows, but goats of the mountain;
And before their pails were full,
The winds, they pierced like needles
Through their gowns of heavy wool.
And as one hand, then the other,
They tried to warm in their laps,
The bitter weather froze their breath
Like fur about their caps,
And so, as they sat milking,
They grew as still as mice,
Save when the stiff shoes on their feet
Rattled like shoes of ice.

At last out spoke the youngest,
As she blew on her finger-nails:
"I have planned a plan, sweet sisters:
Let us take our milking pails,
And go to the side of the mountain,
As fast as we can go.
And heap them up to the very top
From the whitest drifts of snow;
And let us build in the meadow
Where we will milk our goats at night,
A house to keep us from the cold,
With walls all silver white.

We will set the door away from the wind,
The floor we will heap with moss,
And gather little strips of ice
And shingle the roof across."

Then all the foolish maidens,
They emptied their pails on the ground,
And bounded up the mountain side
As fast as they could bound,
And came again to the meadow
With pails heaped high with snow,
And so, through half the night, the moon
Beheld them come and go.

But when with the daybreak rose
The silver walls shone red,
The three little foolish maidens
Were lying cold and dead.
The needles of the frosts had sewed
Into shrouds their woolen coats,
And with cheeks as white as the ice they lay
Among their mountain goats.

A Rose of Jericho.

FRANCIS L. MACE.

"Why do you take my garden rose,
Still fresh and glowing from the vase,
And give a dry and withered stalk
My favorite's dewy place?"

"Lady," he said, "there came a day
When far across the burning plain
Slow crept, as hour by hour went by,
A winding camel train.

And none in all that wandering band
Who sought with me the Orient's shrine
Concealed beneath the pilgrim's garb
So sad a heart as mine.

But while with mournful thoughts I mused,
Light blown, as if from fairy bower,
Came fluttering o'er the yellow sand
To me this magic flower.

I knew its folded petals hid
The breath and bloom of other days,
And that some happier hour might give,
Its beauty to my gaze.

Through all the paths of Palestine,
And wide across the stormy sea,
My cherished rose of Jericho
I brought to home and thee.

And now the secret of my soul
I to the wizard rose have told,
And if to-morrow's light shall see
Its dusty scroll unrolled,

If light and bloom and odor come
Again as from a grave set free,
The rose of Jericho will tell
That secret wish to thee."

The morning beams; the lady steps,
Expectantly to her garden bower;
Behold the withered stem upholds
A rare, mysterious flower!

A subtle odor steals abroad;
The petals gleam with golden hue;
It is as if the wanderer's heart
Had opened to her view.

A step draws near; there is no need
For words to tell what roses know;
To utter love's own speech has flowered
The rose of Jericho.

Mine And Thine.

ANON.

Every wedding, says the proverb,
Makes another, soon or late;
Never yet was any marriage
Entered in the book of fate,
But the names were also written
Of the patient pair that wait.

Where will be the next occasion
For the flowers, the feast, the wine?
Thine, perchance my dearest lady;
Or, who knows, it may be mine,
What if 'twere—forgive the fancy—
What if 'twere both mine and thine?

THE SECURITY OF FAITH.

"Be like the bird one instant lighted,
Upon a twig that swings;
He feels it yield, yet swings on unaffrighted,
Knowing he has his wings."
—From the French of Victor Hugo.

GENERAL NOTES.

The hearing on the petition of the Revere Beach R. R. for leave to widen across the property of the Salem Savings Bank, formerly known as Breed's Wharf, was held before the County Commissioners at its West Lynn Station last Friday, and as no one appeared to oppose the petition the Commissioners informed the officers of the road that they would issue a decree granting the prayer of the petition, leaving the matter of damages to be adjusted between the parties in interest. It may have escaped the notice of some of our citizens that the Revere Beach road has lately acquired a majority interest in the Winthrop and Shore Railroad, and will assume the management of the same, beginning with this season. The latter road will be reconstructed so as to accommodate the entire shore travel from Crescent Beach to Point Shirley. The steamer which has plied between Boston and Point Shirley will not be put on the coming season. This will give considerable additional business to the Revere Beach road.—Lynn Transcript.

The Rev. Dr. A. P. Putnam has severed his pastoral relations with the Church of the Saviour, in Brooklyn, (Unitarian), where he has labored with great fidelity and success for nineteen years. Through overwork his health has been failing the last year or two, and not liking to be a burden to his congregation, on the 5th inst. he handed in his resignation to the trustees of the church. Dr. Putnam is 59 years of age; he is a son of the well-remembered Elias Putnam of Danvers.

The new double-draught soda fountain made by the famous Tufts for C. H. & J. Price is the admiration of soda lovers, and with its variegated marble trimmings, shining silver tubes, plate mirror and other necessary as well as ornamental appurtenances, is the embodiment of beauty and convenience. The body and wings are made of an ebony-like marble known as Belgian black, ornamented with gilt trimmings. The lower base band is reddish hue of the specie known as Graeote, and the top band is a Parian green. The base on which rests the two onyx pillars is of a tea color, known as Formosa. Between the pillars is set a magnificent plate glass mirror, while the whole is surmounted by a black and white African marble top piece. The blending of the different marbles is perfect and the effect in the evening, when the colored gas jets which overhang it, are lighted, is brilliant in the extreme. The interior arrangements are perfect. The syrups are drawn from glass tanks through tubes of the same material, so there is absolutely no danger of metallic contamination. The firm makes its own syrups and charges its own soda water. Fourteen syrups and three mineral waters, including the new Aperient water, entirely original with the Messrs. Price, are kept constantly on draught, and hundreds of thirsty mortals flock to the polished counter daily, to receive from the gentlemanly clerks the cooling beverages, at the same time pausing to admire the elegant marble structure from which they flow.

Mr. Harry A. M'Glenen, the popular advertising manager of the Boston & Hingham Steamboat Co., has assumed charge of his duties, and it is safe to say that he will make the line as popular as it has been in the past. The first regular trips of the season have already begun. Special trips will be run Saturday and Sunday.

A western college president advises parents "not to attempt to put a four thousand dollar education on a fifty cent boy." If not, why not? Put a fifty cent straw hat into the hands of the milliner and she will have no trouble in adding twenty-five dollars' worth of trimmings. A two dollar piece of ground may come to hold up a mansion worth half a million.—Milford Gazette.

W. D. Brown, No. 76 Market street, Lynn, is one of the largest dealers in pianos and organs in Lynn. He has an elegant store and keeps the best and standard makes, selling them on easy terms. He makes no charge for carting to Peabody, a consideration worthy of note. Call and see his stock of pianos.

Mrs. F. E. Varney, No. 49 Market street, Lynn, has the reputation of being an excellent milliner. Our readers are invited to call at her store when in Lynn.

Attention is invited to the advertisement of Battis' Modified Extract of Denicotized Tobacco. The stories of its curative powers are really marvellous, and they are vouched for by numbers of our own people who have experienced its beneficial effects. It is recommended for all kinds of rheumatic neuralgic and nervous pains and other diseases, and is claimed to be an almost universal panacea and to be perfectly harmless. The proprietor will be pleased to give any information about it, and to refer the doubting to numerous cases, here and abroad, which have established its efficacy. It has been upon the market but a short time, and the calls for it are rapidly increasing.

The fact that the trade in white lead and oil is decreasing yearly, and the sale of the Atlas ready mixed paint is increasing in a still greater proportion, would seem to be an excellent indorsement of the Atlas mixed paint. Perhaps the guarantee always given as to the quality of the paint may have something to do with the large sales. Messrs. J. A. & W. Bird & Co., who are the New England agents, have been successfully placing this paint on the market. The solid character of this standard firm precludes the idea that they would offer anything for sale not strictly first-class. At Samuel Trask & Son's may be seen a handsome portfolio of twenty-four plates, showing artistic designs of house colored to match the shade of their sample cards. As many are at a loss to know how to combine colors to give the best results these cards are of the greatest assistance to buyers. The portfolios should be examined carefully wherever they may be found.

Miss Nellie L. Stockwell informs us that never, since she has been in business in this town, has she had such a trade as during the past two weeks. Herself and assistants have been compelled to work late into the night to complete her orders. This is because she keeps an elegant line of Millinery Goods, her prices are right, she is very popular with the ladies, and because her advertisement in the PRESS has borne its legitimate fruit.

Parties who are about to visit Troy or Albany should take the Fitchburg express which leaves Boston via Hoosac Tunnel at 10.30 P. M., daily, Sundays excepted, and reaches Troy at 6.55. It is one of the most convenient trains running west from Boston, and has sleepers, coaches, baggage car, etc., through to Troy and Albany without change.

The North Woburn Street Railroad has been sold to a company of which Hon. A. F. Breed, of Lynn, is President. This move is believed to be the first for a line of street railway connecting either at Arlington or Medford with lines for Boston. The Stoneham Street Railway will make a connection with this line either at the junction of Salem street and Main or Montvale avenue and Main street. The Stoneham Company proposes to extend its tracks to Lynn this season.

"The Raymond," the new hotel which is being built by Mr. Raymond, the well known excursionist, at Psadena, California, will be finished and open to the public Nov. 1. It will be under the management of Mr. C. H. Merrill, well known to all White Mountain visitors as the popular landlord of the famous Crawford House. His management is sure to popularize "The Raymond."

Pike's corner, in Lynn, is a very noted place among lovers of a good cigar. His cigars are found in the stores in this vicinity, as he is a large manufacturer, and are as good as the best. Ask your dealer for them, and if in Lynn stop and try them. See his advertisement.

Most people do not appreciate the moral work done by teachers in the term, quite apart from any work in books and lessons. The "course of study" is changed from year to year, and we hope it is improving, because gradually more attention is given to the kind of instruction needed by the children. But after all, it is their daily intercourse with refined and conscientious teachers which really educates the children, and it is of far more importance than any technical system pursued. Did you ever think of that?

The name of J. E. Hodgkins No. 22 Market street, Lynn, is not unfamiliar to our readers. Their line of boots and shoes, both for ladies and gents wear, in all grades, is complete, and the prices are way down. Horse cars pass the door. Try this firm when in Lynn.

Messrs. D. B. H. Power & Co., the popular Marblehead house furnishers, whose advertisement regularly appears in the PRESS, have recently opened a branch store at Salem. This has been rendered necessary by their increasing Essex County trade.

The Naumkeag Street Railway Company is rapidly pushing its track to Asbury Grove. It has forty men at work and expects to have the cars running to the Grove by June 1. The road to Chapman's Corner, Beverly Cove, it is hoped to have open at the same time. The company has purchased land of Leslie E. Libby at Wenham so that its track will not be obliged to cross the Boston & Maine Railroad twice, but will run through this land.

A lecturer recently stated at a spiritualist meeting in New Bedford that newspapers would be published in the spirit world just the same as they are here. If this is so, the Star will not prove an exception to the rule, and those who wish to anticipate that time by paying a few years' subscription in advance, (insuring no stoppage of their paper) are cordially invited to hand in the amount and take a receipt.—Fairhaven Star.

ESSEX SS. PROBATE COURT

To the Heirs-at-law, Next of Kin, and all other Persons interested in the Estate of PHILIP H. SAUNDERS, late of Peabody, in said county, deceased, GREETING:

WHEREAS, a certain instrument purporting to be the last will and testament of said deceased has been presented to said Court for Probate by Elizabeth Saunders who prays that letters testamentary may be issued to her the executrix therein named and that she may be exempt from giving a surety or sureties on her bond, for the reasons alleged in said petition. You are hereby cited to appear at a Probate Court to be held at Salem, in said county of Essex, on the third Monday of May, next, at nine o'clock, before noon, to show cause, if any you have, against the same.

And said Elizabeth Saunders is hereby directed to give public notice thereof, by publishing this citation once a week, for three successive weeks in the newspaper called the Peabody Press, printed at Peabody, the last publication to be two days at least before said Court.

Witness, George F. Choate, Esquire, Judge of said Court, this twenty-third day of April, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty-six.

SHREWD BUYERS, ATTENTION!

We are retailing

BOOTS AND SHOES

Of every conceivable description at

WHOLESALE PRICES,

L. CUNNINGHAM.

A few Reasons why we can UNDERSELL all our competitors.

1st—We manufacture and buy in large quantities from first hands for cash strictly thereby getting the benefit of all discounts.
2nd—Our long experience of nearly a quarter of a century, enables us to buy that which is the best suited to the trade
3rd—Our store is situated about 150 yards east of Washington street, which brings us just outside the High Rent limit, whereby we make a saving in this one item alone of at least $1000, a year. These facts with others enable us to sell with such low figures, as to defy all competition.

A FEW OF OUR PRICES:

Ladies genuine French Kid Button Boots, only $3; sold everywhere for $4.50. Ladies Fine Curocoa Kid Button boots, fine style, $2, actually worth $3. Ladies Kid Button boots, Mat kid tops, $1.25; would be considered a bargain at $2. Ladies Congress Boots, single or double soles, hand sewed, 75c. Misses Grain Button Boots, solid leather, a splendid school boot, only $1. Child's Grain Button Boots, solid, sizes 8 to 10 1-2, only 75c. Men's fine Calf Boots, single or tap soles, only $2. Space will not admit further enumeration. We would be pleased to have you inspect our goods.

We are agents for the "Douglas $3 Shoes" in Salem and vicinity.

MUSICAL NOTES.

The exhibition June 17th, by the children of our public schools, will take place on the afternoon of June 17th. The Centre, Wallis and Bowditch schools will have a holiday, holding two sessions on the day previous which is Wednesday. Such an exhibition of the proficiency of the scholars in music, will do good. Our neighboring city of Salem will have such an exhibition the same day. Boston has, for years, given such an exhibition. We have good reason to believe that those who are not acquainted with the progress made in this branch, in our schools, since Prof. Bill has directed the music, will be surprised at the result.

You were rather late on that Agawam march, John; that march was dedicated a year ago.—Cor. Telegram.

Never mind: so long as we got it. Perhaps there will be another one soon. Keep us posted.

Selections from the Mikado will be given in Plummer Hall to-morrow and Friday evening, by members of the Salem Schubert club. It is not pretended that the presentation there will equal that of the companies of John Stetson, but the interest attaching to the performance by members of the club, who have many friends, should ensure a good house both evenings. We believe it will and we understand that the club need a little addition to their fund to meet the expenses of the season.

The Yum-Yum of Miss Geraldine Ulmer, last week, at the Hollis street Theatre in Boston, was one of the most finished performances we have seen in that part. The entire performance moved with smoothness and evenness which is unusual even after long representation.

The last of a series of three concerts, by the Salem Cadet Band, in the new Academy Hall, Salem, was given last Saturday. We trust they have been a financial success. The attendance has steadly increased, and the possibilities of that Band, in a string performance, have been shown as never before. We hope this is but a beginning of something more in the same line. If the people of Salem and vicinity would encourage Mr. Missud in a series of such orchestral concerts, so that he could add occasionally a vocalist, who would add variety to the concert, it would be very satisfactory. The reputation of this Band abroad is constantly increasing—and there is a demand for their services far beyond anything in the past history of the organization.

The Musical Record (Boston, $1 a year) has for music a quartet in D minor, "Pray also Thou," by J. Rheinberger, words by Mrs. L. T. Craigin; "Floating on the Breath of Evening," by John McPherson; and "The Shepherd's Song," for piano or organ, by Fritz Spindler, Op. 258. There is a good amount of interesting reading, including articles on Voice Culture, German Song, Chinese Music, etc.

Andrew Fitz, of Salem, sang at the Unitarian church, in this town, last Sunday.

E. V. Emilio begins his labors as organist and director of the choir of St. Peter's church in Salem, next Sunday.

The South Church, of this town, have adopted Dr. Robinson's Hymn Book, No. 2, for use in their social meetings.

Mrs. Jacobs, formerly soprano of the Baptist choir in Danversport, is organist at the Baptist church here, taking Mrs. Foote's place.

The closing concert of the Salem Symphony Club will be given in Academy Hall, May 18. A few evening tickets can be obtained of O. W. H. Upham.

The music at an Easter Concert at the Seamen's Bethel, in Salem, given last Sunday, was under the direction of Theodore M. Osborne, Esq., formerly of this town.

At the annual meeting of the Salem Oratorio Society, the following directors were re-elected: William Agge, Thomas M. Stimpson (of Peabody), George A. Shepard, Andrew Fitz, Jose Margati, Charles. W. W. Ward, Frank A. Brown, and Misses A. F. Perkins, S. E. Hunt, and S. H. Heywood (of Beverly. The following figures regarding the expenses attendant upon the Concerts of this Society are interesting: The balance of money on hand at the beginning of the year was $101.26; amount received from interest, $6.50; net receipts of fair, $1210.53 total receipts for year $1318.29. The cost of rehearsals over membership fees was $157.86; cost of first concert over receipts, $118.25; cost of second concert over receipts $236.56; making the total expenditures $512.67 This leaves a balance on hand of $805.62

A testimonial concert to Miss Sopha C. Hall was given in Chickering Hall, Boston, last evening. Miss Hall, it will be remembered, sang in the Institute at Mr. Macgregor's concert, and has been heard in Salem several times, and always with pleasure. She had the assistance, last evening, of Miss Clara A. Hunt, soprano, Mrs. Alma-Faunce Smith, pianist and accompanist, F. C. Record, violinist, the Oxford Male quartette, and the Beacon quartette. The programme was very interesting and well rendered; the work of Miss Hall herself being the best of all. Her rendering of "Because of thee," was a fine performance, and she was enthusiastically applauded. Mr. Record played artistically and finely. Mr. Saxon gave a capital rendering of Leonore, a piece especially composed for him, and the Beacon mixed quartette sang two selections very harmoniously. It was, altogether, a very enjoyable concert, and we hope it was of financial benefit to Miss Hall, who is a deserving artist.

At the services in St. John's Church, Trinity Sunday, the choir will again be assisted by Mrs. E. R. Bigelow and F. C. Record of Salem.

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M]

This week will present the most interesting dramatic entertainment of this generation, the joint appearance of the greatest actors of this age, Salvini and Booth. Performances will be given Wednesday and Friday evenings, and Saturday afternoon. Othello will be presented at three performances, and on Friday evening Hamlet will have a single performance. The company to support the two stars includes Alessandro Salvini, Mrs. D P. Bowers, Marie Wainwright, Barton Hill, G. W. Wilson, John A. Lane, C. W. Couldock, and others. Mr. Booth's Hamlet and Iago, and the Signor's Othello, are familiar personations, but much curiosity is expressed to see Salvini's rendering of the ghost. The New York and Philadelphia papers speak in the highest praise of it. The following is from the New York World: "Salvini was the ghost of Hamlet's father last night. Though but a short time on the stage and with comparatively few lines to speak, he greatly strengthened the performance of Mr. Booth himself and gave the play a force and completeness that no one can realize without seeing him. The ghost scene was profoundly impressive. Salvini was himself. yet the impersonation was wonderful. He carried with him his own wonderful voice and his own remarkable personal vitality. The ghost was a majestic force, whether speaking or silent, whether moving or standing still, and the memory of it remained throughout the play, not only in the mind of Hamlet but in the mind of the audience. It is not too much to say that Hamlet was never before so well presented in New York."

Mrs. Tryphena Puffy has become a greater favorite with the theatre goers of our city than even the Widow Bedott ever was. She is simply immense, carrying her crowds of friends at the Bijou along in the jolliest frame of mind, and keeping them bubbling over with laughter in spite of themselves. In the delineation of this robust New England farmer's wife, Mr. Burgess has achieved a rare artistic triumph, and he is admirably supported by his entire company. The circus scene, with the flying horse on the revolving stage, is as attractive as it is novel.

William Redmund and Mrs. Thomas Barry, both established favorites in Boston, appear the coming week on the Boston Museum stage in the latest success of their repertory. Adolphe Challet is an adaptation from the French. It has been received with much favor in Providence and elsewhere. The scene is laid in Paris.

As the closing event of the Redmund-Barry engagement of the week at the Boston Museum, a complimentary testimonial is to be given to Mrs. Thomas Barry. The bill for the occasion will be uncommonly attractive. Planche's comedietta, Faint Heart Never Won Fair Lady, and the romantic drama, Ruy Blas, are announced. Mr. William Redmund, as well as Mrs. Barry, will appear in both plays, and for each a strong cast is promised.

Pepita, the reigning lyric success at the Union Square Theatre, will come to the Hollis Street after the run of the Drum Major's Daughter. Lillian Russell and all the company are to appear, and the opera will have the original costumes and effects.

John T. Raymond will begin a fortnight's engagement at the Museum, May 17. It will be the first season of the favorite comedian at this theatre, and he will be supported by the regular stock company. Colonel Mulberry Sellers and Fresh, the American, will be the repertory.

In Harbor Lights, which is to open the season at the Museum, August 30, Mr. E. H. Vanderfelt will assume the role created in London by Wm. Terriss, while the part taken by Jessie Millward will be given Isabel Everson, who has had the advantage of seeing the original performance in London many times.

"My physician said I could not live! My liver out of order, frequently vomited greenish mucous, skin yellow, small dry humors on face, stomach would not retain food. Burdock Blood Bitters cured me." Mrs. Adelaide O'Brien, 372 Exchange St., Buffalo, N. Y.

Bitter Bread.—Complaint is frequently made by those who use baking powders that they leave in bread, biscuit, or cake raised by them a disagreeable, bitter taste. This taste follows the use of all impure baking powders, and is caused either by their containing alum (introduced to make a cheap article,) by the impure and adulterated character of other ingredients used, or from the ignorance of their manufactures of the proper methods of combining them. These baking powders leave in the bread a residuum of lime, earth, alum, or other deleterious matters, not always, though frequently, tastable in the food, and by all physicians classed as injurious to health. The Royal Baking Powder is free from this serious defect. In its use no residuum is left, and the loaf raised by it is always sweet, light and wholesome, and noticeably free from the peculiar taste complained of. The reason of this is because it is composed of nothing but absolutely pure materials, scientifically combined in exactly the proper proportions of acid and alkali to act upon and destroy each other, while producing the largest amount of raising power. We are justified in this assertion from the unqualified statements made by the Government chemists, who after thorough and exhaustive tests recommended the "Royal" for Governmental use because of its superiority over all others in purity, strentgh and wholesomeness. There is no danger of bitter bread or biscuit where it alone is used.

A Great Victory

A Terrible Case of Scrofula Cured by

Hood's Sarsaparilla

"In the winter of 1879 I was attacked with Scrofula in one of the most aggravating forms. At one time I had no less than thirteen large abscesses over and around my neck and throat, continually exuding an offensive mass of bloody matter disgusting to behold, and almost intolerable to endure. It is impossible to fully describe my sufferings, as the case was complicated with Chronic Catarrh. After three years of misery, having been treated by three physicians, I was worse than ever. Finally, on the recommendation of W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, I was induced to try Hood's Sarsaparilla. And now, after having taken twelve bottles, within the last twelve months, the scrofulous eruptions have entirely ceased, and the abscesses have all disappeared, except the unsightly scars, which are daily becoming 'smaller by degrees, and beautifully less.' I do not know what it may have done for others, but I do know that in my case, Hood's Sarsaparilla has proved an effective specific indeed. As an evidence of my gratitude I send these facts unsolicited, and I am ready to verify the authenticity of this cure, by personal correspondence with any one who doubts it." Charles A. Roberts, East Wilson, N. Y.

This statement is confirmed by W. J. Huntley, druggist, of Lockport, N. Y., who calls the cure a great victory for Hood's Sarsaparilla. Send for book giving statements of many cures.

JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THE REPORT of the treasurer of the Salem Oratorio Society is worthy of attention—especially at the hands of those who are interested in musical work in this vicinity. The special work which this Society is doing needs no explanation here. Its performances have been, in every respect, equal to those of the Handel & Haydn Society in Boston. It is a simple matter for the general attendant to purchase his ticket, listen to the concert, and go away satisfied and instructed. But it is not so easy a matter to bring about all these results. The report of the treasurer tells a story to which we desire to call attention, briefly.

It will be seen that the loss to the Society at the first Concert, St. Paul, was $118.25; at the second, $236.56; that the cost of rehearsals over membership fees was $157.86. The balance on hand at the beginning of the year was about $100. So that, if it had not been for the money raised by the fair last year, the Society would have been some $400 out of pocket. This in a city of the musical reputation of Salem with the tributaries of the surrounding towns!

It is evident, therefore, that the Society could not, and cannot, prosecute its musical work without aid from outside, either by a fair or some entertainment other than the usual Concerts. The reason for this is well enough understood by those interested, and is chiefly the expense from importation of soloists and instrumental performers, which have been, in the past, the best the Society could obtain. To do less than this were to lower the standard which has obtained, and to popularize the selections which could be brought out, possibly, at a less expense, would also weaken the prestige and reputation of the Society.

The main difficulty, we apprehend, is a lack of real interest in the Society solely for the work it is doing. The people are interested in the concerts, so far as they believe they will be first class and of interest to them personally. The Society has also to contend with the disadvantages of Mechanic Hall as a place for their concerts. The patrons of this Society go there under protest and the same may be said of the officers who use the hall. But it is that, or nothing at present. If, now, the people of Salem and vicinity were sufficiently alive to the work of the Society to patronize it, per se, a possibility might suggest itself of making expenses meet. If the Society could be allowed to give an occasional repetition of works with which the chorus is familiar, at a popular price, and at less expense for soloists and orchestra; if the people would patronize a first class entertainment or concert, for their benefit, as an assistance to the Society and to art itself,—if these things could be satisfactorily accomplished, the depletion of the treasury might not be so marked. But experience does not point to success in any of these lines.

At the last Concert, for instance, suppose the orchestra had been made up, largely, from the Orchestra of the Salem Cadet Band. Suppose the solo work in the "Hear our Prayer" or "Redemption Hymn" had been entrusted to local soloists, and that the entire Concert had been from selections similar to the two mentioned, in which the solos could have been rendered by such soloists. Does any one doubt that the Society would have given a satisfactory and, musically considered, good performance? But the people would not, it has been believed, patronize it. It is the Concert itself, not the work of the Society, in which interest is manifest.

What is needed is a revival of interest in this Society. Its entire work should be sustained, and encouragement given the officers to do what seems best to them, without relying upon this or that artist of reputation to draw an audience. Many things might thus be done, without lowering the standard of music by the Society, of considerable pecuniary advantage to the treasury.

THE RIOTS and bloodshed in Chicago and Milwaukee are to be regretted by all who have the interests of this country, as well as the cause of labor at heart. The freedom of our laws give an opportunity for the development of socialistic tendencies, and their result has been seen the past week.

Mob law cannot be allowed to obtain supremacy in this country, and the promptness of the authorities in Chicago, and elsewhere, in dispersing the rioters, even at the point of the bayonet, must be commended. It is the one thing to do. A volley from disciplined troops, at the risk, even, of the injury of innocent persons, at the outset of the trouble, is the only means of teaching such hot headed leaders that the supremacy of law must be maintained.

Following closely after the labor troubles in other parts of the country; intimately connected with strikes in the cities where the riots occurred, it is to be expected that the organization of the Knights of Labor will be considered, in many quarters, responsible. It behooves that body, therefore, to boldly disclaim all fellowship with and countenance of such scenes as have disgraced the West.

To some extent this has been done. We believe the sentiment of that organization is in harmony with the enforcement of the laws. It does not uphold violence—but condemns it. Yet in the rapid growth of the Knights of Labor, it must be remembered that all of its members will not be guided by the judgment which Mr. Powderly seems to possess. Passion and not reason will control its members. The disastrous results of this has already been seen, and regretted, we think, by none more than the thoughtful leaders of that Body.

But the Knights of Labor, at the present juncture, should go farther. They should not only openly condemn acts of violence, but they should expel from their membership those who are found guilty of such acts. They should proclaim to the world their adherence to the laws of the land. They should be ready to assist in their enforcement and put under their ban all offenders. Want of promptness and firmness in vindicating what we believe are the principles of this order, have, we doubt not, strengthened the hands of those, who under the guise of friends, have done their best to injure the Order, as well as the community at large.

The right of laboring men, or any other body of men, to organize for their mutual benefit, has never been denied. But when any organization takes the law into its own hands, when it expects to enforce its demands by violence, by destruction of buildings or by threats and intimidation, it will fail and ought to fail. We do not say the Knights of Labor expect to succeed by such methods. On the contrary, the words of Mr. Powderly and other cool headed representatives give the assurance that they rely for the accomplishment of their aims, upon reason and obedience to the laws. In the light of the disturbances of the week, they should make this position, if correct, plainly and clearly manifest. It should be boldly stated—openly proclaimed, and adherence to it insisted on, under penalty of disfellowship with the order.

IT IS reported by the New York Sun that an attempt will be made to displace Mr. Powderly as General Master Workman of the Knights of Labor, and elect Martin Irons in his stead. These are evidences of a want of harmony in the Order; for these two men represent entirely different principles. One believes in no arbitrary methods, in accomplishing results by reason, by organization and by education; the other, if we read aright, would adopt any methods, violent or otherwise, rather than fail in every undertaking. The Organization will not displace Mr. Powderly, if they wish the welfare of that body. Pertinent to his retention is a extract from a recent letter to the Assemblies which has just been given to the public.

We have been losing ground, so far as public opinion is concerned, for some time. One of the causes is that we have allowed things to be done under the name of the Knights of Labor for which the organization was in no way responsible. I ask of our members to keep a jealous eye upon the doings of the labor men who never labor, and when they charge anything to our order in your locality, set the seal of your condemnation upon it at once by denying it. If a paper criticises the Knights of Labor or its officers, do not boycott it, and if you have any such boycotts on remove them. A journal not long since made some uncomplimentary allusion to the general master workman of the Knights of Labor, and at the next meeting of the nearest assembly a motion was passed to boycott the paper; not that alone, but every person who advertised in columns of the paper. I wrote to the assembly asking that they remove the boycott, and it was done. Let me direct your attention to a few little abuses. I find that wherever a strike occurs appeals for aid are scattered broadcast among the assemblies. Do not pay one cent for such purposes in future, unless the appeal comes from your own district assembly or the general assembly. If boycott notices are sent to you burn them. Our order has been used as a tail for a hundred different kites, and in future it must soar aloft, free from all of them. I hate the word boycott. I was boycotted ten years ago, and could not get work at my trade for months. It is a bad practice; it has been handed to us by the capitalists. I have no use for it only when everything else fails."

IT IS of very little matter now what Jeff Davis may say, but it is of some moment how his remarks are received. It has been stated often by the democratic orators that the South had accepted the result of the war in good faith. With this statement we are inclined, in the main, to agree. But when such speeches as Davis is making are received with the enthusiasm stated by the dispatches, when all the old emnity of the South to the Union is appealed to, when the right of secession is vindicated by Davis and applauded by the assembled multitude, it is to be expected that there will be some doubt expressed of the truth of this assertion.

Such a stirring up of sectional feeling is sorely to be deprecated by all parties. It cannot fail to be of injury to South and North. The veterans of the G. A. R. are inclined to forgive their old enemies, when they accept the results of the war, but they cannot forget the bitter memories. Disruption of the Union would be met now, as then, by an instant response in arms. No one can object to the reception of Davis by the people of the South, if it is any gratification to him. But the North does object, and they have a right to object to such sentiments as have been proclaimed and applauded to the echo during the past week.

SOUTH PEABODY.

A meeting was held last Friday evening in this place to consider the practicability of establishing a shoe factory in this part of the town. The matter was brought about something in this wise: two men who had been in the employ of Shaw Bros. for sixteen years or more had been promised the assistance of Mr. Warren Shaw of this town in establishing a shoe business whenever they should find a favorable opportunity and location. The matter of building such a factory in South Peabody was considered between the parties interested, and Mr. Stanley, one of the gentlemen, desired to meet the shoemakers residing in this portion of the town, most of whom now work in the Lynn shops, to talk over the project and see upon what terms the men would be willing to work here, in case a favorable decision should be reached. This was the origin of the informal gathering. Mr. Stanley submitted to the men a proposition to accept a price list which should be 20 per cent. less than that paid in Lynn, and this proposition the workmen are now considering.

The matter of a shoe manufactory here is of great interest. It would be an advantage to the town and the workmen. Many of them work in Lynn, and in order to make a day's work must leave home early and return late. Then if they have a portion of a day's work there, which must be done at the time desired, they are often compelled to remain in Lynn all day—the expense of going and coming being as much as if they had a day's work. All these things would be obviated by the establishment of a business here, giving employment to men and women in the shoe trade. The projectors of the enterprise realize the necessity of the cooperation of the workmen, and while it is not expected that all the shoemakers would leave jobs in Lynn, to work here, it is desired that there shall be a harmony of feeling between the men, provided an opportunity is given the men to work here.

The feeling among the men seems to be that they can not afford to work for twenty per cent. less than the Lynn list. Yet it is to be borne in mind that the list in Lynn is 20 per cent. higher than is paid in Haverhill for the same work, and while the difference in fare is not as much as that between South Peabody and Lynn, the time which the workmen would have would be of considerable value to them. The employes in Lynn do not have work all the time—neither could it be guaranteed here, we presume. But there is unquestionably a decrease in the amount of business done in Lynn at the present time, caused by the labor troubles and the difference in the price lists of that city. If this continues, and it is said to be impossible in country places, where there are large factories, to raise the lists to conform to Lynn, it is likely to be duller in Lynn rather than more prosperous.

There are items of expense in a shoe factory outside of a general shoe center, like Lynn, which do not obtain there. Shoe findings and material, which can be purchased in Lynn, are delivered at the factories free. There are better opportunities for shipment and reception of goods in Lynn than there would be in South Peabody, therefore the expense in a factory in Lynn is less than it would be here, to a manufacturer. He could not afford to pay the same prices here as in Lynn; it would be better for him to start a factory there.

These things are to be considered by the workmen, and especially by those who are residents of a town. An addition of a factory in South Peabody would mean an increased demand for rents, for houses to rent, and an increase in the value of property. It would add to the town an industry which might be a nucleus for others, and build up South Peabody as a shoe town. We understand that the only thing in the way of the undertaking is the agreement on the price to be paid for labor. Both sides are willing to make concessions, and we trust some harmonious understanding may be reached. It would be a benefit to all, in many ways, if such could be the case.

The funeral of the late John A. Messer, of the Salem Cadet Band, took place last Friday afternoon from the residence of his father, A. A. Messer, Esq., of this town. Rev. F. W. Sprague, of the Universalist church, officiated. The Cadet Band were present and accompanied the remains to the grave where a dirge was played. The floral tributes were very beautiful, the offering of the Band being a harp with broken string with the letters "S. C. B." in immortelles. The Salem Cadets sent a large crescent with the word "Cadets" in immortelles. The body was interred in the family lot at Monumental Cemetery, and large numbers of his old friends and associates paid a tribute to his grave last Sunday.

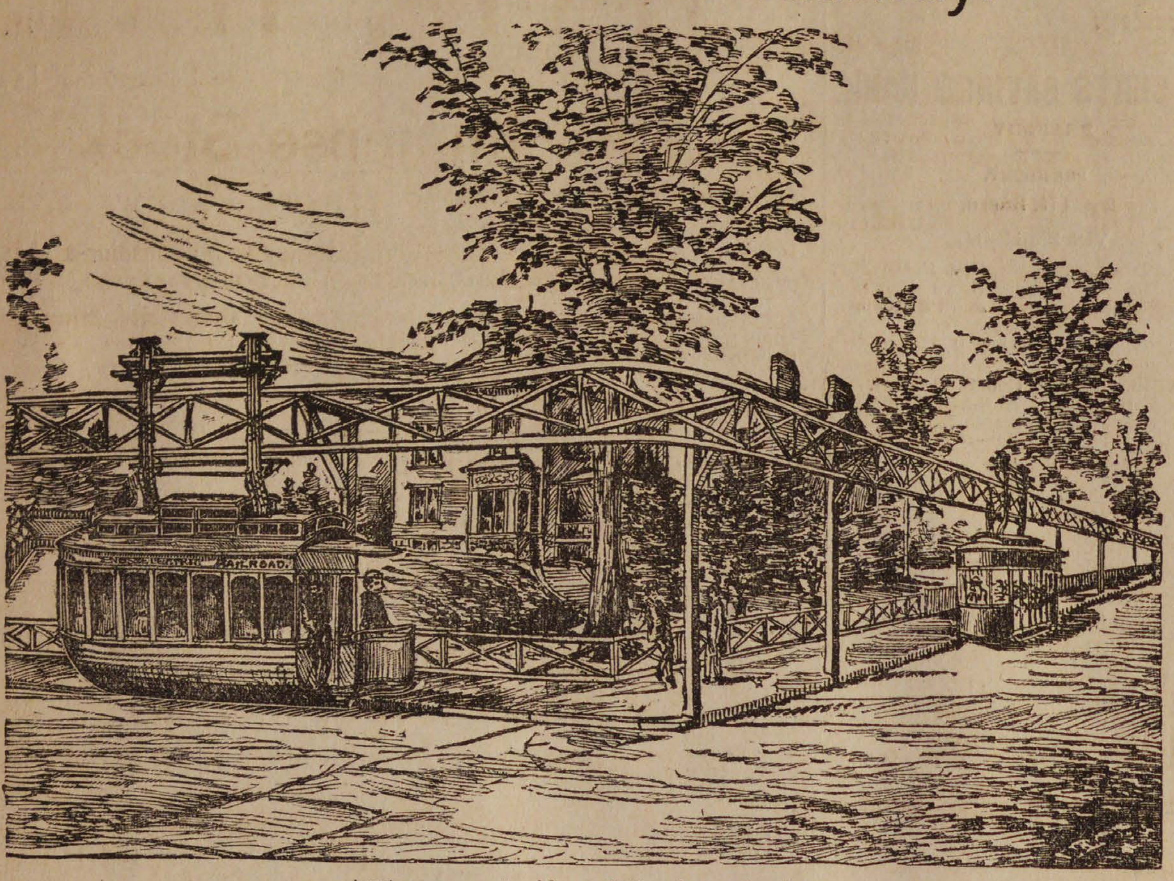
The Enos Electric Railway.



The location of the Enos Electric Railroad, of which mention has been made in the PRESS before, and in which a large number of our towns people are interested, is at Greenville, N. J., a small summer resort about twenty minutes ride from New York City. In company with the Manager of the company, Mr. O. A. Foster, and a large party of interested people we visited the place this week. The track is constructed at the Daft Electric Light Company's Works, about a mile from the railroad station. The reason for locating the road here was that it was more central for New York capitalists and Western people who are interested in the invention.

Mr. Daft has here a large manufactory for the manufacturing of electric motors of his peculiar style. Here is a large machine shop and foundry, and the place is surrounded on one side with several miles of wire used in all kinds of experiments. Besides the Enos road, they have on hand atthe present time an electric railroad for the transportation of ores from mines, using electricity and a cable. He also has a small electric railroad for his own use similar to the one that was operated at the Point of Pines last summer. It is a small surface road with a third rail in the center, and it gives the impression that electricity will be the coming motive power. As we approach the place we see in the distance the large trestle work of the Enos Electric Railroad, and as we draw nearer learn that this work starts on about 200 feet of level ground, and then there is 240 feet on a grade of 175 feet to the mile. Leaving the enclosed yards of the Daft works, it crosses the street to a grove beyond. Further on is a sharp curve on the same upward grade of about 60 feet radius, and thence to the top of a steep hill at a grade of 400 feet tothe mile, making a little more than an eighth of a mile and containing as many difficult places as a road would ever be apt to encounter. There are two kinds of trestle work showing what would be required for heavy and light freights. The posts of the heavy are 16x16 and made of hard pine on which rests a single truss of the same material. The posts of the lighter structure are 10x14, and this section is similar to what it is proposed to put in at Winthrop. The iron rails, which are the conductors for the electricity, are located one above and one below being about four feet apart. The accompanying cut will show the location of the car on the rails.

By following our description on the cut an accurate idea of the invention can be obtained. The electric motors are four in number and are placed each side of the bearing wheels, being directly on their axles. The car is suspended by means of supporting rods, with the upper frame work in such a way as to get an even bearing on both sides of the bearing wheels, and this bearing rests on strong springs which give an easy motion to the car.

On the lower rail runs guide wheels, connected with the supporting rods for the purpose of keeping the car in position in going around curves and during high winds; it also makes it impossible to derail the car. There are eight rods running from the supporting rods to the outside edge of the car to control the swinging motion of it. This car, unlike others, is strongest at the top, having a steel ridge connected with eight steel bands, which run between the windows completely encircling it.

The car is of the ordinary horse car size except a rounding bottom which gives it a boat shaped appearance and is capable of seating twenty-two people. The driver controls the car at either platform by means of switches which are connected by wires to the motors above. These are very simple, although a wonderful contrivance, and allow the driver to have it completely under his control at all times.

The interior of the car is very elaborate. The painted work is pure white tinted with gold and the roof is paneled with gilt molding. The upholstery for the seats and backs is in peacock blue plush; the strap supporting rods and brackets are of polished brass. These combined with the extra large plate glass windows make a very pleasing effect. The doors also have large plate glass panels with the monogram of the company upon them. The outside of the car below the windows is covered with rattan work of novel design, painted in delicate shades. In the centre of each side is a large brass plate bearing the name of our well known townsman and retired business man, A. A. Messer. A ride in the car convinced us by its various speeds and stoppages not only of the practicability of the Enos system, but that electricity is the coming motive power. One scarcely realizes that they are in a railroad car, so easily does it glide along.

Of course everything is new and there is more or less friction and rough places to smooth down, but all who have watched the invention from its infancy and have had confidence to put their time and money into it, must be more than pleased at the rapid strides that have been made, till it seems that perfection must now be reached. Even the inventor, when he first put his ideas from paper into practical shape in the old barn of Mr. C. W. Osborn in the rear of the PRESS office, had only an idea of a railroad suitable for a summer resort, or, we might say, a large toy. The many details of the present structure were worked out with a deal of labor, and designed to combine cheapness and durability. As the motive power is electricity, the same power is used for lighting the car, and the use of kerosene lamps is done away with. This road can be used as above or as an elevated one. The trestle work is so light that abuttors along the line would experience no inconvenience, and a person can step from the car to the sidewalk without having to enter the middle of the street. As a whole the road contains many advantages not afforded by any other system, and we hope to see before another year passes a number of lines of the ENOS ELECTRIC RAILWAY in successful operation.

There was not so large a party that went on last night as was expected. The bad weather as well as business engagements detained many. But those who participated were well provided for on the staunch steamer Bristol of the Fall River Line. Every want was catered to and all were unanimous in pronouncing it one of the pleasantest trips imaginable. They will return on the palatial steamer Pilgrim of this same line. This is one of the finest boats in the world, being finished in delicate shades of rare wood and gold. It is lighted with the Edison incandescent light and each stateroom is supplied with electric bells. Many of the staterooms are large and supplied with bedsteads, making it difficult for one to believe they are on ship board instead of their own homes.

Among those present and well known in this vicinity were the President of the company, Matthew Robinson of Quincy with his wife, Mr. O. A. Foster the business manager, and wife, the treasurer, Mr. Clarence Messer, Frank E. Farnham, Esq., and wife, Simon P. Buxton and wife, Warren Wilson, Jr., Samuel P. Messer, Daniel Woodbury, Dr. C. S. Wright and wife, Albert Wagner, W. C. Nichols and wife, Frank White and wife of Beverly, John S. Faxon, Charles Howe, Esq., of Cambridge, Geo. E. Messer of Lynn, Mr. Goodsoe of Kittery, Me., W. E. Plummer of Boston, W. C. Otis of Nahant, Alonzo Kent, Geo. P. Banchor and John Bailey of Topsfield, besides a number from Brockton, Taunton, Winthrop and Nahant.

Daniel Sweeney, living on Spring street, while climbing a fence, yesterday, lacerated one of his hands so badly that several stitches had to be taken.

Last Wednesday afternoon and evening was held the annual sale of the Morning Star Mission Circle in the vestry of the South church. In the evening there were musical selections and recitations by the children, and the missionary jugs were broken. They contained $1300. Reports of the secretary and treasurer were also read.

A man went into the shoe shop of Benjamin Bishop on Grove street, yesterday morning and exchanged an old pair of shoes he was wearing, for a pair that had just been tapped, and got away with them before Mr. Flint, who was the only one in the shop, could prevent him. The police are on the track.

John S. Prince, of the State Board of Education, has been in town for several days, investigating the work of the schools in town. He will meet the teachers of the Grammar schools in the School Committee room in the Town House, Thursday afternoon, and of the primary schools Friday forenoon.

Short services were held at the late residence of James S. Paul, last Friday forenoon, after which the remains were taken to Eliot, Maine, for interment. Brothers Geo. B. Miller, N G., and Theodore P. Teague, S. S. Littlefield, Geo. H. Manning, Ezra H. Shannon and Wm. A. Saunders accompanied the remains as delegates from Holten Lodge I. O. O. F.

The Peabody base ball club has been organized, and the personel of the team is as follows: M. McCarty and Monahan, catchers; McCarty and Greenholgh, pitchers; Graves, 1st base; Shorter, 2d base; Leighton, 3d base; Frame, short top; Hardy, left field; Crowley, center field and Shehan right field. Communications should be addressed to John J. Cahill.

The Naumkeag Street Railway Company have received about forty new horses from the firm of Abbott & Reynolds of Salem. These horses were purchased by Mr. Abbott during his recent western trips and are a fine lot of animals. A hundred new horses at least will be required by the new extension of the road. It is rumored that the fare to Wenham will be ten cents and to Asbury fifteen. Besides the new cars received this week, the company has two nearly completed at its shops.

The Master Builder's Association has organized with John Pollock, of Salem, as President; Levi Spaulding, Peabody, Vice President; William G. Hammond, of Salem, Secretary; Geo L. Upton, of Salem, Treasurer; Benjamin Becket of Peabody, James Balcomb of Salem, James Foster of Danvers, Jeremiah Foster of Beverly, J. G. Broughton of Marblehead, Directors.

The annual meeting of the Essex Institute, in Salem, will be held at the rooms in Plummer Hall, Monday evening, May 17th, at 7.30 o'clock. The ninth art exhibition by this Society will be given June 1st. It will be confined to paintings in oil, water colors, charcoals, etc., by artists and amateurs in Salem and vicinity. Contributions must be sent to the rooms of the Institute before May 26.

We hope the Lynn Horse R. R. Co. will put on an 8 o'clock A. M. car from Peabody, during the summer. It will be a great accommodation. As it is now, it is impossible to get to Boston Sunday morning in time for church service there, without walking to Salem, as none of the lines run out of the town early enough. The travel would not be large on that car, but it would be appreciated by lots of people during the summer.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Copartnerships

having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will de doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal property can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

YOUR HAIR

should be your crowning glory. Ayer's Hair Vigor will restore the vitality and color of youth to hair that has become thin and faded; and, where the glands are not decayed or absorbed, will cause a new growth on bald heads.

MAY the youthful color and vigor of the hair be preserved to old age? Read the following, from Mrs. G. Norton, Somerville, Mass.: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the past 30 years, and, although I am upwards of 60, my hair is as abundant and glossy to-day as when I was 25."

BE assured, that a trial of Ayer's Hair Vigor will convince you of its powers. Mrs. M. E. Goff, Leadville, Col., writes: "Two years ago, my hair having almost entirely fallen out, I commenced the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor. To-day my hair is 29 inches long, fine, strong, and healthy."

RENEWED and strengthened by the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, the hair regains its youthful color and vitality. Rev. H. P. Williamson, Davidson College, Mecklenburg Co., N. C., writes: "I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor for the last ten years. It is an excellent preservative."

BY the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor, Geo. A. Dadman, Waterloo, Mo., had his hair restored to its original healthy condition. He was nearly bald, and very gray. He writes: "Only four bottles of the Vigor were required to restore my hair to its youthful color and quantity."

USING Ayer's Hair Vigor cures diseases of the scalp. F. H. Foster, Princeton, Ind., writes: "I had been troubled for years with a disease of the scalp; my head was covered with dandruff, and the hair dry and harsh. Ayer's Hair Vigor gave me immediate relief, cleansed the scalp, and rendered the hair soft and pliable."

HOW BANANAS ARE RAISED.

As everybody knows who has eaten a banana, the luscious pulp is seedless. The plants are propagated from other plants, so that the stock is not likely to run out. The plant requires for vigorous growth a deep, rich soil, abundantly watered. With these conditions present, there is said to be no risk for a crop in hot regions, where alone the fruit is produced. Nine months after a cutting has been planted, a purple bud appears in the centre of the unfolding leaves that shoot out from the head of the parent stem. The stem on which the bud appears grows rapidly above the main stalk.

As the bud increases in weight, the stem bends downward by a graceful curve, on the extremity of which this bud continues to grow still, the purple blossoms falling off, little shoots appear as the embryo fruit. Each fruit has a yellow blossom at its outward extremity. At the end of three or four months the fruit has grown to maturity, and is picked long enough before it is "dead ripe," to preserve it in remarkable condition. From the roots of the parent stalk other roots appear, which are trimmed out or left to grow, as the cultivator may deem best. A single stalk, therefore, bears only one bunch or crop as its life-work.

Spaniards have a religious reverence for the banana, believing it to be the fruit of which Adam partook. The fruit has long been regarded as extremely nutritious. It is recommended above all others for invalids who are unable to swallow harder food. An estimate by Humboldt claims that forty-four thousand pounds of bananas can be produced on the soil that would be required for one thousand pounds of potatoes, and that the area that would be required to raise wheat enough for one man, would produce enough bananas to feed twenty-five men.

A CURIOUS BOOK.

The most curious book in the world is one that is neither written nor printed. Every letter of the text is cut into the leaf, and as the alternate leaves are of blue paper, it is as easily read as the best print. The labor required and the patience necessary to cut each letter may be imagined. The work is so perfect that it seems as though done by machinery, but every character was made by hand. The book is entitled "The Passion of Christ," and is now kept at a museum in France.

SWINDLERS AS BIBLE DISTRIBUTORS

The ubiquitous swindler has evolved a new plan by which to swindle the honest farmer. A chap in clerical broadcloth and white choker enters a farmhouse and asks for lodging or dinner, as the case may be. During his stay he announces himself to be a traveling Bible distributor in the service of a religious institution, and he generally goes so far as to present to the family a handsome Bible from a well-filled valise. He is careful to say that his society requires its distributing members to pay their own way, and exhibits vouchers thereof. After partaking of the good folks' hospitality he prepares to leave, and asks for his bill. He is generally told no charge is made, but he calls attention to "the rules," and insists on paying twenty-five cents per meal. Then he mildly requires a receipt on his blank form, "a voucher, you know," and gets the farmer to sign it. In ninety days there is a notice from a neighboring bank to the pious farmer to call and pay the note for $126.20 which it bought and which bears the farmer's signature.

Few people escape the taint of scrofula in the blood. With many it is hereditary; but it may also be acquired from want of air or lack of exercise, from improper food, or any cause which brings about weakness of the body and impurity of the blood. The disease is characterized by running sores, abscesses, swellings, enlarged joints, sore eyes, etc. No medicine has been so successful in curing scrofula, as Hood's Sarsaparilla. The most terrible running sores gradually disappear under the purifying and strengthening influences of this great medicine. If you are a sufferer from scrofula and desire more evidence as to the wonderful success of Hood's Sarsaparilla, send to C. I. Hood & Co, Lowell. Mass, for a book containing many remarkable cures.

To hug and kiss a girl after 11.20 P. M., in New York, costs $3 in the police court.

Captain Mitchell, of the bark Antoine Sala, New York and Havana trade, came home in May, entirely helpless with rheumatism. He went to the mountains, but receiving no benefit, at his wife's request began to take Hood's Sarsaparilla. He immediately began to improve; in two months his rheumatism was all gone, and he sailed in command of his vessel a well man. Hood's Sarsaparilla will help you. Sold by all druggists. (E)

Are hatters and bootmakers divinities because they shape our ends?

The well known strengthening properties of Iron, combined with other tonics and a most perfect nervine, are found in Carter's Iron Pills, which strengthen the nerves and body, and improve the blood and complexion.

Read what the people say concerning the ability of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, to cure asthma, catarrh, croup, colds, etc. Mrs. Dora Koch of Buffalo, says: "For croup it is decidedly efficacious." [Mrs. Jacob Mellisor of Marion, Ohio, says the same thing.] S. S. Graves, Akron, N. Y., writes: "Had asthma of the worst kind, took one dose of Thomas' Eclectric Oil and was relieved in a few minutes. Would walk five miles for this medicine and pay $5 a bottle for it." Druggist C. R. Hall, Grayville, Ill., says: "Cured an ulcerated throat for me in twenty-four hours." "Sat up in bed and coughed till the clothing was wet with perspiration. My wife insisted that I use Thomas' Eclectric Oil. The first teaspoonful RELIEVED me." E. H. Perkins, Creek Centre, N. Y., Thomas' Eclectric Oil is also a TIP-TOP external application for rheumatism, cuts, scalds, burns, bites, bruises, etc. When visiting the druggist, ask him what he knows of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil; if he has been long in the drug trade, be sure he will speak highly of it.

Worked Wonders.

"My daughter was very bad off on account of a cold and pain in her lungs. Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil cured her in twenty-four hours. One of the boys was cured of sore throat. This medicine has worked wonders in our family." Alvah Pinckney, Lake Mohopac, N. Y.

results from that true contentment which indicates perfect health of body and mind. You may possess it, if you will purify and invigorate your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. E. M. Howard, Newport, N. H., writes: "I suffered for years with Scrofulous humors. After using two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I great relief. It has entirely restored me to health." James French, Atchison, Kans., writes: "To all persons suffering from Liver Complaint, I would strongly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with a disease of the liver for nearly two years, when a friend advised me to take this medicine. It gave prompt relief, and has cured me." Mrs. H. M. Kidder, 41 Dwight st., Boston, Mass., writes: "For several years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family. I never feel safe. even without it. As a liver medicine and general purifier of the blood, it has no equal." Mrs. A. B. Allen, Winterpock, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and finally became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of and commenced giving it to him. It surely worked wonders, for, in a short time, he was completely cured."

TOWN OF PEABODY.

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS.

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety;"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthy water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fish-monger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shall be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall NOT allow their children thus withdrawn to re enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soil carts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

WILLIAM S. OSBORNE, Chairman, }
THOMAS J. RELIHAN, Clerk, } Board of Health
CHARLES P. ELLIGOTT. }

*The Board shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety * * * Whoever violates any such regulation shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.—[Extract from the Public Statutes Chap. 80, § 18.

* Section 1, chap. 98 of the laws of 1884. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of small-pox, diphtheria, scarlet fever or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the selectmen or board of health of the town in which he dwells, and upon the death, recovery or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the board of health. Any person neglecting or refusing to comply with either of the above provisions shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Book Notices.

The Current number of the Season is filled with novelties and is a magazine which no lady can afford to be without. The plates alone are worth double the price asked. Published by the International News Co., New York.

The June number of the Ladies' Home Journal will contain the opening chapters of a new domestic story, written for its columns by Harriet Prescott Spofford. Among other articles this number will contain The Tea Table, and how to Make it Attractive, by Christian Terhune Herrick. Mrs. Louisa Knapp, as editor of the Philadelphia Ladies Home Journal, has met with most remarkable success in building up that paper to a circulation of over two thousand paid subscribers in less than two years, by her rare tact and genius in catering to the home instincts of her sex, in the rich feast of good things set before her readers every month.

Hawthorne's Philosophy is the article which will first catch the attention of many readers of the May Century, partly because his personality is one of lasting interest, and also for the reason that his son, who writes the paper, has an intimate philosophical way of appreciating the elder's genius. The Rev. T. T. Munger, who a year ago contributed an essay on Immortality and Modern Thought, writes in this number with equal suggestiveness of Evolution and Faith. Special stress is placed on the profusely illustrated articles, which in their order are an attractive chapter on American Country Dwellings, The Flour Mills of Minneapolis, A Californian's Gift to Science and The Breeding of Fancy Pigeons, by E. S. Starr, which is quite remarkable both for the beauty of the engravings and the special knowledge of the writer. Many other valuable articles appear in this number, which is up to its usual high standard of excellence. The Century Co., New York.

Our Little Ones and the Nursery is well calculated to please the young folks. The April number has a pretty Easter frontispiece and the tales of a bell ringing cat, doll house troubles and the baby's party are pleasingly illustrated. Russell Publishing Co., Boston.

Wide Awake for May opens with a charming frontispiece of springtime, A Sudden Shower, followed by A Century Plant, by James Berry Bensel. A delightful story follows, The Top of the Ladder, by Grace Denio Litchfield. The Professor's Last Skate is a good true story of adventure from a young Canadian writer, Macdonald Oxley, and Prescott's Capture is a true story of the American Revolution, by Mrs. Katharine B. Foot. E. S. Brooks contributes an historical story, A Roman May-day, of the times of the Emperor Commodus. Nora Perry has a ringing ballad, The Children's Cherry Feast." Helen Gray Cone contributes a poem, Wool Gathering, and Mrs. Clara Doty Bates, is represented by Calling Voices. There is much other miscellany in the number.

At the suggestion of Dr. James R. Nichols, whose inspiring book, Whence? What? Where? has given him a prominent place among American writers and thinkers, Messrs. Cupples, Upham & Co. will soon publish a work of great interest entitled The Mystery of Pain, by James Hinton, M. D., whose recent death is lamented by all who are familiar with his writings, as well as by a large circle of personal friends and admirers, by whom he was justly regarded as a deep and original thinker, and an author of rare merit. The Mystery of Pain is a work which will be highly appreciated by all—containing, as it does, many good and cheering thoughts, which will not soon pass from the memory of its readers. It will be a boon and a solace to the world of sufferers, and will shed a ray of light on the dark phases of human life. It is written in a clear and forcible style, free from technical terms, and is well adapted to the general reader. Dr. Nichols prefaces the work with an admirable introduction.

The May St. Nicholas comes like a nosegay of spring flowers. Rosa Kingsley opens the number with an account of the springtime of a poet—When Shakespeare was a Boy, in which she has gathered from external sources and from the internal evidence of his writings all the facts and fancies that bear upon his boyhood, and has woven them into a delightful sketch, beautifully illustrated by Alfred Parsons, and by Leon Moran's frontispiece. Spring poetry, too, finds its place in the magazine, as good spring poetry should. Talks about flowers are certainly timely, and doubly interesting when they deal with adventure as well, and such exotics as the curious Lace-leaf, the amusing Caricature plant, and the tree that bears Vegetable Clothing—all, which are cleverly depicted by the brothers Beard. There are the usual departments and many other bright articles and pictures. The Century Co., New York.

Pain and dread attend the use of most Catarrh remedies. Liquids and snuffs are unpleasant as well as dangerous. Ely's Cream Balm is safe, pleasant, easily applied with the finger, and a sure cure. It cleanses the nasal passages and heals the inflamed membrane, giving relief from the first application. 50c.

From the pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa. I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Liepsner.

THE LADIES'

DONGOLA!

OFFICE OF ORDWAY & CLARK,

MANUFACTURERS OF

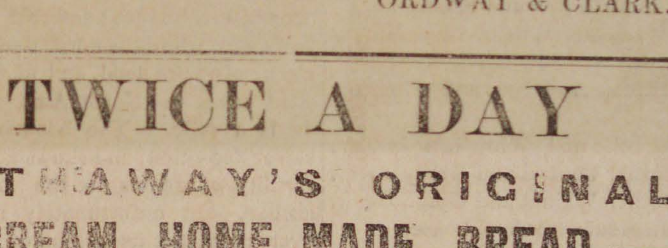
LADIES' FINE BOOTS AND SHOES.

HAVERHILL, MASS., February 25, 1886.

MR. WELLMAN OSBORNE, Lynn, Mass.

DEAR SIR: We have this day sent you a large invoice of our justly celebrated DONGOLA BOOTS. You will find they are all that has been claimed for them, and far ahead and entirely different from Kangaroo, Glove or Mat Kid. There is no other boot made for Ladies' wear which, for softness of finish, elegance of fit combined with such lasting durability, will give the entire satisfaction of this boot. They are something that has long been needed, as they wear better than French or American Kid, and will not stretch, turn purple, or look rusty. So popular and unprecedented has become the demand for these goods throughout the country, as the merits of the leather have become known, and so limited the importation of skins out of which the goods are manufactured, and so many imitations under similar names have been placed upon the market, that it has been found necessary to copyright the name.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED WITH OUR AGENTS NAME UPON THE SOLE, THUS:



Also the word "DONGOLA" upon the inside lining.

We shall give you the EXCLUSIVE SALE OF THESE BOOTS IN YOUR CITY, feeling confident with your large trade that they will find a ready market, judging from the large sales they have met with in other cities. Respectfully yours,

ORDWAY & CLARK.

The regular May meeting of the Board of Engineers was held last Wednesday evening. The regular batch of bills were approved. Charles Lawrence was approbated as a member of Hook & Ladder No. 1; Edward M. Cassidy to Hose 1; William R. Armstrong and James L. Putnam as members of Hose 2, in place of John Humphrey and Charles F. Farrington resigned. The matter of repairs at the house of Hose 2 and at the steamer house were referred to the committee on repairs. It was voted to allow the drivers one day off in each month. Charles Enos was appointed engineer of Steamer 1 and John A. P. Sumner of Steamer 2. Charles H. Smart was appointed janitor of the Central Station and superintendent of fire alarm. Engineer Tibbetts was authorized to purchase the Berry harness and patent spring and swing for the harness of Hose 3. Engineer Reed was nominated as Director, representing the Board of Engineers in the Relief Association. Hose 4's by-laws were approved. It was voted that the hydrant districts remain the same as last year. Engineers Tibbetts, Reed and Southwick were authorized to purchase hose and hydrants.

Steamer Company No. 2 held a meeting last Friday night and voted to put down a new carpet and buy new furniture.

The annual meeting of the Relief Association of the Peabody Fire Department was held in the Town Hall, Monday evening, about forty members being present. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows: President, D. S. Littlefield; Vice President, Charles G. Folsom; Secretary, John F. Morland; Treasurer, Daniel B. Lord; Directors, Board of Engineers, William W. Reed; Steamer No. 1, George H. Carr; Steamer No. 2, John B. Reith; Hook & Ladder No. 1, Joseph H. Miller; Hose No. 1, Fred B. Thomas; Hose No. 2, Andrew Dodge; Hose No. 3, Chas. H. Hooper; Hose No. 4, Charles J. Halpin; Hose No. 5, Walter Curtis. The report of the treasurer shows that the fund of the association at present is $2464.95. There have been three firemen injured in the discharge of fire duty to whom benefits have been paid to the amount of $111. The receipts from dues and entertainments were $199.33, and the total gain over the previous year is $133. The membership last year was 85. The Board of Directors will hold their first quarterly meeting Thursday evening.

The work of the carpenters and masons is nearly completed, and by the time the PRESS is again issued, all improvements and repairs will have been finished. The stables have been reversed and now the horses are occupying their new stalls with their heads pointing toward the apparatus. There are seven new stalls, five in the room on the west side of the building and two on the east side. The solid brick partition between the stable and the apparatus rooms was cut through and heavy iron beams resting on brick piers put in to support the upper part of the partition, and the new stalls built. Each horse now stands in his stall directly behind the piece of apparatus which he is attached to. Handsome double doors, hung upon spring hinges, open in front of each stall, and these are connected by a system of wires and pulls, so that when the drivers come down from their rooms above, on an alarm of fire all they will have to do is to step to positions near the front of the apparatus and pull a handle which will open the doors, and the horses will take their places under the swing harnesses. The stables are in every way an improvement over the old, both for the comfort of the horses and the convenience of the drivers. The stalls are light and airy, being in great contrast with the old ones, which in summer especially were dark and hot. The doors in front of the horses have small windows, giving the horses a chance to see all that is required of them. The partitions between the stalls are of plank to about the heighth of the horses' backs and is then finished out with a neat iron grating, giving a finish to the work. The old stalls have been torn out and a new floor laid. In the apparatus room the old winding stairs to the rooms above have been taken out and a new and straight flight of stairs leads up direct from the rear of the hose carriage. The sliding pole comes down from the upper hall way, a portion of the partition between the two apparatus rooms having been removed to the floor nearly at the foot of the stairs, giving a quick method of reaching the floor. The cellar stairs are directly beneath the stairs to the rooms. The carpenter work has been done by Abram Lummus and the mason work by J. Arthur Trask. When the fire alarm is in operation, together with the great improvements, this house will be one of the finest fire houses in Essex County, and will greatly facilitate the getting out promptly of the apparatus.

The bell of Hose 4 was struck several times about 2.45 this morning for a slight fire in North Salem. No general alarm was given.

An exhibition will be given in a short time of a new fire extinguisher made by the Chemical Hand Fire Pump, in this town.

Engineer Tibbetts and superintendent of fire alarm, Smart, visited Beverly Monday afternoon to witness the trial of the Beverly fire alarm. The whistles were distinctly heard in this town and the boxes counted. The alarm worked to perfection.

O. B. Chadwick & Co., of this town, have issued a neat card giving the location and numbers of the boxes of the new Fire Alarm. They can be had by applying at his office. The following is the list as determined on:—

7. Central Fire Station.
8. Corner Lowell and Kosciusko.
9. Lowell street, near Amos Hutchinson's.
13. Corner Andover and Endicott street.
15. At Pike and Whipple's factory.
17. Corner Central and Hardy street.
18. Corner Walnut and Upton street.
19. On Endicott school house.

25. Corner Washington and Sewall street.
27. Corner Sutton and Aborn street.
28. Washington, opposite Pumping Station.
29. Reed's store, South Peabody.
35. Lynnfield street, opposite A. Raddin's.
37. Corner Foster and Oak street.

Where Hours go Merrily.

A social assembly was held in the Town Hall, last Thursday evening, by the members of H. O. Upton's school in dancing. The young people showed much proficiency and after a time all present joined in the dance.

The free exhibitions at the Skating Rink, by the Kickapoo Indians, are being largely attended and the entertainments are worthy of attention. It is reported that they are also disposing of considerable of their medicine, which is, of course, the object of their stay here.

St. Tammany's day will be observed this evening by the Agawam tribe of Red Men in the Skating Rink in Danvers, and brothers of Masconomo tribe of this town are in attendance.

The Yorks of Dublin defeated the Snaggs of Peabody by a score of 25 to 24, in eleven innings, on Clark's field, last Thursday afternoon.

The operetta of the Berry Pickers, which is being presented to-night and to-morrow night by the Murray Club, is by a large chorus and with members of the club as soloists. Rehearsals have been going on for weeks, and it is confidently believed that the presentation will be worthy the patronage of the public. The following is the cast of characters:

Alice, Soprano,	Miss Mabel Peirce
Mary, Alto,	Miss Rosa Ham
Clara, Soprano,	Miss Caddie Trull

Letter from Salt Lake City.

HELENA, MONTANA, Apr. 24, '86.

MESSRS. EDITORS:—No one can spend even a short time in thoughtful investigation of Mormonism in its strongholds, without being impressed with the spirit, history and influence of the strange institution.

It is a political and not a religious organization; its leaders have been men of wonderful executive ability, wisdom and cunning; a peculiarly favorable combination of circumstances has favored its existence so long undisturbed in this country; its spirit is entirely antagonistic to the United States government; polygamy is an open violation of United States statutes, and a relic of barbarism which furnishes the most convenient method of attack by the Federal authorities, and may be the rock on which Mormonism is to go to pieces; but the "State of Deseret" or political fabric of Mormonism is more subversive of our civil government than anything else; the foreign population who largely compose the Mormon rank and file, are the most easily attracted to the support of such an organization; and psychological—possibly demoniacal — influence can only explain the power of Mormonism over some of its adherents.

The term Mormon is from Moroni, purported to be an angel from the ancient races of this continent and Central America. He deposited the gold plates from which the Book of Mormon was translated, in a hill in the town of Manchester, Ontario County, New York. He appeared to Joseph Smith, the founder of Mormonism, who resided in that locality, in September, 1822. Mr. Smith says he found the plates in a stone box under a partially covered oval stone, and with them a kidney shaped stone through which he looked as a Urim and Thummim, and by means of which he translated the plates. Hence the Mormon Bible or Book of Mormon which with the faithful Latter day Saints supersedes the Bible as being a later revelation.

The book professes to give the history of the ancient races of this continent fifteen hundred and two thousand years ago, who descended from the early races after the flood, and of which ancient races the North American Indian is a relic. The book is a most clever deception, and shows an unusual fertility of genius in the mind of its author, but unfortunately reveals at every point that its originator was uninformed, and drew more from imagination than from fact.

Rev. M. F. Lamb, a former missionary of The Am. Baptist Home Mission Society, and now a resident of Salt Lake City, has recently done great service to the cause of truth in a course of lectures in which he shows on a large chart the hieroglyphics of Joseph Smith, and of the early races of the continent as found in the ruins and mounds of Central and North America. He also exhibits in parallel columns a list of names of ancient countries, cities and men taken from the Book of Mormons and from the most ancient records of the early races of this country.

The character and nomenclature of the Book of Mormon shows ingenuity, but are plainly traceable to Arabic numbers and Bible terminology, which as Mr. Lamb's study and research have shown, bear no resemblance to the actual and ancient records from which they are purported to have come.

Having located itself in Missouri, then the far West—where it rendered itself obnoxious to the surrounding communities by its peculiar social customs, and manner of levying tribute for sustenance, Mormonism was forcibly expelled from the State. Afterwards locating in Illinois, it was driven from there by force of arms, resulting in the killing of Joseph Smith, and the wounding of others. Subsequently it migrated to Utah in 1847, under the lead of Brigham Young and other apostles, where it has turned a barren desert into one of the most fertile and lovely regions of earth. Brigham Young died ten years ago last June, since which time Mormonism has been gradually losing the grip of its political power, under the aggression of the United States authorities.

Mormonism presents real missionary ground. Disfranchised polygamists establish the system of free schools, with compulsory education for the young in Utah, and plant gospel churches in Mormon strongholds and you have the three strongest possible agencies to put this or any other foreign institution in sympathy with the United States government. Mormonism, or any other ism of like spirit, must give way before the Bible, the Printing Press and the Common Schools. Experience has proved that misson work among Mormons progresses slowly. I regard the Scandinavian mission work among the Mormons the most inviting, from the fact of there being so many of this nationality among them, but even here great faith and persistent efforts are requisite. It is wrong to neglect this field with its relics of barbarism in the very midst of our civilization. But mission work in Utah is not as prosperous as in the other territories, nor is it likely to be for some time to come. Baptist Mormon mission work has prospered relatively more than that of the other denominations in the same field, yet there are but two Baptists churches in Utah, with less than one hundred and fifty for a total membership, and with but very few converts from Mormonism among the number. The work in Utah has been in progress as long as in Montana. The Minutes of the last Montana Baptist Association report ten churches with a total membership of three hundred and ten, and nine of these organizations have houses of worship either completed or in process of erection. Since the meeting of the Association, two churches have been organized with a membership of thirty seven and more to follow.

The oldest of these has seen but five years. There have never been more than five missionaries in Montan. Utah has six counting the very efficient female assistants. This shows the comparative condition of the religious soil of the two territories, and calls for the harder work in Utah; for it would be the greatest unwisdom to relax a single energy in the field now we have entered it, and the same is true of Montana. Three good Baptist missionaries in addition to the force now in Montana could organize six new churches during the coming summer, every one of which might become self-supporting in a few years at the farthest.

It is rumored that John J. Heylingberg is shortly to return to Peabody.

We are glad to learn that S. F. Reed is much better.

George Stevens will have the base ball returns posted in his shop every evening.

Arthur Winchester, of Boston, has entered the employ of Herbert Gardner of this town.

A portion of the real estate of the late John Brown, of So. Peabody, will be sold at public auction Thursday, May 27. See adv.

Mrs. and Miss Sabina Wait, the wife and daughter of Rev. Daniel Wait, the M. E. clergyman who was settled here ten years ago, are visiting in town. They were both active in the work of the W. C. T. U. when residing here, gaining the love and steady remembrance of those with whom they were associated. On next Friday they are to be guests of the W. C. T. U. at the meeting in Franklin Hall at 3 P. M. A cordial invitation is extended to all to attend.

We have received the Register of the State Normal School in Salem, in which we find the names of the following from this town: Advanced class, Nellie Atherton; Class A, Blanche Elliott, Ida B. Farnum, Henrietta Winchester; Class B, Lina McPherson; Class C, Mary E. Cummings, Flavia M. Goodwin, Elizabeth A. Ingraham, West Peabody, Nellie M. Taylor; Class D, Lucy M. Dalton, Gertrude E. Miller, Jennie F. Nichols, Nellie M. Taylor, West Peabody, Lizzie F. Walton.

One of our well known book keepers on Foster street was around this morning with a long cut under his chin, and his friends at once concluded that the Indians at the rink had attempted to scalp him and commenced with his chin as that was his most prominent feature. But they were relieved of their anxiety when he informed them that he was experimenting with a screw driver in fixing a lock on a door and attempting to save a carpenter's bill, yesterday, when the instrument slipped and did the damage to his phiz. The air was blue with a "Reith" of indignant remarks about that screw driver.

Tidings were received of the sudden decease of John R. Patterson, son of Joseph R. Patterson, of Salem, and a nephew of Nathaniel C. Patterson of this town. The sad event took place last Sunday. The young man has been for several years sick with consumption, having contracted the disease, it is said, in the car shops in Salem, where he had been employed. He had been to California in the hope that a change would benefit him, but to no purpose. His age was 24 years. He had many friends in town, who will deeply sympathize with his parents in their affliction. His funeral took place yesterday.

For Impaired or Diseased Vision is a pair of

B. LAURANCE'S

Axis Cut Pebbles.

The frauds that have been perpertrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlers by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all important subject of the preservation of the sight. There are only two articles from which spectacle lenses can be manufactured, viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name, it still remains glass. Pebble on the other hand is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crytal found generally in free-stone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald and nearly as hard as the diamond. The pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone cut by the aid of diamond dust, and the greater amount of power is placed immediately over the center of the grain found in the pebble. It will give to the spectacle wearer a coolness, freshness and a pleasant feeling that the ordinary spectacle lenses cannot by any possibility impart. All spectacles and eyeglasses are stamped B. L. — BY THE —

NAUMKEAG

Orders have been sent from our headquarters, Boston, to our Branch Stores all along the line from Connecticut to Maine to make room for several thousand Men's, Youth's, Boys' and Children's Suits, as the balance of our wholesale Spring and Summer stock amounting to over two hundred and fifty thousand ($250,000) dollars, is to be distributed among our retail stores with orders to mark them at about the cost of the material. It has been our custom the last few years after our wholesale trade has been supplied to give our patrons a benefit by offering the balance of our wholesale stock to the retail trade at less than actual cost.

On account of the great labor trouble in the West our trade from that locality has not been as large as in former years, consequently we have a much larger stock to dispose of than any previous year, and as the NAUMKEAG is one of the largest, our share of the stock is enormous. Remember these are not old goods carried over from last season, but all new, clean, handsome, stylish goods which we manufactured for this season's trade.

Read the Prices of a few Lots:

Lot No. 1. 350 Men's nobby all wool Cassimere and Scotch Mixed Suits, comprising ten different patterns of checks, plaids and fancy mixtures, goods manufactured by the Amesbury, Georges River and Hamilton Mills, all sizes from 34 to 44. These are regular $10 and $12 suits, which we propose to close out at retail for only

$6 per suit.

Lot No. 2. 375 Men's and Young Men's Fine All-Wool Suits made from some of the most stylish patterns manufactured by the celebrated Chester Moses, Franklin and Carcline Mills. The lot comprises over 15 different styles to select from; all sizes from 33 to 44. There is not a suit in the lot but would be considered cheap at $12, we shall close the entire lot at retail for

$8 per suit.

Lot No 3. 420 Men's and Young Men's Suits manufactured from the famous Cowan, Central Falls, Brighton, Putnam and Sawyer Mills Finest all-Wool Cassimere and Cheviots. No better goods made for style or wear in this country. The lot comprises about 20 different patterns, both sack and frock coats—the latest novelties of the season—thoroughly and handsomely made and trimmed—regular $15 and $16 suits which we shall close out at retail for only

$10 per suit.

100 Men's All-Wool, Indigo Blue, Middlesex Flannel Suits, warranted fast colors—regular $12 suits for only

$8 per suit.

200 Boys' all-wool Short Pant Suits, good manufactuted by the Victory and Hamilton Mills; will fit boys from 4 to 13 years, of age; all neat, handsome mixtures, perfect in fit, at $2.50 each, about half price, remember the price

$2.50 per suit.

175 Boys' all-wool Suits, ages 4 to 13 years, comprising light and dark colors made in either style, Plaited or Norfolk, goods manufactured by the Mechanicsville and Amesbury Mills; regular $4 suits for only

$3 each.

220 Boys' strictly all-wool Norfolk Suits in plaids and fancy mixtures—goods made by such well known mills as the Carlyle, Chester Moses, etc., all new, handsome and desirable patterns, will fit boys from 4 to 14 years of age, which we shall close out at

$4 per suit.

150 Boys' Fine all-wool Suits, will fit boys from 11 to 17 years of age; goods made from such well known mills as the Mechanicsville, Brighton, Georges River and others—all new and desirable patterns—regular $8 and 9 suits which we shall close out for

Spring Opening.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

SECOND FLOOR

We cordially invite the Ladies of Salem and vicinity to our Opening of the largest and most carefully selected stock of Millinery Goods ever shown in this city, including Trimmed Bonnets and Round Hats, both imported and of our own design and execution. In Fancy Laces and Silk Lisses, we have many elegant patterns, and in some of the most delicate tints, fairly rivalling the shadings of nature. In Flowers, which are to be so largely used the coming season, we have a most attractive display, as fresh as from the garden, only lacking fragrance. We have also in Untrimmed Hats and Bonnets, a very large assortment from the strongest School Hat to the finest foreign make. In fact everything which goes to make up a complete stock. Mrs. A. C. Washburn, our manager, was in New York at the Importers' Opening in Feb. securing many choice things at that time, and has kept close watch of the market up to the present time. Having through years of experience formed a large acquaintance with Importing as well as Jobbing Houses, which gives her great advantage in selecting Desirable Styles and making Lowest Prices. Miss Sadie Bushby will remain with us, as will also Miss Etta Brown and Miss Hattie Gliddin. We have also secured the services of Miss Carrie Palmer, who will join our corps of popular sales ladies. And now we feel sure almost every lady calling on us next week, or after, will meet an old acquaintance who will gladly show them every attention, and will take a personal interest in pleasing.

Cloaks, Suits and Shawls.

SPRING, 1886.

We take pleasure in announcing to the Ladies of Salem and Essex County, that we have now open and ready for inspection our full line of Ladies, Misses and Children's Outside Garments, Wraps, Shawls, etc., for Spring and Summer wear. We may venture to say without any egotism, that our selections in this department far surpass anything we have previously offered. The increasing demand for superior Ready Made Garments and Suits has led us to exercise unusual care in selecting none but the best, both in material and workmanship, and we guarantee all to be just as represented. We have every style and quality a lady can wish for. Long Garments for driving and travelling, Short Wraps and Jackets for street wear in every available shade and colors, both Foreign and American make. Suits, stylish and of superior quality. Shawls, India Chuddas, Boucle, Cashmere, and Fancy Embroidered Scarfs in all grades and shades. Children's Garments, simply beautiful in Boucle, English, German and American Goods. Our Infants' Department requires especial mention for its variety of Long and Short Robes, Cloaks, Slips and Blankets.

Jersey Waists, fancy colors beaded. Mikado fronts, Vest fronts, Plain fronts and braided, in every variety; and a great many more equally good things that we have not space to mention.

We cordially invite you to come and see for yourselves, assuring all courteous attention, and any information we can bestow.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER,

252 Essex Street, Salem.

Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds, Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skylights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bousley.

Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated with courtesy whether anything is esired or not.

Selected Story.

The Violoncello's Next Engagement.

The glories of the entertainment have faded, down goes gas, out scramble audience. It is the last night of the season; and the band, sorrowfully, gloomily every one, from the big drum down to the piccolo, are playing the National Anthem over said season's grave to give it a decent burial. Even the first fiddle feels out of sorts. The bassoon has a tear-drop trembling on his left eye lash, and lets it hang there, unsuspicious of the fact that all the while it glistens visibly in a tiny ray from the footlight. As for the violoncello next him, that cliff-browed, set faced hoary headed old veteran of a score or two of pantomines, surely this particular pantomime's death grieves him but little. Why should it—? whilst he can twine his bony left arm around that old violoncello's neck as if it lived and loved him; when he can bend his gray head to its strings and hear the sweet pathos of their tones; when he can pass his long, skinny musician's fingers fondly over them to draw forth rich, soothing, swelling, beautiful melody? Why should there be a quavering lip and a trembling eyelash when the last chord comes?

The chord is struck and over. Out of the orchestra and already on his way home is the first violin; the cornet has brought up the rear with a cadenza morando; the big drum has closed his last roll; the second violin has packed up his fiddle case; bassoon and violoncello remain alone with the dying lights in the hall.

Dick! said the bassoon quietly.

Poor old white faced violoncello never heeded. The left arm in its rusty sleeve still clasped the instrument's neck in that loving way; the old grey head bent down over the strings, with the eyes closed.

Poor old chap, observed the bassoon pityingly, as he turned up his coat collar, and tucked his instrument case under his arm. Blowed if he ain't a playing now.

Dick—Dick he repeated, tapping the old violoncello good naturedly on the shoulder. The old man opened his eyes and awoke to the silence.

Hallo, Tom Hornby! What—all gone? I thought—looking around him in disappointed inquiry, and spoke in a tone of sadness—Well, well! How deaf I'm getting, to be sure! The rusty black coat heaved with a sigh as its wearer arose and shut his music.

All gone but you, Tom, he said sorrowfully. Well, I won't deny I thought they might ha' wished me Good night or Good bye or something of the sort for the last night; but I won't grumble. An old fellow who's deaf as a post and has nobody to mind him ain't no place in an orchestra. He'd better get out of the road as quick as he can and make no fuss about it. Friends ain't in his line.

Now come, Dick, old man, expostulated the bassoon, don't go for to speak like that. You knows there is one chap as is sorry for you—dash my hide if he ain't. Yes, says I, Dick; count me as your friend whenever you like. There's a bed for you and the same fare as I has myself whenever you like to claim 'em; and if we can't find you another sit somewheres directly, it's a pity. Blow me it's a pity.

Tom Hornby, you're a good hearted fellow, returned the violoncello gratefully, as his stolid face relaxed a little before the bassoon's genral smile. A useless, old, worn out blessing like mine ain't much to give anybody, he continued, but such as it is, Tom, take it for your kindness, and may you never have such a black world before you as I've got now.

They shook hands; the bassoon stepped through the narrow little door beneath the stage, and his companion, bearing his unwiedly violoncello, extinguished the last gas jet as he followed him.

Good night, Dick, and don't be down hearted, old man, Your next engagement'll make amends.

Good night, Tom Hornby; God bless you.

Again they shook hands; then bassoon whistled off into the hurrying crowd at the stage door, and violoncello turned to face the wind the other way. Out into the bleak street, where tiny yellow rushlights of lamps cast a melancholy glimmer or two upon crowds of hurrying faces, some fat and round, some red and well-favored, some blue and ill-favored, all hurrying along through the little snow dots which the wind blew about. Old violoncello buttoned his rusty coat close, and turned up the collar as if the wind might find that an obstacle in its attacks upon his scraggy old throat whilst he hugged that dingy big fiddle of his tight against his body, and settling his eyes straight before him, dragged his trembling knees in the direction they pointed. Up one street and down another; along a wide white road, lined with tall, white mansions; down a narrow, wriggling dark alley, lined with rickety lodging houses. On he trudged through the grey pulpy mud of trampled snow.

On and on to that dreary blank of future which lay before him, the old lack lustre eyes fixed in that straightforward look of despair, the cold loneliness steadily settling down upon his aged heart to brood there. For the season was over, and violoncello had struck his last chord at the hall.

You see, Dobbs, the leader of the orchestra had said, now the full season's over its unreasonable to expect the management to keep up such a band, so much as it goes against me to say it, we must part.

Quite right, had chimed in the manager with the ferocious moustache. Establishment expenses must be cut down, my man; everybody can't stop on; so there you are! Might as well ask me to keep extra bandsmen out of my own salary!

So old violoncello struck his last chord and went with a leaden heart. Good hearted Tom Hornby comforted him with hopes of that next engagement. But who would have him, poor, old, worn out, deaf as he was? Nobody, he said. And his heart sank like a lump of cold lead as he thought of that answer.

The pulpy slush changed to white untrodden snow upon the path; the streets were quieter and darker. Old violoncello reached his humble lodging, admitted himself by his latch key, climbed the three flights of rickety stairs. In a tiny garret at the top of them was a fireless grate, a square, white bed, a table, a chair, and a window—one broken pane of which was stopped with brown paper. As he lighted his two inches of lean candle and showed these, the old man sat down upon the chair and bent his grey head upon the table. No tear was in his eyes when he lifted them. He drew his violoncello closer to him; he hugged it as he might a favorite child; then he bent his head once more upon the little table, and his bow slipped to the floor from the numbed fingers which clasped it.

Lower and lower burned the candle, whilst outside, upon the bars of the window panes, white snow gathered higher and higher as the flakes kept falling.

When the blanched face was again upturned the eyes were moistened.

So we've come to it at last, have we, old fiddle? the old man moaned in apostrophe of his beloved violoncello, as he stooped to pick up the bow. We're old now, both of us; we're no use now! You're patched and cracked, and your master's deaf— they don't want a pair like us nowadays. We're ready almost for our last engagement. Yes, old fiddle; you've been a good servant to your old master, and you could do something, too, in your day; but not much longer—not very much longer. We're old now; they can do without us.

A tear dropped upon the finger board, and the old man wiped it carefully off with his coat sleeve.

Yes, old friend, he continued, gazing affectionately on his battered companion of wood and strings, we've been friends for long, but we're are coming to our last engagement.

Whilst the snow flakes fell thicker and thicker against the window, softly and noiselessly, the old man drew his bow across the strings of the violoncello in a half unconscious way, bending down his head to the instrument just as he always did. Though his ears were deaf to aught else, they never failed to drink in the tones which sprang from those vibrating cords. Slowly, weirdly, pathetically, the music rose and fell in gentle ripples around the room, so hushed and low that it awakened no echoes in the silent house. Only in that poor chamber would it wander; only around that poor couple, instrument and player, would its sweet melody float. As he played, the old man's eyes gently closed, and from his face the lines of settled despair gradually cleared away, till only a happy smile was left beaming around wrinkles. The player's thoughts were far away; to him the cold room and the snowy windows were become as nought. Back in the little garden of fifty years ago, in the arbor scented by pinks and roses, with the dark velvet pansies clustering the little plot at his feet, he was listening again to that same old tune as he heard it first, when the wife, long dead, sang the words, and he played the air upon that well-remembered violin. He could hear her voice; he could smell the roses' perfume. Surely it was that same violin he was playing now. From his closed eyes, down the white cheeks, tears dropped warm and fast upon the strings of the violoncello. He heeded them not; his thoughts were far away.

So the tune rose and fell, and the snow gathered thicker on the window panes, till the candle on the little table flickered out. Yet the arm in its rusty sleeve did not weary in its slow regular motion; the cold fingers still pressed the strings; the player did not awake to the darkness of the room.

We're old now, he murmured, they don't want us any longer.

His eyes were still shut; but the tune waxed slower and slower and slower, till it died away altogether. The bow slipped from the old man's fingers; the grey head sank upon the table; the violoncello rested soundless against the breast of the rusty black coat.

* * * * *

When the morning came and bright sunrays struggled through the snow blocked window panes, they shone upon a tiny table, a square white bed, a fireless grate, a patched and dingy old violoncello. But the bow had fallen upon the floor, and the player's nerveless fingers hung white and stiffened upon the strings.

Old Violoncello had gone to his last engagement.—Cassell's Magazine

The excursions to Salem by the firm of Almy, Bigelow & Washburn are now an established thing and are worthy of mention, as an event of importance to the city of Salem. The objective point, of course, is the store of the firm under whose management the excursions are arranged. But it must happen that the boot and shoe dealers and merchants in other lines must also reap some of the benefits of the influx of visitors to the city. The Georgetown Advocate has this to say of a recent trip of this kind from that vicinity: "The third excursion of Almy, Bigelow & Washburn was a satisfactory one to all concerned. A brisk thunder shower occurred in the afternoon but at an hour when the business had been transacted and the excursionists were under the cover of the depot. It is remarkable that each of the others were attended by rain and that after a drought such as is seldom known at this time of year, this trip brought it on, the first for a month. After making purchases the excursionists visited the many attractions of old Salem, the Witch house, Academy of Science, Plummer Hall, old First Church, North Bridge, Hawthorne's birthplace and other notable objects, and came home well pleased with their trip, and in favor of what they learned is soon to be provided, a direct train from Haverhill to Salem."

Among the Lynn milliners none is more popular than Mrs. M. L. White, at No. 35 Market street. The open horse cars pass by her door, and it is very convenient for our lady readers.

N. O. Very, dealer in wood and coal, No. 113 Derby street, Salem, has a card in this issue. Mr. Very succeeds to the old and long established firm of L. B. Hatch, and is reliable in all his dealings. It is a good place to trade.

Two car loads of horses purchased expressly for Salem market have been received by Messrs. Abbott & Reynolds, and a grand chance is offered to secure a horse for any special use desired.

At a recent convention of physicians it was proven by analysis that Red Star Cough Cure contained no dangerous narcotics. The test was so convincing that the most sceptical were satisfied, and physicians everywhere now recommend the remedy. Only 25 cents.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to pay Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Copartnerships

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will de doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal property can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

Economies of Chemistry.

AN ESSAY READ, WITHOUT REVISION FROM THE TEACHER, BEFORE THE HIGH SCHOOL CLASS IN CHEMISTRY, MAY 14TH, 1886.

Great progress has been made during the last twenty-five years, both in America and in Europe, in the utilization of undeveloped substances. Great Britain was the first to begin this, and she has been followed by America, Australia and other countries. Many things are now made use of which were formerly wasted or in the removal of which many thousand dollars were expended. Dr. Lyon Playfair, in one of his lectures, says: "Chemistry, like a prudent house-keeper, economises every scrap;" and when such scraps are made of use millions are benefited by reason of the decrease in price. Naturally Europe learns the lesson first for her population is greater than ours and materials more scarce. When we shall have turned our attention to this matter more fully and devised ways by which all waste products shall be made of use, then, and not till then, will a new era of prosperity dawn for our country.

The gain in utilization of coal products during the last forty years has been extensive. Could we follow a large quantity of coal to its destination we should reach the gas works. One ton of good coal yields coke, tar, liquor of ammonia, gas and water. We are told a million tons or more of coal are required to supply the city of London, England, with light.

> "Prime cheerer light!
> Of all material beings first and best."

Coke is used for fuel; coal dust is used for building; mixed with cement, slag and stones it is said to build better houses than brick; coal tar, formerly thrown away, is called the viceroy of manufactures; benzol, a constituent of coal naphthia, is a product of tar; and nitro-benzol, obtained by treating benzol with nitric acid, is used to perfume soap and flavor confectionery. Little do the lovers of candy imagine what the delicious sweets they enjoy so much are composed of. Aniline is obtained from benzol, and the variety of shades obtained from these aniline dyes is remarkable. Alizarine is made artificially from anthracine; carbolic acid, valuable as a disinfectant, is obtained from coal tar. By the action of nitric acid upon this, a yellow dye, carbazotic acid is obtained. From gas water ammonia water is produced; another product of coal, paraffine, has been called condensed coal gas. This is used for candles, stoppers to acid bottles, preservation of meat, to render fabrics water proof, and for the adulteration of candy.

Formerly potassic alum was used; but now from sulphate of ammonium and sulphate of aluminum ammonium alum is yielded, and many people are not aware of the change made. A novel method of obtaining lamp-black was witnessed a number of years ago. A party of gentlemen came upon what they thought was an oil well, but it proved to be a gas-chamber. By accident this gas was set on fire and burned about two years. A person in Boston heard of this and went to Maryland, tested the gas, put in gas-burners burning against soap-stone plates, from which the soot by an ingenious contrivance was scraped. It was quite a successful venture.

The pitch obtained from Lake Trinidad, Cuba, California and Nicaragua has been suggested as a source of paraffine, but the yield is not very great. The consistency of the pitch in Lake Trinidad is such that it requires to be cut with an axe, and the space left after a few days is filled up and the supply is seemingly inexhaustible. This is the best substance for macadamisation yet discovered; with resin oil it forms an excellent pitch for ships. It was used for this purpose as far back as the reign of Elizabeth, for Sir Walter Raleigh says it was in use by the Indians on the Orinoco for caulking vessels.

The scraps of leather are now utilized. Scraps and turnings from shoemakers benches are used to give thickness to the inner soles of cheap shoes. An organic acid, as acetic acid, will dissolve leather cuttings. After being washed these cuttings lose all traces of the acid. Mix them with glycerine, and they may be used for printers inking rollers, lifts or heels. At Abington, Mass, a steam engine is employed in grinding up chips and cuttings of leather formerly thrown away or burnt, and the powder thus made, after being mixed with gums and other substances, is compressed and then rolled out to the desired thickness. This leather is water-proof.

There is a story of a man who heard that a friend of his had opened a pancake shop, but he found himself in the wrong when he presented himself and inquired for Mr. Jones, the pastry baker. The proper name for pancakes is pasted stock. There are many of the so called "pancake" shops in New England. There is a large one in Lynn, the "city of shoes." Leather scraps are also converted into floor matting.

Throwing an old shoe after a newly married couple is thought to bring good luck, but it may also be considered a valuable present. A few years ago a chemist made a jelly from an old boot. By steaming the leather in a covered dish with lime, the lime united with the tannin and the gelatine was left in its original state; it was then poured in a mould and cooled. Truly "wonders will never cease," for who would dream that an article of food could be made from anything so useless as an old boot apparently is?

Bones, big and little, uncooked, with bits of flesh clinging to them, or boiled so white and clean that they are despised even by the stray cats, all these have their uses. Some furnish knife-handles, combs, buttons, tooth-brush handles, toys and trinkets; others are ground to a powder, mixed with sulphuric acid, and superphosphate of lime is produced, a valuable fertilizing agent. "Butchers bones" are boiled to extract the fat and gelatine, and these substances are made into jelly, lozenges, pretty soaps and perfumery. It is not nice to know of, perhaps, though all these things are purified before we use them. Bones acted upon chemically yield bone-black, useful in the sugar works for clarifying sugar; bone-ash, used in the gold and silver assays; and ammonium sulphate. But the most wonderful and valuable use to which old ones are put is the manufacture of phosphorus. We are familiar with this as used on matches and for medicine. It was called by the ancients "light producer" and "Lucifer, angel of light," a very appropriate name since it burns with a bright flame if held in the hand. We import bones from all countries, even from Egypt. A Times correspondent wrote a number of years ago from Alexandria: "Fancy mutton fattened on Ancient Egyptians! The other day I saw camels pacing down from mummy pits leaden with bony bits of the human form. Upon inquiry I learned these were to be shipped to English manufacturers. It is a strange fate to preserve one's skeleton thousands of years in order that distant lands may be fertilized. But Egypt is always a place of wonders."

USES OF NUTS AND SEEDS.

Nature produces grasses, leaves and seeds, year after year; and now that men have studied their uses, more satisfactory results are obtained from these than from animal or mineral substances. Horse-chestnuts contain starch and potash. On account of this latter constituent they are useful in making soap. Dried quince seeds are used as "bandoline" for the hair so adhesive are they, of which use doubtless some of us were aware. The husks of olives, formerly wasted, are now used for soap. Cotton-seed oil is largely shipped to olive districts in France and Spain where it is "doctored" and sent back here as pure olive oil. Cotton-seed meal has also a great variety of uses, one pound of oil cake meal being equal in value to ten pounds of hay. The bark of the cotton plant is used for the commoner kinds of paper; refuse fibres from the cotton mills are used for cloth and wadding; mustard seed, flax seed, linseed and cotton seed give oil. Acorns in California are used for food for both man and beast, and when roasted as a substitute for coffee; alcohol can be made from them. "What nuts are to the English and olives are to the French, melon seeds are to the Chinese." The scarlet and yellow melons in some places are grown for the seed only. When friends meet to drink tea there is always an accompaniment of water melon seeds; they are eaten in palanquin; they are picked out while discussing bargains; a workman buys a few supecks worth of them just as our small children in America buy a stick of candy. The Russians now make sunflower oil from the sunflower, so long an ornament (?). The stalks give potash also.

Shakespeare a good many years ago wrote: "A good wit will make use of anything," and the words are surely proving themselves true. Let us see what the paper which we use so much is made of. The refuse of flax mills furnishes the best tracing paper which is much in use by our young artists on Monday forenoons. Manilla paper is made from old wrapping paper and straw. An inferior paper used for blotters is made from waste cotton; tissue paper from hemp bagging and cotton canvas; bank note paper from the best white linen; paper collars are made from cotton and linen. A good story is told of a man who sent to his washerwoman among his linen collars a paper one; and when a few vigorous rubs reduced the paper collar to shreds, she, having never seen a paper collar before, supposed it was caused by some very powerful alkali contained in the soap. With tears in her eyes, therefore, did she return the fragments and falteringly confessed what she had done. Since the discovery of the separation of ink from paper, old newspapers and books and housekeepers' savings have become useful. Parchment paper is made from unsized paper and sulphuric acid as shown in the class recently; cellulose of plants is convertible into paper; reeds and rushes give fifty per cent. of paper materials; bamboo, poplar wood, wild cane and hemp stalks are also used. A weed grows wild in the northern part of the United States and Canada which furnishes the finest paper, ropes, yarn and batting. Roofing paper is made from woolen rags and hard stock. With all these sources for obtaining paper still there is an inadequate supply, and we ought to economise in this direction and write on both sides of the manilla paper furnished us for school use, nor condemn a piece to the waste basket till it has served some purpose.

But here we must stop our investigation for lack of time. The field is inexhaustible and the wonderland of work is open before us. Truly the more we learn the more we see to learn in this great beautiful world. Everything has its use. Let us seek for these uses, knowing that whatever we learn will at some time in our lives be of assistance to us.

Rheumatism

It is an established fact that Hood's Sarsaparilla has proven an invaluable remedy in many severe cases of rheumatism, effecting remarkable cures by its powerful action in correcting the acidity of the blood, which is the cause of the disease, and purifying and enriching the vital fluid.

It is certainly fair to assume that what Hood's Sarsaparilla has done for others it will do for you. Therefore, if you suffer the pains and aches of rheumatism, give this potent remedy a fair trial.

A Positive Cure.

"I was troubled very much with rheumatism in my hips, ankles, and wrists. I could hardly walk, and was confined to my bed a good deal of the time. Being recommended to try Hood's Sarsaparilla, I took four bottles and am perfectly well. I cheerfully recommend Hood's Sarsaparilla as one of the best blood purifiers in the world." W. F. JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

THE PUBLISHED interviews, in this paper, two weeks since, regarding the candidacy of Mr. Levi Preston for the Peabody post-office, have caused considerable comment, as was natural. They have been freely quoted from by our local daily contemporaries, who have called them "alleged" interviews in the same breath. They have taken the trouble to publish also contradictions of our statements, notably in the case of Mr. Ward. One of them gives the interesting information that "the petition of Mr. Proctor (meaning Preston we presume,) is simply a blind, and if the local politicians were not so near-sighted, they could see what is back of it." It would be exceedingly interesting if this local scribbler who has the confidential ear of the "inside circles," would tell us "what is back of it," so that the rest of mankind could have a partial knowledge of the superior information of which he is undoubtedly in possession. But as we are denied this, we must content ourselves with the light we have, and the "briefly stated" position of Mr. Preston, over his own signature.

A representative of this paper called upon each of the gentlemen reported in our interview—obtaining their views in an open, straightforward manner. The conversation was noted down, and while we may not in every case have given the exact words of the speaker, there was no intentional misrepresentation. In the case of Mr. Ward, we understand he denies saying "that he thought it doubtful if the Senate confirmed the nomination of Mr. Preston." This is certainly what we understood him to say, and in the light of his correction of the statement, we hardly see where it is material. He says that "he had observed that in the Beverly case, for instance, and others where removals had been made before the expiration of the term of office of the present incumbents, the Senate had not confirmed the nominations." Can any inference other than this be drawn: that if Mr. Preston was nominated, it was the judgment of Mr. Ward that it would be a similar appointment, and that reasoning from these other cases, he would not be confirmed?

All these things, however, are incidental to the main point, which subsequent events, including Mr. Preston's briefly stated position, confirm. It is that Mr. Preston is a candidate for the office; that a petition, backed by Collector Saltonstall, Secretary Endicott and other politicians outside of local leaders, has gone on to Washington; that, whether considered necessary or not, the democratic town committee were not consulted, or their signatures asked for; and that Mr. Preston expects to receive the appointment through the aid of others than the local leaders of the party. It does not appear that the democratic town committee are specially opposed to his nomination, or that he could not have obtained their endorsement. But it is a fact that he chose to disregard the advice of shrewd politicians in this direction, relying upon the influence of the so-called "silver tops" on the one hand, and a political weathercock on the other. As we are outside the pale of the democracy, it is not for us to say whether his action in this regard was wise or otherwise; we only state facts that have become evident to the entire community.

But the letter of Mr. Preston is of interest to all parties. Because while the appointment of postmaster is at the hands of a democratic president, his service here is to all parties, and to the entire business community. And all, whether democrats or not, are interested in the change, if change there is to be. Here is the letter:

To the Editor of the Reporter:—

SIR, Answering through your columns by the desire of the writer, a communication requesting me to "define my position" regarding the Peabody post-office, permit me to state that I consider Mr. Ward my friend. For me to speak in praise of his efficiency and integrity as postmaster, in view of the esteem in which he is held by his fellow citizens, would be superfluous. His career as soldier, citizen and public official is unimpeachable. Yet the circumstance of his appointment as a Republican, coupled with the fact that the Democrats of Peabody have no Federal representation, may, under the present administration, operate against him.

No one more fully appreciates this than Mr. Ward.

I may be unfortunate in being singled out by leaders of my party as a candidate for a Government office, insomuch that my attitude has been misunderstood by some who should have been better informed. Whether it be myself or some fellow Democrat who may be honored by official recognition is not so material as an assurance that the administration, in assuming the reins of Government, assumed also the responsibilities thereby entailed.

This is my "position," briefly "defined." LEVI PRESTON.

Monday, May 3, 1886.

It may strike the casual reader, after perusing the above, to wonder if there is any position stated at all; whether he is not left more in the dark than ever. But let that pass. The letter, on careful perusal, is a substantiation of the position we have maintained, and intimates that local politicians may take a "back seat."

It will not be denied, we presume, that the policy of President Cleveland has been not to remove postmasters before the expiration of their term of office, except for cause. Now, if the President is to be urged to remove Mr. Ward and appoint Mr. Preston, there must be some cause assigned. What what will be the attitude of these "leaders of the party" who have "singled out Mr. Preston?" Will they urge "offensive partisanship" or "inefficiency in office," or what will be the charge? But here comes Mr. Preston, the candidate urged for the nomination, "singled out by the leaders of his party," and says: "His (Mr. Ward's) career as a soldier, citizen and public official is unimpeachable." Against such testimony, by the candidate for the office, of what avail would be any charges that could be brought, or any reason given for his removal? It seems to us that Mr. Ward could send nothing to Washington, instancing why he should hold the office until his term expires, than this same letter over the signature of Mr. Preston.

Farther on the letter says "I may be unfortunate in being singled out by leaders of my party, etc." It would have been interesting to know who the leaders were. Did Mr. Saltonstall, or Secretary Endicott come to Peabody and "single out" Mr. Preston? Or who did? Evidently the leaders of the party in town, the democratic town committee, for instance, did not single him out. Because they were not consulted, and it is possible they would have singled out some one else.

At a meeting of the Essex County democrats last Saturday at the Parker House, Henry M. Cross, the expected Memorial Day orator in this town, said: "I don't believe in any kind of Democracy which insists in saying we are the administration to-day, and we control the offices, but we do not control the officers." P. J. McCusker, of Lynn, another prominent speaker, said, "I say the people of this country have elected a democratic ticket, and that the democrats ought to hold the offices of this country." This, we suppose, is good democratic doctrine, and while not agreeing with their principles, we believe they are right. We think there is no greater humbug before the country than "civil service reform." We believe in making the democratic party responsible for the government of this country. The people have elected a democratic president, and how can he administer the government, on the principles of democracy, while half of his subordinates are of the opposite party? The democrats ought to have the offices, and they ought to have a postmaster in this town. Not that we, personally, prefer a democrat to a republican. But it is not to be expected that President Cleveland will appoint a republican.

But farther on, Mr. McCusker gives his opinion regarding Mr. Saltonstall, and we could not help thinking how the same wording with reference to Mr. Preston, in the light of his letter, might not be exceedingly applicable. "This Mr. Saltonstall, elected, as I have said, contrary to the wishes of the Democratic party, acknowledges that his predecessor was a competent man, and forces himself into the custom house to take that man's place. What do you think of a man who is put into office upon those grounds? I say it is undemocratic." While not defending the position of Mr. McCusker, we presume he represents the democratic party of Essex County, as his sentiments were applauded, and re-iterated by others. Mr. Preston's attitude is exactly similar. He acknowledges that his predecessor is a competent man, yet he has sent on a petition for his place. This, according to Mr. McCusker, is undemocratic. We are sorry for Mr. Preston, as we had supposed he was a staunch democrat.

From a Republican standpoint, we are free to say that President Cleveland has been very chary in removing Republican postmasters for political reasons. He has appointed democrats when the term of office of the republican incumbent has expired, which is right. But he has usually waited until such term has expired. When, on the other hand, he has made removals before the expiration of the time, the appointments have not been made, in very many cases, in conformity with the wishes of the local leaders. Outside influence has made the appointments, and the local politicians have been ignored. This has happened so many times that we do not blame the democrats for being disturbed. We should not relish it were we in their position. Yet we suppose Mr. Preston had this in mind when he consulted Mr. Saltonstall and others, instead of the local leaders, knowing that the probabilities were in favor of his appointment in such a case.

Regarding Mr. Ward, our position was stated plainly at the time of his re-appointment. We see no reason for any change in the views expressed then. We considered that the same reasons which existed in the minds of the advisers of Col. Stone for the appointment of a new man should have prevailed later. If Mr. Ward should not have been re-appointed when Randall was nominated, he should not have been re-appointed when Randall left. Because Mr. Randall's method of business was not satisfactory to the Government, it did not follow that Mr. Ward was the only man in town who could keep accounts. As far as service to the public was concerned, as far as courtesy and promptness in dealing with the people in their postal arrangements, this town has never had a postmaster the equal of Mr. Randall. Complaints regarding the mails, due entirely to carelessness, which we had occasion to make to Mr. Ward before Mr. Randall was appointed, have been repeated in exactly the same line since Mr. Randall left. At the same time we think Mr. Ward has been tolerably satisfactory to the public. But we see no reason why a democrat should not be appointed. And if a democrat, the leaders of the party in town ought to be consulted. This has been the custom, and it is a good one. It has not always prevailed with President Cleveland. But herein we think he is in error. Every appointment made in direct opposition or in disregard of the wishes of the local leaders, weakens the administration. One needs only to read the speeches at the Parker House, Saturday, to see how the appointment of Saltonstall and in fact the general appointments of President Cleveland are regarded. The republican party can look in and enjoy the sport. President Cleveland is no stronger to-day, in the support of his party, than was President Andy Johnson with the republican party after the first year of his office. The inaction of the democratic House of Representatives and the speeches of Jeff Davis in the South, together with the policy of the President in the matter of appointments—all are preparing the way for the disintegration of the democratic party.

The article on the "Economies of Chemistry" was written by Miss Mabel M. Brown, of the Senior class in the High School, as a regular class exercise. The interesting information therein contained is used in a manner which is exceedingly creditable to the young lady, and we are glad to give it place in our columns. The young lady we understand is to deliver the valedictory at the graduation of her class, and at the close of her school year will go to Wellesley College.

The favorite Empire State will come to Boston in the middle of June, and on the 17th will make a charter trip in the bay. About July 1 regular trips will be resumed from Battery wharf. Captain J. M. Phillips is supervising the improvements. E. Burt Phillips, the general manager, will direct the business of the company and E. W. McGlenen will act as business agent.

Rev. James K. Applebee, who has so long and acceptably filled the pastorate over the Unitarian Society at Parker Memorial Hall, Boston, has removed to Marblehead in response to a call from the Society in that town. The Boston Commonwealth has published each week Mr. Applebee's discourses and will continue to record his utterances in his pulpit.

It is hard to foretell Dr. Loring's chances in the Essex district. His election would strengthen the social element of Massachusetts at the national capital.—Boston Herald.

Is that what we elect a representative to Congress for?

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

In the Superior Court Friday, Dennis Sweeney, for receiving stolen property, was fined $23.33.

A boy named O'Donnell, on Midway street, was run over by a large four horse team and severely bruised and had his shoulder dislocated.

Mr. Edmund Woodbury injured his thumb recently by slipping from the step of his baker's team.

Paul Lesson, who stole the razors and scissors from J. Henry Sneider last winter, has been sent to the House of Correction for four months.

A little pet dog belonging to Charles G. Folsom was horribly mangled by a bull pup belonging to a neighbor one day last week. The little fellow will survive it, but will carry some of the marks till his death.

James Kelley for getting drunk was fined $3 and costs.

Mr. Thomas H. O'Keefe, the expressman, had a valuable setter dog stolen from his house on Shillaber street, and it was recovered from a fellow named Joyce. The case will come up in the Salem police court to-day.

Albert Barnes and a young lady from Lynn, were driving on Washington street last Friday, when the horse became somewhat fractious, and started to run, when the driver grabbed at the lines and turned so short a corner as to upset the buggy, and throw the occupants out.

Last Thursday afternoon a little match peddler from Boston was playing about the square, when he was picked up by H. C. Wilson, the hack driver, and lifted on the back of the horse. The horse became frightened and ran away, and the boy was thrown to the ground and run over. He was taken to the railroad station and Dr. Foster called, but no bones were broken. Wilson's horse was stopped before any damage was done.

A short time ago several servant girls, who live with families on Washington street, went for a stroll in the fields beyond N. M. Quint's house, and as they were about returning they saw running toward them several young men perfectly naked. The girls turned and fled and their outcries attracted the attention of a couple of men who came to their assistance, and the nude statues disappeared.

In the police court last Monday Mary Brennan, for being drunk, was fined $5 and costs or two months in the Alms House.

The police visited the gypsies at Brown's Pond, recently, in search of a 11 year old girl that has been missing from Stoneham. They did not find her.

There seems to be no doubt that Nathan, the barber, has left town for "pastures new and victims fresh." Claims against him are coming in daily and it is probable that most of his creditors will lose all, as there is nothing but the fixtures, and those were put in by parties who have a mortgage on them. It is funny that a stranger can come into town and find so many easy victims. The hotel barber shop went up like a rocket and came down like a stick. It is at present being run by John Riordan in the interest of the creditors. The furniture was removed yesterday.

Unless there is a bull dog placed on guard, there are some people that seem to think everything they see belongs to them. One day last week Treasurer Henderson, of the Salem Five Cents Savings Bank, came up to look after the Tim McAuliffe property, which belongs to the bank, and found a man industriously cutting sod from the field just as if it belonged to him. He was driven away and an investigation showed that all the stones that formed the cellar under the house that was burned a few years ago had also been taken away. It is fortunate the house was burned or that might have been stolen.

Officers Peasley, Crowley, Goodwin, Ruth and Grady chartered a hack last Sunday for a pleasure ride, and instead of going "over the line" they headed for the place of Timothy T. Riordan on Tremont street, and fearing that those inside would not share the good things with them, they burst open the door and helped themselves to all the ale which was found abundantly in bottles and kegs, whiskey and other liquors found in jugs and demijohns, and in fact to everything of that kind they could lay their hands on, while the thirty or more regular patrons of the place looked on and admired the gall of the officers. While they were getting ready to depart the people in the neighborhood to the number of 500 turned out and gave them an ovation. The case will be called to-morrow.

A tramp attempted to steal a door mat on Main street, last Wednesday afternoon, but was seen by the lady of the house and ran away as she gave the alarm.

A dog fight on Fulton street, last Saturday, created a sensation and drew a large crowd of spectators who stood by and witnessed the brutal scene. Both dogs fought till they were exhausted, when the owner of one of them appeared and took his wounded canine home.

A man on a fruit cart and another on an express wagon got into an altercation on Lowell street, last Saturday, and each used his whip over the other. The fruit vender, finding he was getting the worst of the bargain, drove rapidly away, followed for a short distance by the teamster who had jumped from his team.

Edward Foley, a section hand employed on the Eastern division, met with a serious accident Thursday forenoon. He was going from the Port to Peabody on a hand car, and on a down grade the men who were working the car let go the crank. A projecting nut on one of the cars caught Foley's sleeve and cast him in front of the car, which passed directly over him throwing it from the track. The other men on the car picked him up and conveyed him to the Port, where his wounds were dressed by Dr. Frost, and he was taken to his home on Essex street. No bones were broken, but his face and body were badly cut. The section hands say it was the narrowest escape from death they ever witnessed in their railroading experience.—Danvers Mirror.

Messrs. E. & C. Woodman are issuing a circular of interest to gardeners and purchasers of vegetable and other plants and flowers. These enterprising gentlemen have made large additions the past season to their buildings, and have now one of the most capacious and conveniently arranged greenhouses to be found in this country. Their houses are five in number, of sizes as follows: One 109x26; one 80x10; two 30x20 each; one 25x16; and a shed 30x15. The location is excellent, at Tapleyville on the line of the street railway, where they have about one acre of land in cultivation, and some three acres in other places. They keep everything in the line of florists' and gardeners' supplies, and are prepared to fill large or small orders at short notice. Four men are employed at present in the carrying on of the business, and there are few things more interesting to an admirer of nature's innumerable floral and vegetable forms than a walk through these premises. E. E. Woodman, the senior member of the firm, is a graduate of the State Agricultural college and has had large experience in the line of his business in the years since then, and parties can be sure of getting from him only perfect goods, thorough instruction how to use them, and strictly honorable dealing in all particulars.—Danvers Mirror.

TESTIMONIAL FROM PROF. BILL.

W. J. LEFAVOUR, Dear Sir: It gives me great pleasure to be able to endorse the Ivers & Pond piano. In resonance, volubility, firmness and purity of tone it will compare favorably with any piano made in the country. I heartily recommend it to the public and my friends who are intending to purchase. Yours truly, C. R. Bill, teacher of music in public schools.

Wednesday Evening, May, 19, 1886,

HOME HAPPENINGS.

One department of work for the W C. T. U. is that of flower missions which our new branch of this army, the Y., is entering upon with much enthusiasm under the direction of Miss Cassino. Jennie Casseday, of Louisville, Ky., was for many years a shut in invalid. One day a bouquet came to her as an inspiration and since then, lying on her couch unable to rise, and often in excessive pain, she plans and directs the work that carries to the sick and sorrowful, the convict, the felon and the prisoner, the poor and the miserable in all parts of our land, a bunch of flowers to which a text of scripture or a temperance message, with perhaps a knot of white ribbon that is a sweet reminder that hearts are sorry for individual trouble, sin or wretchedness. In hospitals, jails, prisons, reformatories and institutions of all kinds, this work is touching hearts that have resisted all means to make tender and contrite. The boys and girls are giving a helping hand to this charity by hunting for wild flowers and soliciting from their neighbor's gardens to bring to the young ladies who will superintend the mission. Friday is the day for the labor, and as the shut in of our own town are first to be remembered, and afterwards, when there is an abundance of blooms, contributions are to go to the larger field of Boston, or other places, it is hoped that everybody will give encouragement to the endeavor of our girls to carry God's blessed sir and sunshine embodied in flowers into places from which it is shut out.

It is expected that Miss Caroline E. Burnap, the founder of the home for aged and friendless women, at 19 Common street, Boston, will be present at the meeting of the W. C. T. U. on Friday, at 3 P. M., and help in the exercises. Miss Burnap started this home some eight or nine years ago with one room, one inmate, and the pledge of one dollar. She has never done any begging in any way for it, but has been enabled to successfully provide for many friendless women during the intervening time, having now in her care fifteen or sixteen. Her faith in God to provide has been well realized so that she can say her women have had all they needed even to the horse car tickets for "outings." No entrance fee to a residence in this home is required, but only that the person shall be really needy and of such personal habits as can be tolerated. Some ladies in our town have for a number of years highly appreciated this good woman's self denying work, have been pleased to meet her in temperance gatherings, and always enjoyed hearing her sing, consequently she will be an honored guest on Friday. All are invited to the meeting. A movement is on foot to have a fair in Horticultural Hall next December, for this home, and Peabody will make some donations, but as this is the undertaking of friends of Miss Burnap, she knows very little about it.

The semi-annual election of officers of the A. H. B. A. took place Monday evening at their hall with the following results: President, Malachi J. Donlon; Vice President, Charles Cassidy; Secretary, James McCann; Collector, Thomas Maguire; Treasurer, James Sherry; Auditor, Peter J. Donnelly; Directors, Patrick O'Keefe, Daniel F. Calnan, Timothy O'Brien, Edward Sexton, Richard Herlihy; Visiting Committee, James Daley 1st, James O'Connor, Patrick Lyons, Thomas Hayes, Peter McBride, Richard Bagley; Librarian, John Pease; Assistant Librarian, Dennis Sweeney.

By enactment of the present Legislature any woman over twenty-one years of age can by personal or written application have her name taken at her residence for the asesssment of a poll tax by the Assessor, when he makes his annual call to obtain the names of the male voters. After receiving the tax bill payment (of the poll tax of fifty cents) should be made at the collector's office. The receipted tax bill must be presented in person to the Registrars of Voters, and if the person presenting it is found qualified she can be registered on the voting list.

Mrs. George Murphy, nee Miss Katie Kerwin, residing on Fulton street, died last Friday, and was buried from St. John's Church, Sunday. She had been married but a short time, and had a large circle of friends, by whom she was highly esteemed. There was an unusually large attendance at her funeral and the floral offerings were many and beautiful, among them being one from Mrs. William T. Lee in whose family she had lived previous to her marriage.

Town Clerk N. H. Poor has succeeded in placing the notes of the town which have just matured, so that the interest will amount to only about 3 1-2 per cent.

John S. Prince, of the Massachusetts Board of Education, met the teachers of the grammar schools of this town last Thursday afternoon, in the hall of the Centre school house. Mr. Prince presented, among other things, a new and comprehensive system of map drawing which commended itself favorably to the teachers. Mr. Prince also spoke earnestly in favor of more and better apparatus in the schools.

The degree staff of Masconomo Tribe, No 11 I. O. O. R. of this town having been invited by the Grand Council to exemplify the work before the new tribe forming in Newburyport, a special train will probably be run for the accommodation of those brothers who desire to go. This is a compliment to the work done by the degree staff, as the Tribe here have only been instituted a few months.

The supreme judicial court at Boston gave a decision in the case of Joseph Nash of the Daily Law Record against John Larthrop, official reporter of supreme court decisions, which allows copies of all decisions to be made and printed by any one who may choose to, instead of being confined as hitherto to one official publication. A petition to that effect was largely signed in this town.

Contrary to expectation, Henry M. Cross, Esq., who was engaged to deliver the Memorial Day address before Post 50, is compelled to be in Arkansas on business connected with the Desha Lumber & Planting Co., of which he is Secretary, and has engaged Rev. H. E. Mott of Newburyport to take his place. Mr. Cross writes that Rev. Mr. Mott will deliver a fine and acceptable address.

The Band of Hope was favored at the meeting Saturday afternoon with the presence of Master Dexter Cobb, the president of the Wesley Chapel Band of Hope, Salem, and thirteen of the members of that band. The hour was passed very pleasantly with speeches, recitations and songs. All separated with a renewed feeling of gladness that they had an interest in this work.

Mr. John T. Knight, the genial collector of the coffee and free reading room at Gloucester, was in town last Saturday and authorized B. F. Stevens, Nathaniel Symonds and Miss Mary J. Floyd to receive contributions of books, papers and money from any of our citizens who desire to contribute. This room is doing good among the seamen and a great benefit to the temperance cause in the city of Gloucester.

Mr. Richard Hurley has been at work on the trees about the residence of Mr. Stephen Blaney on Washington street, and those on the street have been treated to a thorough washing. Everything about the place looks very attractive and is much admired by passers by.

Mr. Geo. M. Foster will build an inexpensive residence on his newly purchased land at Mount Pleasant. It will be occupied only during the summer season, Mr. Foster feeling it is necessary for him to have more exercise. Possibly others will build in the same neighborhood.

While some of the furniture and effects of Nathan, the barber, whose trip to New York has been necessarily prolonged, were being removed from his house, an overcoat belonging to a well known business man in town was discovered. The gentleman had left it in the barber shop.

It is understood that Charles O. Putnam will be division superintendent of the Wenham & Asbury Grove branch of the Naumkeag street railway. This would be satisfactory to residents at the grove. Mr. Putnam is at present the genial superintendent.

The cars on the different divisions of the Naumkeag street Railway are to be designated by their color as follows: Peabody and Beverly, brown; Marblehead, white; Wenham, green, and Cove, yellow. The end lights in the cars will also be of different colors.

The officers of the Enos Electric Railroad have gone to New York to-night. The railroad committee of the State legislature and a party of capitalists, will inspect the road to-morrow. In the company are also A. A. Messer and Stephen Blaney of this town.

Southern strawberries are in the market and retail at 20 and 25 cents a basket. Pineapples have also appeared and may be had for 20 and 25 cents each. Meats have advanced a little, flour is steady and eggs still remain at 20 cents a dozen.

Since the frost has failed to kill the peach crop, some other reason for the regular death was necessary, remarks an exchange. The crop will be ruined this year because the girls wear birds in their hats instead of letting them kill the peach orchard insects.

A man named Lowell, while handling a cow on Tremont street, last Saturday, was injured quite severely by the cow raising her head suddenly and striking him in the eye. Fortunately the sight was not injured, but the eye was badly discolored.

Where Hours go Merrily.

Mr. and Mrs. David Meade, who have recently moved to Washington street from Lynn, were very pleasantly surprised last Friday evening, by the return of their daughter who has been at Los Angeles, Cal., for the past four years. The young lady had an opportunity to return with friends who were coming east, and so gave her parents a surprise. She will spend the summer here returning in the fall.

A very pleasant anniversary was observed by Mr. and Mrs. William White last Thursday evening, when a large number of their friends "dropped in" to help celebrate the fifth anniversary of their marriage. A pleasant feature of the occasion was the cutting of a loaf of wedding cake that had been kept since the marriage day. It had retained all its virtues and was as good as when first baked.

Rev. Mr. Phinney and wife, the new pastor of the Methodist Church, was tendered a reception at the vestry, last Thursday evening, by members of the society. Mr. Isaac Drown, with a few pleasing remarks, introduced the new pastor, who as pleasantly responded. The evening was spent in social converse, music and literary exercises. During the evening Mrs. Phinney was presented with an elegant basket of flowers.

A large number of friends of Mr. and Mrs. George O. Nimblet called on them at their home near Washington street, last Wednesday evening, and enjoyed an old fashioned party, where time passed merrily with music, games and refreshments. The party broke up at a reasonable hour.

A special car conveyed a load of Peabody Red Men and their wives to the grand ball of Agawam Tribe, of Danvers, last Wednesday night.

Mrs. R. H. Wilkinson, Miss Louise E. Osborn and Miss Maggie Poor will visit Kansas City, Mo., making a stay of six weeks or more.

Dr. C. C. Pike, F. T. Arnold and F. Osborne left last Wednesday for a trip to Moosehead Lake.

The social party at Ashland Hall by W. J. Flannagan and Clarence Moore, last Wednesday evening, was well attended and much enjoyed.

The exhibitions given at the Skating Rink by the Kickapoo Indians and their company, under the management of Dr. J. E. Collins, are giving excellent satisfaction. Last evening, Dr. Healey, one of the proprietors of the medicine, was in town and lectured. This evening a novelty entertainment will be given to which an admission fee of ten cents will be charged, with ten cents extra for a reserved seat. The programme is the finest one yet presented. We are glad to know that the entertainments are being well patronized. Their medicine is on sale at the drug stores as well as at the Indian wigwam, and Dr. Collins guarantees that all his patrons shall be satisfied.

The Murray Club of the Universalist church closed the season with their meeting last Monday evening. An entertainment consisting of chorus singing and refreshments, served to make things pleasant. The treasurer's report showed $151 in the treasury.

The Worcester Telegram one of the brightest and most independent papers in the state, will be issued daily commencing last Monday. There is no doubt about its success.

M. James Corbett and Miss Kate Mahoney were married by Rev. Father Masterson last Thursday evening. Their friends remembered them with numerous beautiful presents.

Thomas Flynn, a vegetable peddler, well known in town, residing in Salem, went to Boston with a load of vegetables yesterday and had a stroke of paralysis, dying almost instantly.

The shipments of leather from Peabody and Salem for the week ending May 15 were 4286 rolls, 567 sides, 252 bundles, 13 barrels, 4 bags of leather, 14 bundles, 6 casks of skins.

Representatives of different fire insurance companies have been this week inspecting a number of manufactories. Most of them were considered good risks.

AYER'S SUGAR CATHARTIC COATED PILLS

CURE

Headache, Nausea, Dizziness, and Drowsiness. They stimulate the Stomach, Liver, and Bowels, to healthy action, assist digestion, and increase the appetite. They combine cathartic, diuretic, and tonic properties of the greatest value, are a purely vegetable compound, and may be taken with perfect safety, either by children or adults. E. L. Thomas, Framingham, Mass., writes: "For a number of years I was subject to violent Headaches, arising from a disordered condition of the stomach and bowels. About a year ago I commenced the use of Ayer's Pills, and have not had a headache since." W. P. Hannah, Gormley P. O., York Co., Ont., writes: "I have used Ayer's Pills for the last thirty years, and can safely say that I have never found their equal as a cathartic medicine. I am never without them in my house." C. D. Moore, Elgin, Ill., writes: "Indigestion, Headache, and Loss of Appetite, had so weakened and debilitated my system, that I was obliged to give up work. After being under the doctor's care for two weeks, without getting any relief, I began taking Ayer's Pills. My appetite and strength returned, and I was soon enabled to resume my work, in perfect health."

Ye Plumber and Ye Saint.

BY GEORGE RANDALL.

A plumber died once on a time,
And winged his rapid flight
Away from earth and earthly cares,
Up to the realms of light.

Before St. Peter's awful form,
He reverently bent low,
And suppliantly begged that he
Inside the gate might go.

"What did you do when on the earth?"
The saintly keeper said;
"I worked at plumbing, mighty sir,
To earn my daily bread."

"Now, by my faith," St. Peter cried,
"We need a chap like you,
To make some needed changes here,
And you the job may do."

The plumber quickly raised his head,
With the same stately air
He had before the important day
He climbed the golden stair.

The plumber finished up the work,
And came back bowing low,
When Peter asked him for his bill,
And mildly called him slow.

The good old saint reviewed the charge,
His face with anger burned;
And then upon the cheeky soul
In righteous wrath he turned.

"Why, all the gold in Heaven, man,
With all the jewels, too,
Are not enough to square this bill,—
I don't know what to do."

The plumber unabashed, replied,
With no change on his face,
"I'd like the pay, but still I'll take
A mortgage on the place."

Marjorie.

"Sweet Marjorie is gone," you say,
Then with your sympathetic smile,
"Who gave has taken her away;
He only lent her for a while."

You think, then, I am quite bereft?
That only this poor mound, whose head
A marble cherub marks, is left
For me since Marjorie is dead?

But yonder is her rocking chair;
See on the shelf her drinking cup,
Her playthings in the corner there;
She never liked to pick them up!

These you can see; when I say this,
Old friend, you neither smile nor start,
What if the face, the voice you miss,
Are of my common life a part?

I see her when my garden walks
Are brave with rows of daffodils,
And sometimes to her doll she talks,
Sometimes her pinafore she fills.

When yonder cherry tree is white
She shakes the blossoms from its bough
Amid the shower a laughing sprite;
Dear heart! I never scold her now.

When Enoch brings the cows at night,
She waits beside the pasture bars;
Against them in the failing light
She leans to count the first faint stars.

Your eyes are dim, you cannot see
The face that blesses me to-day;
The Lord who gave my Marjorie
Will never take her quite away.
—Ruth Marriner in the Congregationalist.

My Ship Comes In.

BY ROBERT J. BURDETTE.

'Neath summer's sun and winter's blast,
While the long years swept slowly past
I waited, looking out to sea,
For sure my ship would come to me.

Ah, sure! For with this morning's sun
My glad heart heard her signal gun;
And safely down the sheltering bay
I saw my ship come in to-day.

And then I learned that she had been
Eleven weeks in quarantine,
While yellow fever sunk the crew
Deep in its complimentary blue.

And long before, while tempest-tossed,
Her mast and rigging had been lost;
And then the crew, a frightened horde,
Had flung the cargo overboard.

And then a steamer of the line
Laid hold upon this ship of mine,
And towed her through the waters wild,
And fearful claims for salvage filed.

And then I learned the companee
That had insured my ship for me,
Had gone up higher than a kite—
Bursted wide open out of sight.

And so again I sit all day
Down where the restless breakers play,
And wish—though all the good it does—
My ship had stayed out where it was.

And when the evening, gray and dim,
Fall's on the ocean's misty brim,
With weary heart and quivering lip
I wish I'd never had no ship.

Pain and dread attend the use of most Catarrh remedies. Liquids and snuffs are unpleasant as well as dangerous Ely's Cream Balm is safe, pleasant, easily applied with the finger, and a sure cure. It cleanses the nasal passages and heals the inflamed membrane, giving relief from the first application. 50c.

From the pastor of the Olivet Baptist Church, Philadelphia, Pa. I was so much troubled with catarrh it seriously affected my voice. One bottle of Ely's Cream Balm did the work. My voice is fully restored.—B. F. Liepsner.

Ahead of time—currant worms!

No other preparation meets the wants of the debilitated system as does Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

BOURBON

Is a word usually applied to a settled, conservative thing. We speak of Bourbon Democrats, meaning those of the old school. It is applied to the G. O. Taylor Whiskey, as Old Bourbon, meaning a safe, reliable and proven article. Pure Rye shows what is meant. Ask your Druggist or Grocer for the G. O. Taylor Bourbon and Rye Whiskey, and you get all you ask and pay for. It is bottled by C. H. GRAVES & SONS, Boston, and is not equalled for purity or medicinal quality.

CONSTIPATION!

There is no medium through which disease so often attacks the system as by Constipation, and there is no other ill flesh is heir to, more apt to be neglected, from the fact material inconvenience may not be immediately felt from irregular action of the bowels. When there is not regular action, the retention of decayed and effete matter, with its poisonous gases, soon poisons the whole system by being absorbed into it, causing piles, fistula, headache, impure blood and many other serious affections. BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS will immediately relieve, and one bottle positively cure or relieve any case of Constipation.

"Was troubled for a year with torpid liver and indigestion, and after trying everything imaginable, used BURDOCK BLOOD BITTERS. The first bottle revived me and the second cured me entirely."—J. S. Williamson. Rochester, N. Y.

Be Warned

in time. Kidney diseases may be prevented by purifying, renewing, and invigorating the blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. When, through debility, the action of the kidneys is perverted, these organs rob the blood of its needed constituent, albumen, which is passed off in the urine, while worn out matter, which they should carry off from the blood, is allowed to remain. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, the kidneys are restored to proper action, and Albuminuria, or

Bright's Disease

is prevented. Ayer's Sarsaparilla also prevents inflammation of the kidneys, and other disorders of these organs. Mrs. Jas. W. Weld, Forest Hill st., Jamaica Plain, Mass., writes: "I have had a complication of diseases, but my greatest trouble has been with my kidneys. Four bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla made me feel like a new person; as well and strong as ever." W. M. McDonald, 46 Summer st., Boston, Mass., had been troubled for years with Kidney Complaint. By the use of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, he not only the disease from assuming a fatal form, but was restored to perfect health. John McLellan, cor. Bridge and Third sts., Lowell, Mass., writes: "For several years I suffered from Dyspepsia and Kidney Complaint, the latter being so severe at times that I could scarcely attend to my work. My appetite was poor, and I was much emaciated; but by using my appetite and digestion improved, and my health has been perfectly restored."

Prevented

AYER'S Sarsaparilla

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS.

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthy water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fish-monger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shall be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall NOT allow their children thus withdrawn to re enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soil carts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov. 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M]

Alvin Joslin, after a long absence from the Hub, comes to the stage of the Boston Theatre this week with new attractions. Charles L. Davis is to be seen, of course, as Uncle Alvin, the old farmer from New England, who goes to New York to see the sights. The story of Alvin Joslin is told in four acts, and in the last there is to be expected a dazzling display of diamonds. The orchestra connected with Mr. Davis' enterprise includes noted soloists, and their performances will not be the least enjoyable features of the week's season of Alvin Joslin at the Boston.

A great success in London and New York, the powerful drama Saints and Sinners is to be offered to consideration at the Park Theatre this week by the Madison Square company. The play is brought out with the elaborate and beautiful scenery that won praise from the New York public; and the production is effective in every detail. The favorite character actor J. H. Stoddart, plays the role of the old clergyman who is the central figure in this emotional drama. Saints and Sinners will be given only this week.

In its way, Neil Burgess' personation of Mrs. Puffy is as much a work of art as anything offered on the stage. The portrayal is drawn from nature, and it interests, therefore, all sorts and conditions of people. Vim is now in its fourth week at the Bijou. It should prove a potent attraction as long as the comedy success can hold the boards of this parlor theatre of Boston.

John T. Raymond, that most popular comedian, will make his bow on the stage of the Boston Museum this week in his most successful role—Colonel Mulberry Sellers. Especial interest attaches to Mr. Raymond's appearance, as he is to appear in conjunction with the company of the Boston Museum. The roles of Laura and Emily Hawkins are to be taken respectively by May Davenport and Helen Standish. Colonel Mulberry Sellers will hold the stage for one week only.

Kate Forsythe will appear in Stella at the Park Theatre May 31, supported by Lilila Vane, Grace Thorne, Rose Snyder, Mrs. Fernandez, Sara Thiell, Fred de Belleville, Frazer Coulter, Arthur Forrest, Dan Maguinnis, M. B. Syner, Henry Vaughn and C. W. Vance.

Bennett & Moulton have secured the right to present the Black Crook next season over the New England circuit, and through New York, Pennsylvania and Indiana. Rufus Somerby will assume the the management of the attraction. About fifty people will be carried It is intended to play in the smaller cities.

Margaret Mather is to play in San Francisco, California, this summer, opening there a six weeks engagement, July 24.

Mr. Arthur Falkland, who has been playing Cis Farrington in The Magistrate with such success during the tour of the Boston Museum company, is engaged by Manager Field for John T. Raymond's brief season.

Honorable George Bancroft, the historian, Rev. George E. Ellis, D. D., president of the Massachusetts Historical Society, and Hon. Charles K. Tuckerman, our former minister to Greece, will be among the prominent contributors to the Magazine of American History for June. Dr. Bender will also discuss the prospects of an early dissolution of the present constitutional system of Canada.

Frank Leslie's Sunday Magazine for June is especially noticeable for its numerous full-page illustrations, some of which are exceptionally beautiful. The Luray Cave, in Page Co., Va., is the subject of several fine cuts. A beautiful picture is a reproduction of a painting by Augustin Lhardy, entitled "Preparations for a Day in the Country"; and a number of contrasted scenes on the two rivers, the Rhine and the Hudson, give some idea of the beauty of these two famous streams. Many other beautiful pictures fill the number, while the literary portion is up to the high level of this favorite family magazine. Published by Mrs. Frank Leslie, 53, 55 and 57 Park Place, New York.

The important article on the British Navy, by Sir Edward Reed, which attracted much attention in the February Harper's, and the description of Krupp establishment in March, will be followed in the June number by a timely paper on the U. S. Navy, by Rear-admiral Edward Simpson, of the Navy Department at Washington, with a large number of excellent illustrations. The history of our navy is briefly sketched, and the record is one that Uncle Sam need not be ashamed of. Previous to last year our navy consisted only of thirty-two wooden vessels, two iron sloops of war, and a few old primitive monitors. In 1883 the construction of three steam cruisers, and a dispatch boat, with steel plates, was authorized. These vessels are the Chicago, Boston and Atlanta, which are nearly finished, and the Dolphin, now doing service. It would be impossible for us to cope even with some of the smaller powers in our own hemisphere, and the naval armaments of Europe make our deficiency a humiliation. Public opinion is stirring Congress to action, and the article mentions some important improvements which are in operation. It is to be hoped that this able paper will hasten the adjustment of our navy to the Age of Steel.

THE LADIES'

DONGOLA!

OFFICE OF ORDWAY & CLARK,

MANUFACTURERS OF

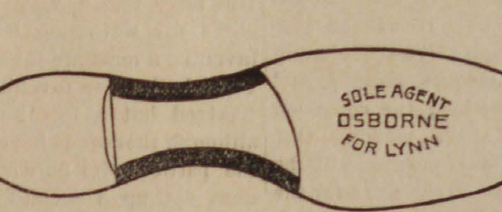
LADIES' FINE BOOTS AND SHOES.

HAVERHILL, MASS., February 25, 1886.

MR. WELLMAN OSBORNE, Lynn, Mass.

DEAR SIR: We have this day sent you a large invoice of our justly celebrated DONGOLA BOOTS. You will find they are all that has been claimed for them, and far ahead and entirely different from Kangaroo, Glove or Mat Kid. There is no other boot made for Ladies' wear which, for softness of finish, elegance of fit combined with such lasting durability, will give the entire satisfaction of this boot. They are something that has long been needed, as they wear better than French or American Kid, and will not stretch, turn purple, or look rusty. So popular and unprecedented has become the demand for these goods throughout the country, as the merits of the leather have become known, and so limited the importation of skins out of which the goods are manufactured, and so many imitations under similar names have been placed upon the market, that it has been found necessary to copyright the name.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED WITH OUR AGENTS NAME UPON THE SOLE, THUS:



Also the word "DONGOLA" upon the inside lining.

We shall give you the EXCLUSIVE SALE OF THESE BOOTS IN YOUR CITY, feeling confident with your large trade that they will find a ready market, judging from the large sales they have met with in other cities. Respectfully yours,

MUSICAL NOTES.

The operetta of the Berry Pickers was given in the vestry of the Universalist church, last Wednesday and Thursday evenings, by the Murray Club. The cast was given in these columns last week, and the performance was very creditable to all concerned. Many of the choruses were given by the younger children, who entered with zest into the spirit of the operetta. They knew their parts well and the merry games, the picking of berries, the usual sports of children up to the crowning of one of their number with flowers—all was well conceived and happily carried out.

There was a deal of sameness to the music, the most of it being taken in very moderate tempo. It were a pity the composer had not put one or two numbers into it of sufficient life to keep people awake. Elaborate music is not to be expected in such a work, but there is no excuse for so much of it in the time of the "Dead March in Saul." One thing, however, is to be said, and this is very creditable to the directors—the spirit and acting of the young people made up what was lacking in the music itself.

The gypsy scene in the last act is one of the best in the operetta, and the ladies who took the parts looked and acted like veritable gypsies. The solos and duets here require something above the ordinary work, and they were safely entrusted to Mrs. Hagar, Miss Ida Farnham and A. Harrington. Mrs. Sprague took the part of the sailor's wife and the first evening took also the part assigned to Mrs. Hagar, assuming it at a few hours' notice. Mrs. Sprague has a clear, true voice, and her entire impersonation was easily first.

Much credit is due Miss Nellie M. Bartlett, the accompanist and director of the music. She has had the sole charge of the rehearsals, which represented no small amount of labor. To prepare the rendering of the choruses by the younger children, which included the commitment of both words and music, so that every part should go smoothly and easily, required an amount of patience and skill which few outside of those experienced in such work understand. The stage settings and the acting was in charge of Charles S. Goldthwait, to whom also is due a large share of the effects produced. Mr. Goldthwait, we understand, has been present at every rehearsal, and to him and Miss Bartlett, more than to any one else, is due the faithful representation of the operetta. The scenery came from Boston. The attendance was good on both evenings and a handsome sum must have been netted to the club. An incident of a very pleasant nature, not laid down in the bills, occurred at the close of the performance Thursday night. Just at the close of the last chorus, when everybody was on the stage, as the curtain was about to fall, Miss Alice Nelson stepped forward from a front seat in the audience and presented Mrs. Sprague with a purse containing over one hundred dollars. It was a gift from the parish and was a complete surprise to the recipient. While Mrs. Sprague was trying to recover from the surprise the curtain fell.

We understand that the Murray Club have in preparation another musical performance, the date of which will be announced later.

The musical portion of the graduation exercises of the Peabody High School will be rehearsed once a week under Prof. Bill in the Peabody Institute, from this time until the close of the summer term.

Mr. Theodore Chute, one of the tenors of the Hawthorne male quartette, gives a concert this evening in the Town Hall, Swampscott, assisted by Miss Louise Baldwin, Miss Annie L. Davis, of Lynn, pianist, and Leland T. Powers, the impersonator.

We understand the Salem Symphony Orchestra gave a concert in Academy Hall last evening. Beyond this general knowledge we have no information.

Myron W. Whitney, the basso of the American Opera Company, receives $600 per week, and has renewed his engagement for next season at an advanced salary.

Gilbert and Sullivan's new opera is expected to be ready for production early in the fall. London Truth learns that its central idea is a skit upon English commercial enterprise and humbug, as exemplified by the pretended British horror of annexing new territory which, however, we manage to acquire at the rate of a thousand square miles, more or less, per annum. The scene of the opera, a little bird whispers to me, is laid in Egypt at the present day. The heroine is a descendant of an ancient Egyptian princess.

Only for the present week can the reigning Offenbach opera, "The Drum Major's Daughter," be enjoyed. These the farewell appearances of William T Carlton, Ray Samuels, Louise Paullin, Alice Vincent, W. H. Clark, and their associates in the Carlton Opera Company, should attract to the Hollis Street Theatre the largest of audiences. The opera and its representation are certainly worthy of generous patronage at the hands of the music loving public.

The event for comic opera lovers, and their name is legion, is the production at the Hollis Street Theatre, May 24, of "Pepita," the popular success, now in the third month of its run at the Union Square Theatre. This is Mr. Soloman's latest opera and his most successful one. It will be produced by the original cast, including Lillian Russell, Jacques Kruger, and all the popular favorites, the composer directing the orchestra in person. One hundred and seven people will be brought over from New York for the performance, and all the original scenery and costumes, which are said to have cost J. M. Hill $20,000, will be brought also. The piece is announced for two weeks.

The representations of the Mikado by the Salem Schubert Club last week were enjoyed by goodly sized audiences. The arrangement of the hall was artistic and beautiful, and somehow, although the performance could not be ranked with the professional, it was a deal more enjoyable. The choruses were finely done, and the solo parts pleasing. That the work of the club was thoroughly appreciated is evidenced by the large attendance both evenings.

SPARKS.

Fire was discovered at 3.45 o'clock Sunday morning in the barn and storehouse of Daniel Rabilley, junk dealer, in the rear of Parsons street. When first discovered it was in the open shed on the east side of the building, but spread rapidly to the main building, a frame building about 20x30 feet, packed full of old junk, rags, paper, etc., of which there was a number of tons. Hose 2 was the first to respond, and in a short time had two streams on the fire from the hydrant at the foot of Parsons street, followed by Hose 1, Steamer 1 and Hose 3 and 4. Water was thrown into the burning building in great quantities, but the fire working into the rags, defied the best efforts of the firemen for over an hour before it was extinguished. The Hook and Ladder men were obliged to pull the mass of rags and paper over entirely and have it wet down. The alarm was given first from the whistle on L. B. Southwick & Co's factory by Chief Engineer Buxton, who thought that the fire lay in the rear of Nelson & Merrill's tannery, and ordered Hose 1 to lay a line from the hydrant at Little's mill, but discovered his mistake in time to prevent over 50 feet of hose being laid. Steamer 1 also hauled up at the same hydrant only to find that the fire was beyond Washington street. The damage to building and stock will amount to about $900, on which is an insurance of $200 on building and $200 on stock, both in the Firemen's of Newark, N. J., placed by F. E. Farnham. Foreman J. H. Miller of the H. & L. while trying to get on Steamer 1, as it was passing the Town House, was thrown to the ground and received pretty bad bruises on his side and hip The new stalls in the Central Station, worked to perfection. Mr. Rabilley lost his dog "John L" in the fire.

The engineers have purchased 1000 feet of the balance woven hose of the Fabric Hose Company of Warmick, N. Y. W. H. Turner, Boston agent.

z

E. Burt Phillips, the well known manager of the Empire State, has established a cloak and wrap store on Union street. The Globe on Sunday refers to it and heads it "An old Salt's Venture," and says the Captain is the recipient of many congratulations. E. Burt Phillips has been for the last twenty years engaged in the manufacture of ladies' slippers on Pearl street, and must be highly amused to be called an "old salt" by a "fresh" reporter. The Globe has got him confounded with Capt. J. M, Phillips, the Empire State captain.

JOHN A. ENOS.

Mr. John A. Enos, having disposed of his interest in the Enos Electric Railway to a party of well known gentlemen, he will shortly sever his connection with the company and probably go to Washington and "talk up" his patent ballot box before a congressional committee. At this time a biographical sketch of Mr. Enos would not be out of place, and we publish the following from the Winthrop Gazette of recent date:—"John A. Enos, a born inventor, is the son of John R. Enos of Peabody, and is the eldest of five children. He was born at Peabody and received a common school education. At the age of fourteen years he joined Company D, 14th Regiment, and after serving some time was appointed orderly to Gen. G. A. D'Russey at Arlington Heights, and here learned the art of telegraphy, in which he became very proficient. From here he was called to the very prominent position of operator at the mouth of the Potomac River, which post he occupied at the close of the war. At Washington he had a very narrow escape from losing his life. He was passing through the streets with his regiment after a severe rain storm and fell into an open culvert, but was rescued after considerable difficulty by Adjutant-General Dalton. On his return home he followed the business of a currier in Peabody, but was always working on inventions. His first invention was a currier's brush machine, which he sold immediately on completion for $1000. His next was a very ingenious machine for whitening leather; he also invented a machine for stuffing leather. From both these inventions Mr. Enos received but a few hundred dollars, although thousands have been made by the parties who purchased them. He next got up a second whitening machine, for which he received $1500 on completion. He afterwards invented a leather splitting machine, which he sold for a mere song and for which the purchasers are now receiving a royalty of $2.50 per day for each machine.

In addition to completing his elevated railroad, he has just patented an ingenious machine called the "Ballot Register," which is intended for use in all legislative bodies. It is a simple device for registering the votes of members. To illustrate:—Should the Speaker call for the yea and nay vote on any question, all a member would have to do would be to press a button on his desk and his vote would be registered on a disk in rear of the Speaker with the name of the member voting, and on a dial in the centre would be registered the total vote. He has also invented an electric light which can be run very economically by an ordinary galvanic battery. For the past fifteen years, Mr. Enos has devoted himself entirely to inventing, and has taken out upwards of twenty patents, all of which have been more or less successful.

SOUTH PEABODY.

Mrs. Elizabeth Marsh is making extensive repairs in and around her residence on Summit street. Mr. Fred Wiggin is doing the work.

Mr. Luther Oliver has improved the looks of his house on Lynn street by putting in four large windows.

The L. & B. road carried nearly nine hundred through passengers last Sunday afternoon.

Mr. James Craig's house on Lynnfield street, is receiving a coat of paint.

The house of Mr. John Tapley is being extensively repaired on the inside.

The house of G. W. Davis will be raised by the last of tha week.

The carpenters have the house of Mr. Mackintosh ready for the mason work.

A new order of services was adopted at the church last Sunday,

W. F. Prescott, telegraph operator at the Boston & Maine station in this town, will shortly be assigned to duty in Charlestown station. It is probable that Geo. A. Archer, now in the Northern depot in Salem, will be assigned to duty here.

The hundred year almanac says that in 1886 diseases can be cured only slowly and will prevail mostly in the spring and fall. It also predicts that epidemic diseases will prevail among cattle. This almanac bases its forecasts on planetary influences.

Mr. Luther Fernald has several apple trees which present an odd appearance, as some of the limbs are in full bloom while others are just budding out. They are grafted trees and one of them contains seven different kinds of fruit.

F. E. Farnham as attorney for Matthew Hughes of Salem, has foreclosed upon the mortgage which he held on Nathan's furniture and has taken possession of it. Mr. Clifford dealer in barber's supplies, was in town yesterday, with a claim of $675 against Nathan.

PEABODY.

Mr. Walter Potter, formerly of Peabody, has begun the erection of a villa on Jerusalem Road, which will be, when completed, one of the finest residences on that thoroughfare.

The Naumkeag Clothing Co. announce a gigantic sale of the balance of their wholesale clothing stock in another column. Read their notice on our first page. It will pay you.

The old fashioned idea of using a sage leaf or two on the teeth at each brushing has come up again. Sage is said to whiten the teeth, and is a very aromatic substitute for tooth powder.

Wm. G. Webber has just returned from a business trip to New York and the ladies can prepare for some astonishing bagains. Mr. Webber is one of the shrewdest buyers in New England.

Mr. Luther Fernald is contemplating a western trip. He will leave Peabody about the last of the month, and remain till September. If he likes the west he will locate there permanently.

Have you seen the new suitings which Mr. James Howley has in stock? Mr. Howley is as good a tailor as there is in this vicinity, and there is no necessity for going out of town for a suit of clothes.

The Assessors report finding a great many new people here this spring. New settlers from all about here turn up for assessing on almost every street. That shows our population is on the increase.

The Item is now receiving the United Press telegraphic dispatches every day, by special wire from New York in its editorial room and have their own telegraph operator, giving latest news from all points.

Mr. John Driscoll, formerly a driver in the employ of C. F. Hathaway, was recently married to Miss Anna Murray, daughter of Daniel Murray on Boston street. They will reside in Marblehead.

Last year there were 23 licensed places for the sale of intoxicating liquor on Boston street between the Big Tree and the Peabody line, now there are but four places the whole length of Boston street.

The aurora observed in the northern sky last Sunday evening was remarkably brilliant. The light waves moved with great rapidity toward the centre in quick succession. It was a grand display of electric light.

The Peabody Woman Suffrage Club disclaims the mention it received last week as a secret society. A pass word or sign is not a requisite for entrance to its sessions, but the public is cordially invited and always welcome to its meetings.

"Gim'me one of them sirloin collars," said a man Saturday night as he entered one of our furnishing goods stores. It took the clerk some time to discover that it was celluloid neck linen that was wanted.

Mr. J. A. Roome has just completed a fine new ice team for J. B. Newhall. It is large size and will carry several tons of ice. It is artistically painted and will be the best looking ice team on the road.

Mr. George O. Peirce has just shipped to Newark, N. J. probably one of the largest cork tables for boarding leather, that has ever been built. It is 6 1-2x4 feet, and is to be used in a factory where the skins are tanned whole.

It is said a well known citizen sold an old horse he had just before the first of May, and waited till after the assessor hsd been round, and then he bought a fine colt. He probably thinks he will avoid paying taxes on his horse flesh.

Mr. Geo. H. Jacobs exhibits an old paper in his window that was printed in June 1773, containing an account of the sinking of a boat, by which several persons lost their lives. There is a cut of a coffin for each victim.

Mrs. Helen G. Rice, the State Superintendent of Temperance Juvenile Work, will address the Band of Hope Saturday, at 2.30 P. M., in Franklin Hall. The parents and friends of the children are invited.

The Boston & Lowell Railroad has been given leave to withdraw on their petition for permission to build a branch from Salem through Peabody to Lynn and Boston. That probably is satisfactory to the road,

The Selectmen granted a license as junk dealers to Timothy O'Keefe and Daniel Rabilley at their meeting last Saturday, and voted to offer a reward of $25 for the conviction of persons who wantonly injure shade trees on the public streets.

THE

GREATEST LUXURY OBTAINABLE

For Impaired or Diseased Vision is a pair of

B. LAURANCE'S

Axis Cut Pebbles.

The frauds that have been perpertrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlers by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all important subject of the preservation of the sight. There are only two articles from which spectacle lenses can be manufactured, viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name it still remains glass. Pebble on the other hand is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crytal found generally in freestone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald and nearly as hard as the diamond. The pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone cut by the aid of diamond dust, and the greater amount of power is placed immediately over the center of the grain found in the pebble. It will give to the spectacle wearer a coolness, freshness and a pleasant feeling that the ordinary spectacle lenses cannot by any possibility impart. All spectacles and eyeglasses are stamped B. L. A. C. P. and can only be purchased from

— BY THE —

NAUMKEAG

Orders have been sent from our headquarters, Boston, to our Branch Stores all along the line from Connecticut to Maine to make room for several thousand Men's, Youth's, Boys' and Children's Suits, as the balance of our wholesale Spring and Summer stock amounting to over two hundred and fifty thousand ($250,000) dollars, is to be distributed among our retail stores with orders to mark them at about the cost of the material. It has been our custom the last few years after our wholesale trade has been supplied to give our patrons a benefit by offering the balance of our wholesale stock to the retail trade at less than actual cost.

On account of the great labor trouble in the West our trade from that locality has not been as large as in former years, consequently we have a much larger stock to dispose of than any previous year, and as the NAUMKEAG is one of the largest, our share of the stock is enormous. Remember these are not old goods carried over from last season, but all new, clean, handsome, stylish goods which we manufactured for this season's trade.

Read the Prices of a few Lots:

Lot No. 1. 350 Men's nobby all wool Cassimere and Scotch Mixed Suits, comprising ten different patterns of checks, plaids and fancy mixtures, goods manufactured by the Amesbury, Georges River and Hamilton Mills, all sizes from 34 to 44. These are regular $10 and $12 suits, which we propose to close out at retail for only

$6 per suit.

Lot No. 2. 375 Men's and Young Men's Fine All-Wool Suits made from some of the most stylish patterns manufactured by the celebrated Chester Moses, Franklin and Carcline Mills. The lot comprises over 15 different styles to select from; all sizes from 33 to 44. There is not a suit in the lot but would be considered cheap at $12, we shall close the entire lot at retail for

$8 per suit.

Lot No 3. 420 Men's and Young Men's Suits manufactured from the famous Cowan, Central Falls, Brighton, Putnam and Sawyer Mills Finest all-Wool Cassimere and Cheviots. No better goods made for style or wear in this country. The lot comprises about 20 different patterns, both sack and frock coats—the latest novelties of the season—thoroughly and handsomely made and trimmed—regular $15 and $16 suits which we shall close out at retail for only

$10 per suit.

100 Men's All-Wool, Indigo Blue, Middlesex Flannel Suits, warranted fast colors—regular $12 suits for only

$8 per suit.

200 Boys' all-wool Short Pant Suits, good manufactuted by the Victory and Hamilton Mills; will fit boys from 4 to 13 years, of age; all neat, handsome mixtures, perfect in fit, at $2.50 each, about half price, remember the price

$2.50 per suit.

175 Boys' all-wool Suits, ages 4 to 13 years, comprising light and dark colors made in either style, Plaited or Norfolk, goods manufactured by the Mechanicsville and Amesbury Mills; regular $4 suits for only

$3 each.

220 Boys' strictly all-wool Norfolk Suits in plaids and fancy mixtures—goods made by such well known mills as the Carlyle, Chester Moses, etc., all new, handsome and desirable patterns, will fit boys from 4 to 14 years of age, which we shall close out at

$4 per su

150 Boys' Fine all-wool Suits, will fit boys from 11 to 17 years of age; goods made from such well known mills as the Mechanicsville, Brighton, Georges River and others—all new and desirable patterns—regular $8 and 9 suits which we shall close out for

The Massachusetts long name society has had placards posted in public places offering rewards for the conviction of persons killing any insect eating bird, or taking eggs from its nest. Let the good work go on.

Spring Opening.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

SECOND FLOOR.

We cordially invite the Ladies of Salem and vicinity to our Opening of the largest and most carefully selected stock of Millinery Goods ever shown in this city, including Trimmed Bonnets and Round Hats, both imported and of our own design and execution. In Fancy Laces and Silk Lisses, we have many elegant patterns, and in some of the most delicate tints, fairly rivalling the shadings of nature. In Flowers, which are to be so largely used the coming season, we have a most attractive display, as fresh as from the garden, only lacking fragrance. We have also in Untrimmed Hats and Bonnets, a very large assortment from the strongest School Hat to the finest foreign make. In fact everything which goes to make up a complete stock. Mrs. A. C. Washburn, our manager, was in New York at the Importers' Opening in Feb. securing many choice things at that time, and has kept close watch of the market up to the present time. Having through years of experience formed a large acquaintance with Importing as well as Jobbing Houses, which gives her great advantage in selecting Desirable Styles and making Lowest Prices. Miss Sadie Bushby will remain with us, as will also Miss Etta Brown and Miss Hattie Gliddin. We have also secured the services of Miss Carrie Palmer, who will join our corps of popular sales ladies. And now we feel sure almost every lady calling on us next week, or after, will meet an old acquaintance who will gladly show them every attention, and will take a personal interest in pleasing.

Cloaks, Suits and Shawls.

SPRING, 1886.

We take pleasure in announcing to the Ladies of Salem and Essex County, that we have now open and ready for inspection our full line of Ladies, Misses and Children's Outside Garments, Wraps, Shawls, etc., for Spring and Summer wear. We may venture to say without any egotism, that our selections in this department far surpass anything we have previously offered. The increasing demand for superior Ready Made Garments and Suits has led us to exercise unusual care in selecting none but the best, both in material and workmanship, and we guarantee all to be just as represented. We have every style and quality a lady can wish for. Long Garments for driving and travelling, Short Wraps and Jackets for street wear in every available shade and colors, both Foreign and American make. Suits, stylish and of superior quality. Shawls, India Chuddas, Boucle, Cashmere, and Fancy Embroidered Scarfs in all grades and shades. Children's Garments, simply beautiful in Boucle, English, German and American Goods. Our Infants' Department requires especial mention for its variety of Long and Short Robes, Cloaks, Slips and Blankets.

Jersey Waists, fancy colors beaded. Mikado fronts, Vest fronts, Plain fronts and braided, in every variety; and a great many more equally good things that we have not space to mention.

We cordially invite you to come and see for yourselves, assuring all courteous attention, and any information we can bestow.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER;

252 Essex Street, Salem.

Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds, Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skylights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bousley.

Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated with courtesy whether anything is esired or not.

Poet's Corner.

Between the Lights.

BY CLARA THWAITES.

The sunset fires are fading o'er the heather,
The flames of gold and crimson burn away,
Upon the lea the purple shadows gather,
And silence soothes the pulses of the day.

Toll, curfew, toll! The day of toil is over,
Recall the banished who aweary roam;
Chime! bells of peace, and wanderer and rover
Will fondly turn their eyes to rest and home.

The morning gave us songs and joy and laughter,
The day was feverish with toil and care;
The night is cool, we think of rest hereafter,
And sing our twilight songs upon the air.

Toll, curfew, toll! And still our fitful fever,
Cover the fires of anguish and of pain;
Peace shall be ours for ever and for ever,
Sorrow shall never tell her tale again.

Not yet the stars of heaven in their splendor
Reveal infinity in glorious heights,
Not yet their radiance meets us, pure and tender,
Their rising we await, between the lights.

Ring, curfew, ring! But not with voice of sorrow,
Utter melodiously our soft farewell!
To all that grieves us, for our fair tomorrow
Will fairer be than sweetest lone may tell.

"Between the lights" we watch, we wait, we ponder,
Till beck'ning gleams from far-off worlds arise;
In hush of spirit we await with wonder
The starry revelations of the skies.

The Song of the Cricket.

BY GRACE DENIO LITCHFIELD.

Yes, the world is big; but I'll do my best,
Since I happen to find myself in it,
And I'll sing my loudest out with the rest
Though I'm neither a lark nor a linnet,
And strive toward the goal with as tireless zest,
Though I know I may never win it.

For shall no bird sing but the nightingale?
No flower bloom but the rose?
Shall little stars quench their torches pale
When Mars through the midnight glows?
Shall only the highest and greatest prevail?
May nothing seem white but the snows?

Nay, the world is so big that it needs us all
To make audible music in it.
God fits a melody e'en to the small,
We have nothing to do but begin it.
So I'll chirp my merriest out with them all,
Though I'm neither a lark nor a linnet.

Daffodils.

BY CAROLINE HAZARD.

The golden sun looks gladly down
On golden rows of daffodils.
He crowns them with his golden crown,
With golden rays each blossom fills,
And every blighting breeze he stills.

With golden trumpets in their hands,
On pliant stems they lightly swing;
In cheerful, dauntless, gorgeous bands,
Their trumpets to the breeze they fling,
And sound the overture to spring.

Gone is the winter's dreaded power,
Gone are the cold and weary days;
Now comes the soul refreshing shower,
Now sheds the sun his brightest rays;
Their golden trumps are tuned to praise.

Praise Him, ye trumpeters of spring,
Whose mighty love new life distills!
My heart shall with your music ring
Until your rapture through me thrills,
Ye golden throated daffodils!

A Birthday.

BY JENNY POULTNEY BIGELOW.

O birthday of the long ago,
The joy that filled my bosom then
But makes the darker seem the woe
With which the days now overflow.

Like bird in safely sheltered nest,
A child within my arms was pressed,
And sipped life's blossoms at my breast.

The bird to safer shelter flown,
The nest is empty and alone,
I make my broken hearted moan.

I was troubled with chronic catarrh and gathering in head; was deaf at times; had discharges from ears, unable to breathe through nose. Before the second bottle of Ely's Cream Balm was exhausted I was cured.—C. J. Corbin, 23 Chestnut St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Two bottles of Ely's Cream Balm cured the wife of a well known U. S. A. General and also two army officers in Arizona of catarrh. Price 50 cents. Pleasant to use.

GENERAL NOTES.

An exchange gets off a good one and hits some folks right between the eyes in the following manner: "After you get upon your ear and make up your mind to 'stop' your paper to make the editor feel humiliated, just poke your fingers in water and then pull them out and look for the hole. Then you will know how sadly you are missed. The man who thinks a paper cannot survive without his support ought to go off and stay a while. When he comes back he will find that half his friends don't know he was gone. The other half didn't care a cent and the world at large hadn't kept any account of his movements whatever. You will probably find some things in your home paper you can endorse. Even the Bible is rather plain and hits some hard licks. If you were to get mad and burn your Bible the hundreds of presses would go on printing them, and if you were to stop your paper and call the editor all sorts of ugly names, the paper would still be published. And what is more, you will sneak around and borrow a copy of it every day from your neighbor. It is much better to keep your vest pulled down and your subscription paid up."

General Master Workman Powderly of the Knights of Labor, acting under the authority vested in him by the general executive board, has issued a call to the various assemblies of the order for a special session of the general assembly, to be held in Cleveland, O., on Tuesday, May 25. The causes leading to the calling of the session are given as follows:—

1. The rapidly increasing membership of the order requires changes in the laws which the general executive board have no authority to make.

2. The laws in relation to the government of boycotting are wholly inadequate to compel obedience on the part of assemblies that believe in boycotting for every offence, whether great or small.

3. The laws in relation to strikes do not give the general executive board power to interfere in such matters until after the strike has been inaugurated.

4. The order has become involved in difficulties with trade societies and an effort is being made to create a rupture between societies and the Knights of Labor.

The Boston, Revere Beach & Lynn Railroad Company is constructing double tracks between the Point of Pines and Lynn, and will have the work finished about June 1. The summer time table probably will be begun much earlier this summer than last, as the travel is already much heavier than that ever before at a corresponding period of the year since the road has been built. The road has constructed automatic gates at the street crossing, and in other ways much improved the road. Everything points to one of the most successful seasons this year that this region has ever seen.

Don't go to a painter at this busy season if you want a little paint and bother him to mix it and borrow his pail and brush, but go to Samuel Trask & Son, select your color, buy just what paint you will need in a neat package all ready for use, and a brush so cheap you can afford to throw it away. Atlas paint is always in large demand when the spring cleaning comes, because our people will have the best.

The annual Unitarian Grove Meeting will be held at Weirs, N. H., beginning on Sunday, July 25, and continuing one week. The committee extends an invitation, not only to Unitarians, but to people of all religious views, to join in this summer religious festival. The exercises will consist of preaching, addresses, essays, conference and devotional meetings. Further information may be obtained by addressing the secretary, J. N. Pardee, Laconia, N. H.

The toilet soap man was around last week. He leaves a box of soap with each family, gives them permission to use one cake, and then calls the next day and takes your money for the whole, or takes away the soap. Give all peddlers the "go by" is the safest way.

Bicycle riders and those who would become such are referred to the advertisement of John Wood Jr., in Beverly near the Eastern depot. The firm is one of the most reliable in the State and are sole agents for many of the leading makes of these goods. It will pay our readers to trade with the house.

Perhaps the revision of the Bible was unnecessary, after all. The historian is impelled to this reflection by a sage remark which was uttered in his hearing in a street car the other day. On the opposite side of the car were two women who were talking loudly. Said one: "Did you know Sarah had another lot of money left her by her cousin's will?" Law me!" exclaimed the other, "the Bible never said a truer thing than them that has gits!"

THE TELEPHONE GIRL

HEARD IT WHISPERED

That it is estimated that a single man can live on $200 a year.

That this didn't include having a girl during the ice cream season.

That some men are hogs!

That they display their ignorance of common decency when they drive a team directly over a crossing on a muddy day and leave it there.

That pedestrians are thus compelled to walk ankle deep in mud.

That young ladies should take all the exercise possible.

That they should even ride the tricycle.

That when it comes to riding the bicycle a line should be drawn.

That a young lady, and member of the grammar school, was seen mounting one on Main street recently.

That it was not very lady like!

That circus bills have commenced to bloom.

That the small boy and the goat are anxiously watching them.

That a fashion journal says there is not much change in male attire.

That the editor can bear witness to that.

That you can prove it by asking him if he has a quarter about his clothes.

That the housewife complains of the handbill nuisance.

That one of them heard the door bell ring and, expecting a May basket, rushed to the door.

That she was mad when she only found a handbill advertising a pile remedy.

That a newspaper may favor a man many times, and get good words in return; but if it disagrees with that same individual on some of his pet ideas, he will rave and swear and pompously order its discontinuance.

That this does not make any essential difference, and the paper is published right along, and the obstreperous individual buys it of the news boy, and persues it with the same old avidity, and in time comes round again with a smiling countenance, especially if he wants some more favors.

That all publishers have this experience, and will have, down to the last issue of the last paper published on this terrestrial globe.

That it is not very pleasing to occupants to have half a dozen house hunters perambulating around the rooms before the chamber maid has made her rounds.

That some women, however, are so inquisitive that they want to see how their neighbors look before they are "fixed up."

That the school boys are striking!

That so are the school masters, and the boys get the worst of it.

That the covering of the old brook should be relaid this summer.

That it should be fixed so that the pent-up waters could escape in case of another flood.

TEACH YOUR children the proper use of money. Begin with a small allowance of pocket money which they shall feel is their own, and let an account of its expenditure be made to you. Carefully guard against any ridicule if there have been foolish purchases, for that will soon beget disgust, then follows deceit, and very soon you will never know what has become of the money. Kindly advise, so that if your boy is tempted to spend his money in a way he knows is wrong, he will freely come to you and tell of it. Until you feel positively compelled to do it, do not withdraw your allowance. It may be that you will find no other way to stop a career of wasteful and sinful extravagance, but let all effort be made in other ways first. Teach your boys to earn a little for themselves. Many little ways will suggest themselves. It is so much more helpful to them, as well as an enjoyable pride, that it's always well to encourage all such endeavor. We know a mother who prizes, above all her other possessions, a pair of gold sleeve buttons purchased with the first money her boy ever earned, and though he is now in business for himself, we fancy he never invested any money more cheerfully than that.

SWINE AND POULTRY.—Millions are lost annually and science is still at fault. Accident develops one of the greatest discoveries of the age and fortunes invested in the raising of swine and poultry are made secure. Mr. J. McCann, P. O. Box 33, Bridgeport, W. Va., writes: "The discovery was entirely the result of an accident. A splendid cock was almost dead with chicken-cholera, and a dose of St. Jacobs Oil was given him. In ten minutes he was entirely cured and made healthy by its use. Mr. Charles F. Powell, P. M., Terre Haute, Champaign Co., Ohio, writes: "With a small piece of bread in the form of a pill saturated with St. Jacobs Oil I saved two very fine Polish chickens which were dying with the roup. In a short time I could not tell which of the chickens had been sick." In cases of hog cholera, it should be given with the the swill, and if refused should be drenched with Milk mixed with a small quantity of St. Jacobs Oil.

ASSESSORS' NOTICE.

To the Inhabitants and other Persons liable to na Taxes in the Town of Peabody.

The Assessors of the Town of Peabody hereby give notice to the inhabitants of said town, and all other persons liable to pay taxes therein, that their office will be open on and after the first day of May until and including the first day of June, and all persons liable to be taxed in said town are hereby required to bring in at the said office true and perfect lists of all the polls (males twenty years old, and upward), and schedules and estimates of the personal estates for which they are liable to pay taxes.

Copartnerships

having a place of business in Peabody, and also in some other city or town within the Commonwealth, are especially notified to bring in a statement in accordance with the 24th section of the 11th chapter of the Public Statutes. Shipping and business income are not taxable to a firm, but each resident partner must include these items in his individual return.

Mortgaged Real Estate.

"Any mortgagor or mortgagee of real estate may bring in to the assessors of the town or city where such real estate lies," within the time specified in this notice, "a statement, under oath, of the amount due on each separate lot or parcel of such real estate, and the name and residence of every holder of an interest therein as a mortgagee or mortgagor. When such property is situated in two or more places, or when a recorded mortgage includes for one sum two or more estates or parts of an estate, an estimate of the amount of the mortgagee's interest in each estate or part of an estate shall be given in such statement." [Chap. 175 of the Acts of 1882]. When a statement in conformity with the law above quoted is brought in, the real estate therein returned will be assessed under sections 14, 15 and 16, of chapter 11 of the Public Statutes. But in cases where the mortgagor of the real estate has agreed in writing to pay all taxes assessed thereon, NO STATEMENT OR RETURN IS REQUIRED from either mortgagee or mortgagor, unless requested by the assessors in writing.

Estates in Trust.

Persons holding estates in trust, whether for minors or otherwise, are particularly requested to furnish the assessors with statements in relation to such estates. When trust estates, or estates of persons deceased, have been divided during the past year, or have changed hands from other causes, the trustee, executor or administrator, or other person interested, is required and warned to give notice of such change; and in default of such notice, will be held to pay the tax assessed, although such estate has been wholly distributed and paid over.

Any person bringing in a list of all his taxable personal property will be assessed upon the valuation thereof, and any one neglecting to furnish the assessors with such list within the time above specified will de doomed at a legal meeting of the Board of Assessors, agreeably to the law of the Commonwealth. All persons will take notice that statements of personal property must be in writing, and subscribed under oath before one of the Assessors, at their office, on or before the FIRST DAY OF JUNE, and that the personal property of all taxable persons must be estimated by the Board, NOTWITHSTANDING A VERBAL STATEMENT OR INFORMAL WRITTEN COMMUNICATION TO ANY ONE OR MORE OF THE ASSESSORS. [Pub. Stat., chap. 11, sec. 39 and 41.] When a person has failed to bring in a list or schedule of all his taxable property, in conformity to this notice, no abatement of a tax so assessed upon such person for personal property can be granted, "unless such tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the amount which would have been assessed to that person on personal estate, if he had seasonably brought in said list; and if said tax exceeds by more than fifty per cent. the said amount, the abatement shall be only of the excess above the said fifty per cent. [Pub. Stat., Chap. 11, Sec. 73.]

Any person taxable in Peabody for personal property can obtain a BLANK SCHEDULE for making a list of such property, with directions for properly filling the same, by applying at the assessors' office.

Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations.

The attention of the Officers of all Literary, Benevolent, Charitable and Scientific Corporations, located in Peabody, is particularly called to the requirements of Chapter 217 of the Acts of 1882, as the property of said corportions, both personal and real, will be subject to taxation unless the law is complied with. Blank forms for the purpose can be had at the office of the assessors.

Tanners and Curriers Meet.

The following notice was circulated among the tanners and curriers of Boston and vicinity last week:

The undersigned, a committee appointed at an informal meeting of the leather manufacturers of this vicinity, to consider the advisability of forming a permanent association, having for its object their mutual interest, would report that on consultation with various members of the trade, it seems advisable that a meeting be called to form a Tanners' and Curriers' Association. You are therefore requested to be present at the rooms of the Shoe and Leather Exchange, Boston, on Saturday, May 15, at 3 P. M., when a full discussion of the matter will be had.

THEOPHILUS KING.
EUSTIS CUMMINGS.
GRIFFIN PLACE.

About fifty members of the trade responded. Theophilus King, of Bryant & King, was chosen as Chairman, and Geo. E. Dustin, of C. J. Bishop & Co., Secretary. The chairman stated the object of the meeting, which was to consider the expediency of forming an association with the view of establishing closer and more friendly relations between those engaged in the business, which would enure to the common benefit. They could aid each other in securing better selections of hides, more equitable rates of freight and other things for their general advantage. It might be well, perhaps, to meet annually at dinner, and by thus introducing the social element in an attractive form, establish a better acquaintance, and cultivate sentiments of friendship. He invited an expression of opinion from those around him. James Skinner, of Woburn, signified his entire approval of the project. He said that the cotton, woolen and other manufacturers had formed similar organizations, and if they should do likewise, it would be a step in the right direction. Matthew Robson, J. F. Walden and Richard Harrington, all of Salem, also favored the proposition. Griffin Place, of John B. Alley & Co., said that he thought it quite important, aside from the labor question, that such an organization be effected. He did not believe in combatting the labor element, but said it should be liberally dealt with. There is much to be said on both sides. It is quite important that we should look after our interests in other directions—in the selection and delivery of hides, for example. In many ways we can be useful to each other, and secure advantages which we could get in no other way. Especially is this true of the delivery of stock. We buy offal, and matter hardly suitable for the glue factory. I am heartily in favor of such an organization.

A. Pierce Green, of Dunn, Green & Co., said he concurred in the views of those who had spoken. Of course, one of the dominant features of the gathering to-day was the labor question, which should be dealt with on an equitable basis. The organization will also be for our interests, socially as well as in a business view. Our interests are identical with those of all other tanners.

Mr. Lowd, of Lowd & Buxton, Peabody, said: We must admit that it is very imperative that we should organize on the labor question, if nothing more. The tanners and curriers need protection, and a full and free discussion should be had.

Mr. Osgood favored a first class organization.

Mr. Buswell, of Hubbard & Blake, Boston, favored the forming of such an association as a thing very much needed.

Col. Dalton, of Salem, said he came to hear something about the labor question. He was only a small tanner, comparatively, although he was one of the oldest in Salem. He said a Frenchman, who had been in this country but a few months, came into his shop and demand that he pay a certain price or he would order his hands to strike. If the tanners had all done as Chas. Harrington & Co. did, the whole thing would have ended in four weeks. I am impressed with the value of such an organization as is proposed, and with it we can control our own business. I do not object to any man getting all he can, but when "A" comes into my shop and says that "B" shall not work, then it is a different matter, and it is being done every day.

At this point a motion was made that there be a committee of three, from a number of tanning centers, appointed to draw up the articles of association. Richard Harrington, of Salem; John Osborn, of Peabody; James Skinner, of Woburn; and A. Pierce Green, of Boston, were chosen to select names for such a committee. While they were out attending to this duty discussion continued.

Mr. Place said the labor question would regulate itself. Our workmen will realize that when we give them advice it is good advice. We must use the same judgment we do in other phases of our business. No one should be a better friend to the laboring man than his employer. Then they will come to understand that we are their best advisers.

W. F. Wiley, of Wiley & Poor, curriers, of Peabody, spoke in favor of the organization, and said we should be careful not to lose sight of the labor question. We must stand together and come together often. Mr. Wiley gave a graphic description of the recent troubles between his firm and the labor unions. He stated that when they were waited upon by the agent of the union, he was assured that his firm should pay no more than others would be obliged to pay. He acceded, and for four weeks paid the advance demanded. As no other tanners or curriers were visited in that time his firm declined to pay any longer more than the old prices. The result was a four weeks' strike, and he being a Poor man, was obliged to succumb, and to-day is paying more for the same work than others are paying.

W. H. Mullin, of Mullin & Brown, Boston, thought it would be well to get together once a year at least for a social dinner and friendly talk.

The committee on nomination returned and proposed that the following gentlemen be charged with the function of organizing the association:

Salem.—Richard Harrington, Frank R. Tuttle, Matthew Robson.

Woburn, Winchester and Stoneham.—Theophilus King, Freeman Loring, Charles H. Brown.

Boston, including Malden, Shrewsbury, Lowell, Wilmington, Ayer Junction and Leominster.—Andrew G. Webster, A. Pierce Green, Griffin Place.

Peabody.—Thomas E. Proctor, Wm. F. Wiley, John Osborn.

They were all chosen unanimously, and clothed with power to fill vacancies in their number.

The following document was drawn up and signed by those present.

We, the undersigned tanners and curriers, express our full sympathy with the object set forth at the meeting held this day, and hereby signify our intention of becoming members of such organization to promote our mutual interests in any and every direction.

The meeting adjourned subject to the call of the committee. The selection of gentlemen for the committee is an admirable one. They are the stirring men of the tanning industry, and the new organization will start under the most favorable auspices. No doubt every tanner and currier in New England will become an active member. The committee will call a meeting on Wednesday, May 26, when the organization will be perfected.

MEMORIAL DAY.

In compliance with general orders No. 16, from national headquarters, Monday, May 31, will be observed in this department as Memorial day.

Comrades, to you is entrusted the proper conduct of the ceremonies of this day. Discharge these duties with a dignity and solemnity befitting the occasion, and worthy the patriots whose deeds they commemorate. See that garland and wreath decorate, and that the flag of our Union floats above the grave of every soldier and sailor who died that liberty might live. Whilst not unmindful that these tokens of love will not add to their happiness; that their eyes will not behold the flag they loved so well, and for which they were willing to suffer so much; that eulogy and commendation will not cause a responsive throb in those pulseless breasts, yet let their heroism and unselfish patriotism be recalled, that your own may be exalted, that you may be led to pledge anew fealty to your country, and be reminded of your sacred obligations to these fallen comrades. It is recommended that all ex-soldiers, not members of our order, be invited to participate. The awakened memories of the days of war—of the camp, the bivouac, the march, the ensanguined field—memories of the brave men who shared those hardships, and faced death with them may quicken their hearts to a sense of duty toward the dependent ones of those comrades who have bowed to the great conqueror, death, and a desire may be born for closer union with the survivors. The citizens, old and young, should be urged to give up their daily avocations, and unite with us in this service, to the end that the elders may be reminded of the pledges made to the soldiers in the dark days of the Rebellion, when hope had almost fled, and it seemed that treason would be triumphant; that they be reminded also of the sacred obligations they owe to those who suffered and died to make secure and valuable their property, their lives and their liberties; that the young may be taught by these solemn ceremonies that the priceless heritage of freedom, won through years of suffering and bloodshed by the patriots of 1776, no less bravely defended by the patriots of 1861 to 1865, should be most zealously guarded, and they should ever be ready to devote their services, their fortunes and their lives to its maintenance. Every laudable effort should be made to array public opinion against the custom, which has arisen in many places, of making the day one of pleasure, devoted to excursions, games and races. Not thus can the lessons of the day be impressed upon the minds of young men who must assume the responsibilities of citizenship. Let us labor to make it indeed a Memorial Day; that in recalling the achievements of our heroic dead, every American may draw fresh inspiration and patriotism. I cannot too strongly urge upon posts the duty of attending divine service, in a body, on Sunday preceding Memorial Day.

THE DRAMA

[Horse cars from Salem connect every night (except Monday) with train leaving Boston at 11.15 P M]

This week Baker and Farran, protean specialists, are to be seen at the Boston Theatre in A Soap Bubble. This engagement closes the career of the two stars, and next week manager Tompkins has arranged a grand specialty carnival, which will introduce all of the most famous specialty artists of the day. The carnival will begin on the 31st inst., when a summer scale of prices will rule, varying from 25 cents to $1.00.

For the closing week of his engagement at the Boston Museum, John T. Raymond is to appear as Ferdinand Nervy Fresh in Fresh, the American. In this piece, as in Colonel Sellers, Raymond is seen to especial advantage, being associated with the Museum stock company. The role of the fair susceptible Erenia Almi will be assumed by Miss Thompson, while May Davenport is to play the Marchioness, and Misses Dayne, Standish, Jordan and others, are to be seen as the ladies of the Pacha's harem, which Mr. Fresh invades in such peculiarly American style.

Mrs. Ver Planck's Sealed Instructions, which will close the engagement of the Madison Square company at the Park Theatre this week, was the first success which that company made under A. M. Palmer's management. The cast is a strong one, including Mrs. Agnes Booth, Misses Annie Russell, Maud Harrison and Messrs. W. S. LeMoyne, Frederick Robinson and others.

Miss Kate Forsythe in Marcella will follow the Madison Square company at the Park Theatre, May 31. This engagement closes the season at that house.

Manager Seymour has Frank Hayes' play, Stella Issachoff, under consideration, and there is a chance that it will be brought out next season at the Museum. Those who have seen it pronounce it very clever. The heroine is after the style of La Belle Russe, and the scene is laid in New York and Newport society. At present Mr. Hayes is at work on a romantic drama in blank verse, the scene of which is in Venice in the picturesque days of the Doges. Two acts of it are already written.

Carrie Swain will probably be seen in a reconstructed version of Cad, the Tomboy, as well as in Jack in the Box, when she comes in August.

Three Peculiarities

Hood's Sarsaparilla, the great blood purifier and regulating medicine, is characterized by three peculiarities, namely:

1st: The combination of the various remedial agents used.

2d: The proportion in which the roots, herbs, barks, etc., are mixed.

3d: The process by which the active medicinal properties are secured.

The result is a medicine of unusual strength and curative power, which effects cures heretofore unequalled. These peculiarities belong exclusively to Hood's Sarsaparilla, and are

Unknown to Others

Hood's Sarsaparilla is prepared with the greatest skill and care, by pharmacists of education and long experience. Hence it is a medicine worthy of entire confidence. JOHN P. FERNALD ALBERT VITTUM,
Editors and Publishers

ONE HUNDRED liquor licenses have been issued by the city of Salem. They have been taken out and paid for, at the advanced rate decided upon by the city Government, as was expected. At the outset a notice has been issued and sent to each licensee calling attention to the provisions of the law, and warning them that a violation of those conditions will work a revocation of the license.

The warning is given in advance, that the dealer may know that the law is to be enforced. We hope the authorities mean business. Under the present law, a saloon keeper can do all the business he wants to, and adhere to the conditions of the license. It is for the interest of those who are candidly disposed to do right in this matter, that offenders should be punished, and unless there is a radical change from the past, the officers will find enough to do in the enforcement of the law.

Our town is specially interested in this, because the most of the liquor that is obtained by our people is bought in Salem. They are interested in seeing the Sunday provision lived up to. This has been the greatest evil of the entire traffic, and the sales in Salem on Sunday have in the past been open and extensive. This was the trouble here when license was allowed. A greater business was done on Sundays than on other days. It ought not to be so. The legal sales of intoxicants on the Lord's day are not, and cannot be numerous.

We rejoice at the earnestness of the Government of Salem towards enforcing the law. It is the first step towards the development of a no-license sentiment. A strict enforcement of the license law as it exists will lead to a condition of things which will materially foster the peace and quiet of the community. Its citizens will want something better then. We think the time is not far distant when Salem, too, will vote no-license. An enforcement of the law under license will show the people that it can also be enforced under no-license.

It will be a material aid and a great encouragement to the surrounding towns when this condition shall prevail. Our town has become firmly settled in the conviction that its prosperity under the present vote of no-license is advanced. There is no reasonable probability of a change for years to come. There will be no prospect of it, unless the friends of temperance make mistakes. Thus far the work has been conducted fairly and calmly; on the the line of the broad principles of the Law and Order League. There is danger that too much success may weaken them. A hint of this was given in the attempt to fasten other things than the enforcement of the liquor law upon the League. The true friends of temperance should resist strongly any such attempts. They should keep close to their constitution. They should wait in patience and we believe they will be rewarded in time by seeing Salem in line on this question.

THE SCRIBBLER of the Salem News gives his readers the statement that "it costs the town $169.60 for printing the Annual report last year when there was no bidding on the job, as against $104 this year." This is entirely false. This office has been asked to bid on the town report, in competition with the other office, ever since the present firm has been in existence.

Again he says: "Last year it cost $86.35 to print the report of the Institute trustees, and this year $118.80 was paid for the same amount of work, the job being given to another office." This also is false. The Trustees' report was printed this year at this office, at exactly the same price as was paid last year for the same amount of work. The difference in price was for the additional number of pages which this year's report contains.

Finally: "The School report was bid upon and the contract awarded for $46. The Trustees' report contains only three or four more pages than the School report, yet it cost over $118 and was printed at the same office besides." This is another batch of falsehoods. Firstly, the contract for printing the School report was NOT $46.00. Secondly, the contract, whatever it was, was on the basis of last year's work. The report is larger this year than last, therefore the price will be proportionately larger when the bill is presented, which has not yet been done. Consequently, the inference intended to be conveyed that a difference in price between $46 and $118 was made at this office for only three or four pages more work is entirely incorrect. There is, however, a difference between the price of the two reports, which is easily explained. Firstly, the job was taken at a very low price, with the understanding that it should be printed on a cheap quality of paper. Between the price of the paper used on the Trustees' report and on the School report, there is a difference of four cents per pound. Secondly, the tables used, which represent some twelve dollars worth of labor, were all set up and standing in this office, having been prepared by us for Mr. McGrath last year. Therefore we could afford to print the School report much cheaper than the Trustees' report, and did so.

The work done by us for the town has been contracted for on honorable business principles, and with the result we are entirely willing to abide. And when the News scribbler undertakes to give the public an idea of our business, we want him to ascertain the truth, if he says anything. This he could easily do, if he chose to.

THE DEMOCRATIC press of this country are as severe as it was expected the republican journals would be, in their denunciation of the inactivity of Secretary Bayard, regarding the seizures of our vessels on the British coast. Democratic orators, during the last campaign, if we remember rightly, characterized the foreign policy of the republican party as child's play, and now such papers as the Boston Globe and New York Sun commend in the warmest terms the sentiments of a reported interview with James G. Blaine. The interview is denied by Blaine; but the sentiments, so well known, in this direction, of the republican candidate and ex-Secretary of State, would be a refreshing thing to see exemplified to-day by our Government.

When such inactivity is condemned by the democratic party, as we believe it is, it is the republicans' turn to laugh If James G. Blaine were president to-day, there is no need of stating what would happen. The rights of our Government would be insisted on, in language that would be unmistakable. Whatever rights Nova Scotia vessels have on our coast, should be reciprocated by the Canada authorities. If our vessels cannot enter a port to trade and obtain supplies, let us keep Nova Scotia vessels from our coast under the same circumstances. Let non-intercourse be declared at our ports. The Dominion of Canada will suffer ten times as much as we should.

The matter ought to be settled now, and it is a good time to settle it. The rights of American fishermen should be insisted upon, and they will be accorded by the English Government, if properly urged. There will be no trouble between the Governments. England is too politic for that. But our policy should be unyielding, and it is a disgrace to this Government that our fishermen say, "We have no Government behind us, to protect our rights." That is what they do say, and it is time Secretary Bayard awoke from his sleep.

The Springfield Republican this morning is a quadruple sheet with supplement, containing a full account of the 250th anniversary celebration of that city. The supplement is a miniature edition of the first issue of the Republican as a weekly Sept. 8, 1824; also of the first daily, March 27, 1844, the first Sunday, Sept. 15, 1878, and the regular daily issue of April 14, 1886. The Republican is one of the best papers in the country.

PEABODY POLICEMEN.

How They Tramp and Where.

THE DUTIES OF THE CHIEF AND HIS ASSISTANTS.

That Peabody is well guarded by an efficient police force is evident to all our citizens, but how the force is made up, the routes they go over, and the discipline of the force, is probably not known to a dozen of our hundreds of readers.

The citizen who drops into the police station about seven o'clock in the evening, is liable to find in their waiting room a large number of officers, some of whom are off duty, and others are about starting out. A few minutes later to the cheerful "Fall in boys," the evening police which include a majority of the force, form in couples and begin their weary tramping along their beats.

THE MEN.

There is this to say about the men who compose our police force, they are peculiar as compared with the officers of many other towns of this size, in the fact that they are all fully up to the average of our citizens and have not been retained on the force because "they need it," but are men fully competent to earn just as good wages at their trades, as the town pays them for police service. It will be seen by a comparison with the police in other places, that in most cases there are members of the police force who have been there for years, lived out their usefulness, and are regarded as pensioners, and do not have the respect due an officer, even from the criminal classes. These men have been put on in the spirit of semi-charity and remain simply as dead timber. Our officers are men who hold the respect of all classes, not only because of their ability to enforce the law but for their character as men. There exists no petty jealousies or contending factions to interrupt the harmony or mar the usefulness of the force.

THE CHIEF OF POLICE.

Thomas W. Peasley, Chief of Police. His duty is to plan the work of the force, assign the officers to their various duties, and have a general supervision of the whole police force, and with the aid of his assistants do all in his power to punish crime. And in a growing town like Peabody, the Chief finds enough to do. If any one has a grievance of any kind, he rushes to the Chief of police and pours his troubles into the ear of that patient individual, and all are heard with respect, from the farmer who has a trespass case to the fellow with a black eye who is unable to tell whether he began the row or not. And again it may be a weeping woman who has endured the drunken pranks of her husband until patience has ceased to be a virtue, and seeks protection from her unworthy husband at the hands of the police. All the cases have to be investigated, and that is usually done by the Chief himself. And in some instances they are dismissed with kindly wholesome advice, and in others the guilty ones are brought before the Justice. Another duty of the Chief is to keep an accurate record of everything in his books. Every drunk is recorded, and every arrest, yes even a tramp is not allowed to stop at the station house without being asked a long string of questions which he is obliged to answer. Chief Peasley is a popular and efficient officer, who works quietly, keeps his own counsel and invariably succeeds in what he undertakes.

THE DAY POLICE.

Consists of Officers T. H. Crowley and B. F. Goodwin whose duty it is to visit the outskirts of the town, including "Dublin." They have no regular beats, but are prepared to answer all calls made upon them from whatever direction they may come. The central part of the town including the square and Main street, is looked after by Chief Peasley, who is usually not far from the police station, in case a call is made for the services of an officer.

THE EVENING POLICE.

are in charge of Capt. Thomas N. Barnaby who takes the central part of the town, and may be seen nightly keeping an open line to the post office, and the street corners clear from people who congregate in these conspicuous places. The other evening police are John Sweeney, who is responsible for Lowell and Main streets, and who preserves good order in those places; John Ruth and Jas. H. Grady perambulate the streets of Dublin, and by their presence prevent lawlessness in that section, while Geo. W. Jones and Jerry Mack pace back and forth on Washington street from Hose 2's house to Tapley's brook The evening police are on duty from 7 to 10 o'clock.

THE NIGHT WATCH.

are officers Barnaby and Sweeney in the central part of the town, and Jones and Grady on the outskirts. It is the opinion of many that there should be six night police instead of four. That our officers cover all the ground possible, there is no doubt, but their beats cover so much territory, that there is of necessity a long time that certain sections of the town are unprotected.

THE SUNDAY POLICE.

are kept about as busy as any, as on that day the lawless element are let loose and roam the woods and fields, committing all kinds of depredations, and there is probably more drunkenness than on any day in the week. A. E. Johnson has in charge Lowell and Main streets. T. H. Crowley and John D. McKean look after Washington street and vicinity. John Ruth and Jerry Mack have their beat in Dublin, and Chief Peasley and B. F. Goodwin pay strict attention to the central part of the town.

As a whole we are to be congratulated upon having so good and efficient police, and considering the different elements of which we are composed, it is no easy task for an officer to impartially do his duty.

Golden Wedding.

The 50th anniversary of the marriage of Mr. and Mrs. Sumner Southwick was celebrated in a very appropriate manner last Monday evening at their residence in this place. Mrs. Southwick's maiden name was Hannah B. Gowen and they were married in this town on May 24, 1836. A reception was given from 5 to 10 o'clock and invited guests to the number of 175 were present to congratulate the venerable couple, and to testify by their presence the respect they entertained for them. All present seemed to realize it was a joyful occasion and manifested their pleasure in many ways. Rev. F. W. Sprague, pastor of the Universalist church acted as master of ceremonies, and his remarks were fitting and appropriate. He read the following original poem, written by Mr. David Johnson, a nephew of Mr. Southwick, who lives at Lynn.

> Just fifty years ago to-day
>   When apple blossoms filled the air,
> There never was a fairer May
>   And never breathed a happier pair,
> Than these we welcome here to-night,
>   For then they looked with lovers' eyes,
> Earth was transfigured to their sight,
>   Hill, dale and stream and starry skies
> Shone with a glory mortals see
>   But once, where'er they roam or rest
> Love hears no sounds but melody,
>   All lands are Araby the blest.
> Such was the day when these two souls
>   Standing on Alpine heights of bliss
> Wrote one more page on hymen's scrolls
>   And sealed it with a bridal kiss.
> Then Sumner unto Hannah said,
>   Hereafter we walk no more apart
> Whatever be the paths we tread,
>   One hope is ours till life depart.
> And thus they kept their even way
>   To Conscience and each other true,
> Filling with kindly deeds each day
>   Which reaching far, were seen by few.
> Keeping alive their simple trust
>   On Him who holds his children dear,
> When sorrow bowed them in the dust
>   They felt a Father's presence near.
> For they believed that good, not ill,
>   Comes forth forever from His hand.
> That truth and love at last shall fill
>   The earth, and reign in every land.
> Now looking through the mist of years,
>   They count their gains but know no loss,
> The recompense of sorrow's tears,
>   Is richer than earth's gilded dross.
> And thus they reach the golden door
>   Through fifty years of wedded life,
> And thus we praise as ne'er before
>   The day that made them man and wife.

Another pleasant duty performed by Mr. Sprague, was the reading of a congratulatory letter from a friend out West, which enclosed a check for $10. Among those present were two sisters of Mr. Southwick aged 73 and 75 years respectively, while Mr. Southwick is 71 years of age. Another elderly person was Mrs. Walker, aged 84 years. There were three generations of the family represented. Among the invited guests present were Jonathan King, James P. King, Selectman S. A. Southwick, his brothers and families, W. P. Clark, Stephen Blaney, John A. Lord, Calvin Pierce, Chas. E. Teague, Albert H. Merrill and many others, besides friends from Danvers, Lynn and Boston. There was also present Mr. and Mrs. Stimpson of Danvers, who stood up with them when they were married. There was a great profusion of flowers, and a bouquet of 50 roses was particularly noticeable. Among the large number of presents was about $100 in gold, a parlor lamp, glass and silver ware, gold studs and cuff buttons, pocket book, etc. In response to the remarks of Mr. Sprague, Mr. Southwick expressed his sincere thanks to all present for their kind wishes, and assured them that their expressions of respect for himself and wife were duly reciprocated by both toward all present. Mrs. Southwick was also pleased that so many friends had honored them with their presence and beautiful gifts. About 8.30 a bountiful supper was furnished, of which all present partook with hearty relish. Conspicuous on the table was a large wedding cake with the figures 1836—1886. The guests commenced dispersing about 9.30, tendering the aged couple as they left, their best wishes for their future health and happiness.

The travel on the horse cars was very large last Sunday. The Wenham branch of the Naumkeag was very liberally patronized as was the Danvers & Salem road. The Peabody branch of the Lynn road carried 1650 through passengers.

Mr. J. N. Smith's blacksmith shop has been connected with the high service.

The Water Board will lay new water pipes, and make connections for South Peabody, at the pumping station. This action was deemed necessary so in case of a break as last year, the southern part of the town can be supplied with water.

Last year's crop of apples is now bearing fruit and it is not an uncommon sight to see men intoxicated from drinking cider. Sunday seems to be a good day for this kind of indulgence, and it is said one of our citizens does a big business since the beer shops have closed.

Our friends who admire art in furniture, when in Boston, will find it interesting to take a stroll through the mammoth furniture establishment of Paine's Furniture Company, 48 Canal Street, near the Boston & Maine depot. The display is almost bewildering in extent and beauty.

TESTIMONIAL FROM PROF. BILL.
W. J. LEFAVOUR, Dear Sir: It gives me great pleasure to be able to endorse the Ivers & Pond piano. In resonance, volubility, firmness and purity of tone it will compare favorably with any piano made in the country. I heartily recommend it to the public and my friends who are intending to purchase. Yours truly, C. R. Bill, teacher of music in public schools.

For Instant Use

As a reliable remedy, in cases of Croup, Whooping Cough, or sudden Colds, and for the prompt relief and cure of throat and lung diseases, Ayer's Cherry Pectoral is invaluable. Mrs. E. G. Edgerly, Council Bluffs, Iowa, writes: "I consider Ayer's Cherry Pectoral a most important remedy for home use. I have tested its curative power, in my family, many times during the past thirty years, and have never known it to fail. It will relieve the most serious affections of the throat and lungs, whether in children or adults." John H. Stoddard, Petersburg, Va., writes: "I have never found a medicine equal to

AYER'S

Cherry Pectoral

for the prompt relief of throat and lung diseases peculiar to children. I consider it an absolute cure for all such affections, and am never without it in the house." Mrs. L. E. Herman, 187 Mercer st., Jersey City, writes: "I have always found Ayer's Cherry Pectoral useful in my family." B. T. Johnson, Mt. Savage, Md., writes: "For the speedy cure of sudden Colds, and for the relief of children afflicted with Croup, I have never found anything equal to Ayer's Cherry Pectoral. It is the most potent of all the remedies I have ever used." W. H. Stickler, Terre Haute, Ind., writes: "Ayer's Cherry Pectoral cured my wife of a severe lung affection, supposed to be Quick Consumption. We now regard the Pectoral as a household necessity." E. M. Breckenridge, Brainerd, Minn., writes: "I am subject to Bronchitis, and, wherever I go, am always sure to have a bottle of

Ayer's Cherry Pectoral

with me. It is without a rival for the cure of bronchial affections."

MAKING UNLEAVENED BREAD.

There are four cities in America with unleavened bread bakeries—New York, New Orleans, Cincinnati and Chicago—and in order to supply the demand the Chicago bakery begins baking two months before the beginning of the Passover. It is made up into what are called matzos. The matzos look like the ordinary hardtack, except that they are a foot square. They are made of flour and water, and contain no other ingredient. After the flour has been kneaded into a very stiff dough a lump of it, containing about fifty pounds, is placed on a great block of wood and pressed into a thick sheet with a great beam which is fastened to the block at one end by an iron link and staple. This sheet is next placed under an iron roller, from which it emerges into a long ribbon. It passes under another roller, and another, when it is thin enough for baking. It is then stamped and cut into the unbaked matzos, which are placed on a wooden tray having a long handle, and deposited in an oven. Three minutes later they are taken out, white and crisp. From the oven they are conveyed to the packing-room, where they are allowed to cool, after which they are put up in loaves for delivery. During Passover week people of the Jewish faith eat no other bread.

FRENCH RAILWAY EMPLOYEES.

Employees of French railway companies have exceptional privileges. Rates of freight on goods consigned to them personally are much lower than the usual rates. They receive through the special stores kept for them provisions of all kinds at wholesale prices. They can purchase fuel at the same money the company paid for it. They are attended by the company's physician when they are sick, and the medicine is supplied gratuitously. If employees are killed while on duty, their orphans are placed in a proper institution at the expense of the company, and kept there until they are seventeen years old.

HOME HAPPENINGS.

Memorial Day falls this year on Sunday, but the decorations of the graves and the public exercises will take place Monday. The Post will attend divine service Sunday afternoon at the Baptist church, at 2 o'clock P. M., and be addressed by Rev. Mr. Shipman, the pastor. On Monday the Post will assemble at Headquarters at 8.30, and with the Salem Brass Band will march to the Soldiers' Home on the Square, where it will be decorated with appropriate ceremonies; thence to the Lexington Monument where the Post will take cars to Cedar Grove and Emerson Cemeteries. Returning, the Post will be dismissed, assembling again in the afternoon at 2 o'clock, marching to the Town Hall where the following programme will be carried out:

Selection, Salem Brass Band; Reading of Orders by the Post Adjutant; Quartette, by the Baptist choir, consisting of Miss S. P. Clemons, soprano; Mrs. T. O. Bartlett, contralto; Mr. J. C. Foote, tenor; and Mr. Eri Littlefield, bass, with Mrs. Jacobs accompanist; Scripture reading, Rev. F. W. Sprague; Invocation, Rev. J. W. Shipman; Selection by the Quartette; Address by Rev. Henry E. Mott, pastor of the Whitefield church, Newburyport; Prayer, Rev. G. A. Phinney; Reading National Hymn, Rev. J. W. Colwell; Benediction, by Rev. J. W. Hudson. At the close of these services the Post will decorate the graves in Monumental Cemetery, in the old and Quaker burying grounds on Main street. The graves of comrades in West Peabody will be decorated by a detail from the Post, in the forenoon, under the direction of Col. Cyrus T. Batchelder. All old soldiers are cordially invited to turn out and parade with the Post on Memorial Day, and it is hoped that all will show their interest in the services of that day, by thus responding. Eleven additional graves are to be decorated this year by our Post.

We are in receipt of a pamphlet from Carroll D. Wright, Esq., Chief of the Bureau of Statistics of Labor, containing the increase and decrease of populatisn by towns with the censuses of population from 1765 to 1885 and other information. From it we learn that the increase in population in Peabody wss 1464 or 18.15 per cent. The population in 1875 was 8066; in 1885 9530. The increase in male population was 749 or 18.78 per cent; in female, 715 or 17.53 per cent. The increase in population of Peabody from 1855, the time of the incorporation of the town, is shown as follows: 1855, 5348; 1860, 6,549; 1865, 6,051; 1870, 7,343; 1875, 8,066; 1880, 9,028; 1885, 9,530. The number of voters as shown by the census was 2,192, made up viz: Native born, 1,654; foreign born 538. There are 97 not voters, and 551 aliens, making a total of 2,840 ratable polls. The following percentages are of interest; Aliens of polls, 19.40; polls of population, 29.80; voters of polls, 77.18; voters of population, 23. The number of families containing 1 member is 51; containing 2, 303; containing 3, 418; containing 4, 345; containing 5, 320; containing 6, 245; containing 7, 164; containing 8, 100; containing 9, 55; containing 10, 27; containing 11, 17; containing 12, 6; containing 13, 1; containing 14, 3; containing 15, 1; containing 16, 18, 19, and 22, 1 each; containing 52, 1. The number of dwelling houses is 1464; occupied, 1443; unoccupied, 20; made of wood, 1428; of brick 14.

The purchase of the "Atlantic Car Works" property by Mr. Joseph H. Poor, of Peabody, to be used as a tannery is an interesting local item. The purchaser is a brother of the gentlemen composing the firm of L. & G. H. Poor of Peabody, one of the most enterprising and prosperous concerns in this vicinity. The transfer of this large, and hitherto unfortunate, property to such hands ensures the establishment of a successful business. The buildings seem to be well adapted to this new business and admit of extensive operations and the employment of a large number of hands.—Salem Observer.

The above item is correct except that the purchase was made by Albert & Joseph Poor, two of our most enterprising business men and the removal of their business will be a serious loss to the town. We learn that the price paid was $10,500.

It will not be necessary for pensioners to make application for increased pension, under the new law. Those who are entitled to it will receive the increase when the next quarterly pension day comes around without application. The increase is from eight to twelve dollars for widows and dependent relatives.

The Woman's Christian Temperance Unions of Essex County will hold their second quarterly convention in Marblehead on Saturday, May 29. Sessions at 10 A. M. and 2 and 7.30 P. M. The evening meeting will be addressed by Mrs. Maria Upham Drake, of Newton Centre, at Association Hall. Daily sessions at the North Chapel.

CRIMES AND MISHAPS.

A Peabody woman named Ann Donavan attempted to drown herself, last Friday, by jumping in the North River canal. She was rescued before she was drowned. Probably insane.

The body of a large Newfoundland dog was found in a vat at B. & A. N. Jacobs' tannery on Oak street the other day. It is supposed the dog fell in while the liquor was hot some time previous.

Mr. William Boyle caught his hand in the machinery at John Boyle's machine shop, last Thursday, and has since been unable to work.

A horse belonging to Samuel Donnell & Son., while at the blacksmith shop last Thursday, was taken with a spinal disease and lost the use of his hind legs. Charles Davis was called and worked several hours over the animal, but it did not seem to get much better and was removed on a drag to Donnell's stable.

There is a chance for some one to earn the $25 reward offered by the Selectmen for the conviction of the party who injures the shade trees. A young maple was set out in front of the Unitarian church and was found broken off a few feet above the ground, and the top thrown over the fence into the church yard.

Harry Evetts had a finger on his right hand jammed last Thursday morning, while pulling a coupling pin on the shifter. Dr. Geo. S. Osborne dressed the wound.

The case of Timothy T. Riordan was called in the police court last Thursday morning. The officers who made the raid testified to the large number of customers they had seen going in and out, and also to the amount of liquor they captured. When they arrived Riordan and members of his family were in the act of filling bottles from a beer keg by means of a rubber tube. The case was so plain that the defendant's counsel, Col. J. P. Sweeney, of Lawrence, didn't care to argue it and Frank E. Farnham, Esq., for the government, simply spoke of the severity of the punishment deserved. He was fined $100 and costs and six months in the house of correction. Appealed.

Mr. Samuel Donnell, the grocer, while in the loft of his barn recently, accidentally stepped into the manger and was thrown violently against the side of the barn, and one leg went down the opening while the other remained on the scaffold. His knee was badly wrenched and he has since been quite lame.

Elizabeth McCarthy was convicted in the superior court for selling liquor and last Friday was fined $100 and costs. In the nuisance case she plead guilty and was fined $50 and costs and three months in the house of correction. Total, $182 and three months.

Mr. Hugh Owens, in the employ of D. B. Lord, was injured about the foot, last Friday, by the falling of a lever while at work on a driven well.

Michael Donnell, a farmer living in the southern part of the town, stored a family carriage in an old barn some distance from his house, last fall, and when he looked for it the other day, he found that the local marksmen had been shooting through the building and the carriage was perforated with bullet holes. Somebody will be asked to pay for it.

Mr. Charles Norton had a severe attack of bleeding at the nose, last Friday night, which was not stopped until the family physician had been called. The attack lasted several hours.

A thirteen year old son of John Frizzell of this town was thrown from a delivery team at Haverhill a short time ago and broke his leg. He has since been removed to Peabody.

Last Saturday night as Mr. Fred Williams was driving on Main street, he collided with a team from West Peabody and a shaft of the latter team was broken.

The approach of the police broke up a street fight on Caller street last Sunday night.

A fight, in which a number of solid blows were put in, occurred on Main street last Saturday, and but for the interference of friends would have been serious.

The team of Mr. Geo. C. Peirce collided with the carriage of Jerry Bresnahan in front of the post office, Monday morning, and one of the hind wheels was taken off Mr. B.'s carriage.

A freight car jumped the track below the station Friday, causing some delay to shifting.

Mrs. Batjye living near Tremont street fell down stairs last Thursday night. She was badly bruised and shaken, besides receiving a deep cut on her forehead.

They are telling a story about a Peabody fellow who recently fell in with a couple of tramps whom he treated freely to liquor from a bottle he had with him. He drank as often as they did, and when he sobered off he found himself without a cent in his pocket, and his newly made friends gone. Perhaps he is wiser than he was.

James Kelley, of Lynn, got drunk and was fined $1 and costs in the police court Monday.

Last Saturday, Walter Lloyd, a member of the Peabody Bicycle Club, started on a return trip from Providence, R. I., on his wheel. While passing through Saugus on Monday morning, he run against the cap of a gate post and was knocked to the ground and rendered unconscious. He was removed to a neighboring house, and after recovering, continued his journey home.

One of the newsboys was run into by a team on Main street, last Monday, but no serious damage was done.

Patrick F. Callahan for being drunk, was asked to pay $1 and costs in the police court this morning. Appealed.

Scotty Douglas is the name of a tramp printer who drifted into town last Monday. Scotty said he had walked all the way from Lawrence, but, judging from the smell of his breath, he had received good and liberal spiritual advice on the way. He met an old friend in town who had scabbed it with him on the New York Tribune.

Mrs. Jane Doughty widow of the late D. W. Doughty died at her home on English street last Thursday night, after an illness covering a period of several years, during which time she has suffered from a cancerous humor. The family were warned that the end was near by the rapid decline during the last two weeks of her life. Mrs. Doughty was highly respected by the community, and was the mother of a large family of children, seven of whom survive her. Her age was sixty years. Her funeral took place from her late residence last Sunday and was largely attended.

In the case of T. T. Riordan last week, one of the officers testified that within an hour on Sunday, he saw 27 persons enter Riordan's gate and 17 depart from there. It has always been a puzzle to the police when they have raided the place, that no beer tumblers were found, and this was explained by the catching Riordan in the act of filling beer bottles. He would only sell by the bottle, which he filled from a keg and these were used to drink from, and if the police called they could be easily slipped into the pocket. Great act.

A private letter received las week from Rev. W. P. Chipman of Mystic, Conn., formerly of the Baptist Church in this town, says that he has closed up the business affairs of his father and brother-in-law and was about ready to go to his cottage near Wickford, R. I., for the summer. It is Mr. Chipman's intention, if his wife's health will warrant, to take a pastorate in the fall. Mrs. Chipman's health has not shown marked improvement for several months, but it is hoped that the warm weather will have the desired effect.

The season at Salem Willows will soon be formally opened. Mr. Nelson P. Wentworth, the lessee, is again an assurance of good dinners to come at the Naumkeag Pavilion. Hamilton & Balcomb are putting in a new set of flying horses for the Naumkeag Street Railway Co.; Mr. B. Fitzgerald is to start up the roller coaster; Charles Hobbs, of Wenham, will have charge of the stables, Mr. George K. Frost going to the Naumkeag stables at Beverly Cove, and Captain Upton will look out for the boats.

The reason that Ames & Edgerly did not sign the paper to close their store three nights in a week is a good one, when understood by the public. Their trade is largely in the evening, and as they deliver no goods and solicit no orders it will be readily seen that they are not placed on a par with the other dealers. They close their store on Thursday evenings, and think that it is sufficient. Their friends will find them there on other evenings.

It is expected that there will be 3000 educators—schoolmasters, teachers and school superintendents—at the 57th annual meeting of the American Institute of Instruction, at Bar Harbor, Mt. Desert, Me., on the four days beginning July 6th. Superintendent G. A. Littlefield of Newport, R. I., will deliver an address upon "The Chief Need of the Schools."

The rates on cablegrams have been reduced by the Western Union Telegraph Co. The present rate is 12 cents per word to Great Britain, Ireland and France; 15 cents per word to Germany; and to all other countries the old rate from London. Messages are the same price from any Western Union office in New England.

An attempt was made by the dealers in dry goods, fancy goods and millinery in town to follow the grocers and provision dealers, closing their stores three nights in each week, but Mr. Sawyer was unwilling to agree to the arrangement.

Miss Mary Sweeney, a sister of officer John Sweeney, will make a trip to Ireland, sailing in the Gallia from Boston, June 10.

The quarterly convention of Essex County W. C. T. U. meets in North Church, Marblehead, Saturday, May 29th, at 10 A. M.

More about Silks.

The Latest, with old and new facts made prominent.

When we issued our advertisement of Special Silk Sale a few weeks ago, we did so from the conscientious assurance that our stock of Silks was of such quality and prices that the unvarnished facts in regard to them would bear us out in any statement, however strong we might make.

During the last few weeks, the results of our plain speaking are so satisfactory, that we underscore it all to make it more emphatic. The comments of customers, and the steady reduction of stock, are sufficient guarantees.

We do not claim to sell Silks below the cost to manufacture, other dealers may, we have no objection. We do business to make money; that we admit at the outset. But we do claim that the prices at which we have been and are selling Silks are nearer the cost of manufacture than ever before. That is more to your advantage than ours, because we must now sell several yards to make the profit that was realized formerly "UNDER THE OLD ORDER OF THINGS." from the sale of one yard.

We repeat and facts warrant it, that our stock of desirable Silks in all fashionable colors and black, is better than ever before shown; that is saying a good deal, for our stock has never been inferior to any.

Special opportunities the past few days have put us in the way to obtain some very choice lots of Silks, which the largest houses in the country would be glad to place on their counters. This is not idle speech. Representatives of such houses have so expressed themselves. We ask your critical examination of our Silks, and shall be satisfied with your verdict, knowing in advance what it must be.

Wednesday is "Benefit Day."

"Saturday is Bazaar Day."

THE BEST

boon ever bestowed upon man is perfect health, and the true way to insure health is to purify your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Mrs. Eliza A. Clough, 34 Arlington st., Lowell, Mass., writes: "Every winter and spring my family, including myself, use several bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla. Experience has convinced me that, as a powerful purifier, it is very much superior to any other preparation of Sarsaparilla. All persons of scrofulous or consumptive tendencies, and especially delicate children, are sure to be greatly benefited by its use." J. W. Starr, Laconia, Iowa, writes: "For years I was troubled with Scrofulous complaints. I tried several different preparations, which did me little, if any, good. Two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla effected a complete cure. It is my opinion that this medicine is the best blood of the day." C. E. Upton, Nashua, N. H., writes: "For a number of years I was troubled with a humor in my eyes, and unable to obtain relief until I commenced using Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I have taken several bottles, am greatly benefited, and believe it to be the best of blood purifiers." R. Harris, Creel City, Ramsey Co., Dakota, writes: "I have been an intense sufferer, with Dyspepsia, for the past three years. Six months ago I began to use

Blood

Purifier

It has effected an entire cure, and I am now as well as ever."

TOWN OF PEABODY.

BOARD OF HEALTH REGULATIONS

THE Board of Health appointed by the Town hereby make and publish, as required by law,* the following "Regulations for the Public Health and Safety:"—

REGULATION 1ST. It being the duty of the Board of Health, of the Town of Peabody, to make such examination of the premises of persons residing in said town as they shall deem necessary for the public welfare, the Board hereby give notice and require that all premises within said limits shall be ready for inspection by the Board on and after May 15th, 1885.

REGULATION 2D. No house offal, filthy water, dead animals or refuse of any kind, shall be thrown upon the streets by any resident; and no butcher, fish-monger, or vender of merchandise, shall leave any refuse upon the streets of this town.

REGULATION 3D. If, upon inspection, any rubbish, offal, decaying animal or vegetable matter, or filth of any kind be found in, under or about any building, within any yard or enclosure, upon any premises, or in the ponds or water courses of said Town of Peabody, or if any privy or drain be found so discharging as to prove a nuisance, and offensive or deleterious to the public health, the owner or occupant of such property or premises shall be notified by the Board to remove or abate such nuisance within 24 hours after said notice has been served.

REGULATION 4TH. If any owner or occupant of property as aforesaid, after having been duly notified, shall neglect to comply with the requirements of the above section, the Board of Health shall cause any and all nuisances to be removed or abated at the expense of the owner or occupants.

REGULATION 5TH. No hogs or goats shal be kept within the limits of this town, except in pastures, or in enclosures kept free from standing water and regularly and freely disinfected.

REGULATION 6TH. It shall be the duty of occupants of dwellings in which any person or persons may be sick with small pox,* diphtheria or scarlet fever, and Physicians attending such cases forthwith to notify the Board of Health of the fact.

REGULATION 7TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where small pox exists, or has existed, shall prohibit and prevent the removal of clothes, bedding and upholstering, or other articles from the infected buildings or dwellings, except the removal is made by permission, or under direction of the Board of Health.

REGULATION 8TH. The occupants of buildings or dwellings where Scarlet Fever and Diphtheria exist shall withdraw all children attending school from the same; and the teachers of said schools shall NOT allow their children thus withdrawn to re-enter the school until they shall present a certificate from the attending Physician vouching for the safety thereof.

REGULATION 9TH. Night soil carts shall not be allowed to pass through the streets in the thickly settled portions of the town between sunrise and sunset, from May 1st to Nov 1st, without a special permit from the Board of Health.

These Regulations will be Strictly Enforced.

WILLIAM S. OSBORNE, Chairman,
THOMAS J. RELIHAN, Clerk,
CHARLES P. ELLIGOTT.
Board of Health.

*The Board shall make such regulations as it judges necessary for the public health and safety * * * Whoever violates any such regulation shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.—[Extract from the Public Statutes Chap. 80, § 18.

*Section 1, chap. 98 of the laws of 1884. When a householder knows that a person within his family is sick of small-pox, diphtheria, scarlet fever or any other disease dangerous to the public health, he shall immediately give notice thereof to the selectmen or board of health of the town in which he dwells, and upon the death, recovery or removal of such person, the rooms occupied and the articles used by him shall be disinfected by such householder in a manner approved by the board of health. Any person neglecting or refusing to comply with either of the above provisions shall forfeit a sum not exceeding one hundred dollars.

Book Notices.

Our welcome monthly visitor, the Baby Pathfinder, reaches us on time, as usual, with all the changes in rail and steamer Lines carefully corrected to date. The current issue has a neat little map of the Boston & Albany's Newton Circuit R. R., which was opened the 16th instant. The Baby costs but a nickel and is sold everywhere.

The June number of the Atlantic Monthly opens with the second installment of Mr. William Henry Bishop's striking new serial, The Golden Justice; and the number also contains portions of Henry James's very remarkable socialistic novel, The Princess Casamassima, and Charles Egbert Craddock's brilliant romance, In the Clouds. James Crawford, and Howells from the subject of an able piece of critical writing, and there is a brief criticism of Miss Anne Whitney's statue of Lief Erikson, by the architect Henry Van Brunt. This excellent number is concluded with some good poetry and the usual Contributor's Club and Books of the Month. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

Frank Leslie's Popular Monthly for June, 1886, opens with a very vivid sketch of the statesman who at this moment rivets public attention—William Ewart Gladstone. We see him here drawn in pen and pencil, in public life and in his loved home at Hawarden. Miss Lily Higgin describes The South Kensington Museum, which has done so much to create and foster true artistic taste in England. In these pleasant days, when the shade of trees is so grateful, we can appreciate the talk with A. S. Fuller on Forests and Forestry. The Migration of Animals and Birds finds a student in Mr. J. Duns. All the articles savor of the pleasant summer days; and the stories—by Mrs. M. A. Dennison Jane Fay Alston, Charles Howard Shinn, Annie J. Duffel, and others—make this number a charming one to read at home, or travelling, or stretched in breezy shade.

North's Philadelphia Music Journal for May fully keeps up the bright and interesting character of this excellent periodical. There is a neat story, called the Composer's Dilemma, by Clara Bishop, which is very readable. The special correspondent from New York, Boston and Chicago covers everything of recent musical interest in those great centres, while the musical news of the world is presented in concise and agreeable form. The sheet music selections consist of portions of Dellinger's new opera, Don Cæsar; Mazurka by Olbersleben; Recreations for Parlor Organ (Ave Maria, Pastorale and Hymn) and Summer Morn, a delightful song by Geibel. Subscription one dollar per annum in advance. Single copies 10 cents. Published by F. A. North & Co., 1308 Chestnut street, Philadelphia, Pa.

The vote for the municipal woman suffrage bill in the Massachusetts House of Representatives this year is the most favorable to suffrage since 1879, being 77 yeas to 132 nays, including pairs. In 1884, for the same bill, it was 61 yeas and 155 nays, including pairs. In 1885, for the same bill, it was 68 yeas and 137 nays, including pairs. This is a gain in the affirmative vote of 9 votes over 1885, and of 16 votes over 1884. It is a falling off in the negative vote of 5 votes since 1885, and of 23 votes since 1884. A further change or 28 votes from nay to yea would be a majority. This change the suffragists hope soon to accomplish by holding suffrage meetings and organizing suffrage leagues in the representative districts. There is a slow but steady gain from year to year. Woman suffrage, as a rule, is strongest in the country towns. In view of these facts, the woman suffragists naturally feel cheerful and confident.

A TRANSATLANTIC COMPLIMENT.—The "Bon Marche" of Paris is the most widely known, as it is the largest of retail establishments in the world; and the testimony which its proprietors bring as to the efficiency of the conduct of their advertising business by Mr. S. R. Niles of this city has a peculiar weight for that reason. Success in trade depends largely, not only upon bringing the business to the notice of the public through advertising, but in doing this in an attractive and judicious manner. The skill displayed in the composition and the presentation of the eloquent articles which appear in the advertising columns of our newspapers often casts in the shade the talent which shines in the other departments of the journal. Successful advertising, that which brings in its full return for the money expended, has come to be an art in which only trained and practiced hands can excel. The letter which Mr. Niles publishes gives him only his proper recognition as one of the ablest contributors to modern journalism. —Boston Advertiser

DONGOLA!

OFFICE OF ORDWAY & CLARK,

MANUFACTURERS OF

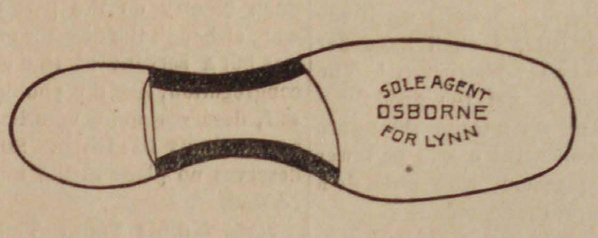
LADIES' FINE BOOTS AND SHOES.

HAVERHILL, MASS., February 25, 1886.

MR. WELLMAN OSBORNE, Lynn, Mass.

DEAR SIR: We have this day sent you a large invoice of our justly celebrated DONGOLA BOOTS. You will find they are all that has been claimed for them, and far ahead and entirely different from Kangaroo, Glove or Mat Kid. There is no other boot made for Ladies' wear which, for softness of finish, elegance of fit combined with such lasting durability, will give the entire satisfaction of this boot. They are something that has long been needed, as they wear better than French or American Kid, and will not stretch, turn purple, or look rusty. So popular and unprecedented has become the demand for these goods throughout the country, as the merits of the leather have become known, and so limited the importation of skins out of which the goods are manufactured, and so many imitations under similar names have been placed upon the market, that it has been found necessary to copyright the name.

NONE ARE GENUINE UNLESS STAMPED WITH OUR AGENTS NAME UPON THE SOLE, THUS:



Also the word "DONGOLA" upon the inside lining.

We shall give you the EXCLUSIVE SALE OF THESE BOOTS IN YOUR CITY, feeling confident with your large trade that they will find a ready market, judging from the large sales they have met with in other cities. Respectfully yours,

ORDWAY & CLARK.

SALEM.

Where Hours go Merrily.

The degree staff of Masconomo Tribe of Red Men have been invited to exemplify the work before the new tribe at Newburyport, and a special train will convey the brothers home at the close of the meeting. There will be a large number present from Salem, Danvers and Beverly. It is the desire of Newburyport brothers that a large number will attend. Corn and venison will be furnished. Tickets will be good on any train Friday and to return on the special or any train Saturday, and may be obtained of E. H. Shannon at the cigar store. There will be a game of base ball between the Newburyports and Haverhills, Friday afternoon, and and quite a number will go early and see it.

Mr. Geo. O. Nimblet and wife celebrated their first wedding anniversary last Wednesday evening, at their home on Aborn Place. A large party of their friends were present.

Mrs. Peter Langley, wife of the baggage master at the B. & M. station, received the china tea set voted for at the French fair at the Salem skating rink last week. She received 410 votes.

Miss Mamie Jones was given a surprise party by a number of her school friends at her home on Tremont street, last night. During the evening the young miss was presented with a pair of pretty bracelets.

Holten Lodge I. O. O. F. initiated two candidates last evening, and voted to invite Glenmere Lodge of Lynn to visit Peabody on the evening of June 8th, and also have the degree staff of that lodge exemplify the work of the first and second degree.

The officers of George Peabody Lodge A. O. U. W., of this town, will attend the anniversary celebration of the Danvers Lodge Friday night. A grand time is anticipated. Music will be furnished by the Salem Brass Band and by the Mendelssohn Ladies' Quartette of Boston.

The ladies of the Universalist society will hold the first strawberry festival of the season at their vestry on Wednesday evening, June 2d, and there will also be an exhibition dance by a large number of children in costumes, who will be in charge of a competent directress.

A larger number of families than usual have arrived and are installed at Asbury Grove. The grove has been very much improved by a considerable amount of building. Rev. Joseph H. Mansfield of Malden, the new Presiding Elder of Lynn district, will have charge of the annual camp meeting at Hamilton this year. The meeting will begin on the 17th of August and close on the 24th. Hereafter the Presiding Elder of Lynn district will be the perpetual President of Asbury Grove camp meeting instead of alternating with the Presiding Elder of the North Boston district, although the Boston churches will continue to attend this meeting. On the 17th of June there is to be a grand reunion picnic on the camp ground, in which every church in the camp meeting will be represented. A special train will be run directly from Boston to Asbury Grove.

Mr. John Steele was surprised at his home on Endicott street last Monday evening, by a large number of his friends, who spent the evening very socially. Mr. Steele was presented with an easy chair, gold watch chain, and a moustache cup.

The Band of Hope was addressed on Saturday last by Mrs. Helen G. Rice, of Boston. Mrs. J. P. Hayes, of Lynn, together with the Plummer sisters gave songs and recitations. The Wesley Chapel Band of Hope were present, and Mrs. M. A. Chapman with thirty-six of the Danvers Gleaners came by special car. It was a very enjoyable occasion.

MUSICAL NOTES.

Music in the schools will develop among the young people a musical taste, which will not stop at the instruction given in the schools. This is one of the objects of the instruction. It will be seen more and more as the instruction in the schools is continued.

In the line of such further instruction we want to offer a suggestion. Many of the young masters and misses of the grammar schools will desire to learn piano music. Some of them, stimulated by the instruction given by the Instructor, will desire to cultivate their voices in vocal music. There is here no greater error than the frequently expressed opinion that "any instructor is good enough to commence with."

Musical students, and some that are not and never have been students, but who are naturally gifted in that direction, set themselves up as teachers. Or if they do not go quite as far as that, they consider themselves competent to give instruction. Often it is not so much their fault, as of those who are willing they should be so considered. Take the piano, for instance. There is nothing that requires so much attention, so much patience, as proper fingering and a proper touch. And this will be obtained, if at all, at the beginning. Good playing requires more than loud thumping on a piano. It requires more than being able to read the notes correctly, and it is a mistake to suppose that the best instruction is not required just here. How often is it said, "Oh, Mr. Blank is good enough for my daughter to commence with; when she gets along a little, I shall have her study under a better instructor." The best instruction is not too good for a beginner. And when these things are better understood there will be fewer "so-called" teachers, who often do a child more harm than good.

The same is true in vocal instruction. We suppose there are more vocal teachers who are unworthy of the name than in any other department of musical instruction. It is not always easy, however, to determine which method of study produces the best results. But one thing is evident; vocal instruction does not mean singing at sight. It does not mean reading by note. Half of the singing which is not true, is caused by lack of knowledge as to the proper management of the voice. A person who has taken a few lessons, who has perhaps a natural talent for music, and a good voice, who has, maybe, led a village choir for years, or been a leading singer there, is not, therefore, a competent vocal teacher. It is so easy for parents of children, or older people, even, to be led into this error. "Mr. or Miss Blank is a good singer; they give lessons in vocal music; must be good teachers." It is all a mistake. If by vocal music is meant reading the notes, or singing at sight, it is not so bad. But this is not vocal instruction, in the common acceptance of the term. The young student wants to know how to make pure and correct tones; how to place the voice at the outset so that no weariness will come to the throat or voice, by practice. In short not alone how to read music, but how to sing correctly. This we repeat requires the services of a competent instructor, not of an amateur musician. The best is the cheapest, is an old motto, and in musical instruction, no matter in what line, it is especially applicable.

Miss Mary Beebe has retired from the stage, and will be married in June to one of our Boston merchants, Mr. E. H. Cutler, agent of the Woonsocket Rubber Co.

Mrs. Max Bachert (Fanny Kellogg) gave a charming impromptu musicale at her apartments in Hotel Pelham, Thursday evening, in honor of Mrs. and Miss Dodge, wife and daughter of General Granville M. Dodge of New York.

Miss Edith Estelle Torrey will have a complimentary concert at Union Hall, Tuesday evening, June 1, when she will have the assistance of Miss Annie Fisher, pianist, Will C. Mackinlay, violinist, Frank R. Rix, baritone, and the Beacon quartette, Miss Edith Estelle Torrey, soprano, Miss Sopha C. Hall, contralto, Arthur F. Burnett, tenor, Franklin A. Shaw, bass.

Pepita is to be seen at the Hollis street Theatre this week and next, under the management of Mr. J. M. Hill. This work was mounted at the Union Square, New York, in most lavish style, more than a hundred people in gorgeous array of costumes appeared upon the stage, and the settings were pronounced wonderful, even for Voeghtlin. Considered as a spectacle simply, "Pepita," with its ballet of humming birds, the shower of golden rain and the elaborate transformation scene at the close, ranked high in favor. Lillian Russell, who seems to be as wonderfully popular in New York as when she first became the talk of the gay city, appears as Pepita. Jacques Kruger, the comedian, is to be seen as Professor Pongo; Fred Solomon (brother of the composer) as Curase, a much harassed valet; Marie Louise Day (who has been warmly praised in New York) as the maid Juanna; and the cast will include, also, Misses May B. Raymond, Lizzie Hughes, Bella Thorne and Carrie Jackson. There will be a brilliant ballet. The composer, Edward Solomon, is to direct a grand orchestra.

Comic opera will be the opening attraction for the summer season at the Boston Museum, and the McCaull Opera Comique company will present "The Black Hussar," commencing Monday, May 31, with a great cast.

F. C. Record will have charge of an orchestra at Old Orchard Beach this summer for the third season.

The choir of St. John's Church are rehearsing under Charles A. Clark, Esq., Vespers by Alois F. Lejeal, to be performed Trinity Sunday. Mrs. Bigelow is expected to sing the Lesson for the day.

Prof. Bill is arranging to take some of the scholars from our schools, to exhibit the results of his teaching, before the National Convention of music teachers to be held in Boston the last of June.

The choir of a church in a city not far from Boston is in charge of a young director who prides himself upon having the finest music in that city. He not only runs the music but the entire music committee. Some weeks since the church had occasion to send to a teacher in Boston for a soprano singer. The teacher sent one of her most promising pupils, a young lady of ambition, good musical taste and withal an excellent singer. But she was a Catholic. Upon ascertaining this fact the young upstart treated the lady with extreme discourtesy during the entire service. Such bigotry on the part of a person who, although the director of the choir, was but a servant of the church and congregation, like the young lady herself, deserves more notoriety than we are at liberty to give it. Such bigotry deserves no place in the musical profession.

Mrs. Minnie Smith Tigh, of this town, has been engaged as soprano of the First Baptist Church in Salem.

SOUTH PEABODY.

The eighth semi-annual meeting of the Essex South Branch W. B. M was held at the Rockville Congregational Church to day. The meeting opened with devotional exercises at 9.15, which were followed by the usual routine business, including singing, reading of minutes of last meeting, statements of treasurer and from auxiliaries. At 11.15 a very interesting address was made by Mrs. F. P. Bowen of Smyrna. The lady, who with her husband is a missionary to Turkey, differed from those who usually have addressed public meetings on this subject, both in personal appearance and manner of delivery. She had a pleasing face, and way of taking her hearers with her to that far away land where for thirteen years she has labored in what she believes her Master's calling. She spoke of the many Oriental customs among the natives, and related many personal experiences. She told how closely this country was related to Turkey on account of the interchanging of exports, and the effect of this commerce in Europeanizing the city of Smyrna, which had changed wonderfully in the last decade. She thought that a great missionary work had been done there and that the country still presented a broad field for earnest christian work. She was followed by Miss Mary T. Caldwell, who also spoke with a deal of feeling about the work done by the missions. A noon prayer meeting was held, followed by a basket collation in the vestry. The programme for the afternoon session included a paper by Mrs. L. C. Purington of Dorchester, Subject, "The call to young ladies:" A poem by Miss Lillian M. Tudbury, "The Legend of the Cathedral Window," and an address by Mrs. Layyah Barakat of Syria.

We call attention to the card of Jas. Lafraniere, hair dresser, who has taken the shop under Baldwin's Hotel. This gentlemen comes from E. Saugus, with the best recommendations, and hopes to receive a share of the patronage of our readers. The shop will be refitted, not in so elaborate a manner as was done by Nathan, but in a style which will be tasty and suited to the requirements of the trade. This location and shop deserves the encouragement of the public, and Mr. Lafraniere purposes by courteous treatment, and fair and honorable dealing, to gain the confidence of the community. We can honestly recommend his work as first class in every respect.

One of John Linehan's stone teams got stuck on the Forest River bridge to Marblehead yesterday, by one of the wheels going through the bridge.

Mr. Herbert Gardner has gone to Leominster, Mass., for a day or two.

Remember this is the last week of the Indians at the rink, and a special programme will be given each evening.

A new concrete walk has been laid on Central street near the residence of Joshua Buxton.

SPARKS.

The insurance on the stock and storehouse of Daniel Rahilley burned on the morning of the 16th, has been adjusted through the agency of F. E. Farnham, by the payment of $200 on building and $100 on stock.

The exhibition of the chemical hand fire pump took place on the Square last Thursday forenoon, but it could not be considered an exact success owing to a limited supply of the chemical preparation. A large fire was built, under the direction of Chief Engineer Buxton and the Board of Engineers, and after it had got under full headway the pump was started which nearly extinguished the fire, but the supply of chemicals giving out, a bucket of water was thrown on the blazing mass.

The hose purchased of the Fabric Hose Company, 1150 feet in all, arrived last Friday.

Hose 3 have put their swing harness in position.

Officers Grady and Jones extinguished a rekindling of the fire at Rahilley's junk storehouse, last Thursday night about 11 o'clock.

A kerosene lamp exploded in a sleeping room in a house on Lynn street, South Peabody, last Wednesday night, but the flames were promptly smothered with woolen clothing, and the lamp thrown out of the window.

The explosion of a kerosene lamp at the hardware store of Samuel Trask & Son, on Walnut street, at 7.20 o'clock Saturday evening, called the department out but their services were not required. The apparatus from the brick engine house were out inside of one minute, and Hose three was on the road in one and one-half minutes from the first stroke of the bell on the Central station.

George F. Ward has painted the walls and kalsomined the ceiling of Steamer Two's room at the Central station. Their new carpet and new furniture will be put in this week. Z

The fishing party whom we spoke of as being at Moosehead Lake last week, returned last Friday eneuing bringing with them a large quantity of fish, and a number of their friends and neighbors have been invited to share them with them. Mrs. Dr. C. C. Pike was the one who landed the champion, a trout that weighed 15 1-4 pounds, and it was admired by a large number as it was placed in the Central fish market. As this was Mrs. Pike's first attempt at fishing, great things are expected when she gets her hand in, and really settles down to business.

S. C. Larrabee's attractive barber shop has been made still more so by recent improvements.

Axis Cut Pebbles.

The frauds that have been perpertrated on the spectacle wearing public by most spectacle dealers and peddlers by giving assumed and fancy names to ordinary glass, speaks for the ignorance of the public generally, in the all important subject of the preservation of the sight. There are only two articles from which spectacle lenses can be manufactured, viz: Pebble and glass—call glass by any other name, it still remains glass. Pebble on the other hand is from nature's own manufactory. It is a natural crytal found generally in freestone formation, and is harder than the ruby and emerald and nearly as hard as the diamond. The pebble is not more or less than a transparent stone cut by the aid of diamond dust, and the greater amount of power is placed immediately over the center of the grain found in the pebble. It will give to the spectacle wearer a coolness, freshness and a pleasant feeling that the ordinary spectacle lenses cannot by any possibility impart. All spectacles and eyeglasses are stamped B. L. A. C. P. and can only be purchased from

— BY THE —

NAUMKEAG

Orders have been sent from our headquarters, Boston, to our Branch Stores all along the line from Connecticut to Maine to make room for several thousand Men's, Youth's, Boys' and Children's Suits, as the balance of our wholesale Spring and Summer stock amounting to over two hundred and fifty thousand ($250,000) dollars, is to be distributed among our retail stores with orders to mark them at about the cost of the material. It has been our custom the last few years after our wholesale trade has been supplied to give our patrons a benefit by offering the balance of our wholesale stock to the retail trade at less than actual cost.

On account of the great labor trouble in the West our trade from that locality has not been as large as in former years, consequently we have a much larger stock to dispose of than any previous year, and as the NAUMKEAG is one of the largest, our share of the stock is enormous. Remember these are not old goods carried over from last season, but all new, clean, handsome, stylish goods which we manufactured for this season's trade.

Read the Prices of a few Lots:

Lot No. 1. 350 Men's nobby all wool Cassimere and Scotch Mixed Suits, comprising ten different patterns of checks, plaids and fancy mixtures, goods manufactured by the Amesbury, Georges River and Hamilton Mills, all sizes from 34 to 44. These are regular $10 and $12 suits, which we propose to close out at retail for only

$6 per suit.

Lot No. 2. 375 Men's and Young Men's Fine All-Wool Suits made from some of the most stylish patterns manufactured by the celebrated Chester Moses, Franklin and Carcline Mills. The lot comprises over 15 different styles to select from; all sizes from 33 to 44. There is not a suit in the lot but would be considered cheap at $12, we shall close the entire lot at retail for

$8 per suit.

Lot No 3. 420 Men's and Young Men's Suits manufactured from the famous Cowan, Central Falls, Brighton, Putnam and Sawyer Mills Finest all-Wool Cassimere and Cheviots. No better goods made for style or wear in this country. The lot comprises about 20 different patterns, both sack and frock coats—the latest novelties of the season—thoroughly and handsomely made and trimmed—regular $15 and $16 suits which we shall close out at retail for only

$10 per suit.

The Y. W. C. T. U. will take charge of the service at the Alms House next Sabbath morning at 10 o'clock.

Rev. Joseph H. Mansfield, the new presiding elder of this district, is expected to preach at the Methodist church next Sunday. The communion service will also be administered.

Young people should prefer country rambles, now, to the city lounges. Remember the colors of the flowers are brighter than the hues of silk, and the dewdrops outshine the jeweler's gems.

People are complaining of plant thieves. A lady on Washington street sat out a tub of plants in full bloom one day last week, and before night the flowers were all broken off and stolen.

The Sam Lucas Colored Ideal Troubadours gave a sacred concert at the rink last Sunday night before a small audience. The concert was not very satisfactory even to the small company present.

The post office will be removed from its present location to the remodeled hotel building. This is more central and will certainly accommodate most of our citizens better than in the old place.

An alleged glass eater was in town Saturday night and exhibited his singular gastronomic taste by apparently devouring lamp chimneys and broken bits of glass. He will come later and stop longer.

Some one broke into the grocery store of Henry Humphrey on Central street, last Thursday morning, and stole fifty cents in money and two boxes of cigars. Entrance was effected by forcing the door.

Mr. S. S. Littlefield, of this town, has been appointed deputy to the newly organized tribe of Red Men at Newburyport. Mr. Irvin Besse, formerly of this town, was elected Junior Sagamore.

In the Saltonstall school, Salem, on Saturday the pupils under Miss Lena C. Emery held a Memorial service. Recitations, quotations from General Grant's writings and a sketch of his life were given.

The suicide law has been very unpopular among the Knights of Honor, and much satisfaction is expressed at the action of the Supreme Lodge at its last session in repealing it.

The Houston factory on Foster street which has been idle for some months, has begun to show acts of vandalism by the large number of broken windows. It don't take long to use up a place when once begun on in this way.

Mrs. Lauriston Stiles of this town has sold to W. B. de las Casas a lot of land containing about three acres, at the west end of Malden, and it will be laid out in streets for the erection of first class residences.

It is reported that the Ames car couplers will be tested before the New York Commissioners, June 16, at East Albany. There will be about two in competition and each is "the best coupler ever invented."

Dole & Osgood are tenderly nursing a young elm tree in front of their factory, and have built a solid protector with chicken coop wire about it, and set out an ornamental hitching post for horses to feed on instead of the young tree.

Wellman Osborne is having plans prepared by Wheeler & Northend for a three story wooden structure, which will have a frontage of 97 feet on Western avenue and 64 feet on Centre street Lynn,. It will be used for factory and business purposes.

The most powerful king on earth is wor-king; the laziest, shir-king; a very doubtful king, smo-king; the most commonplace king, jo-king; the leanest one, thin-king; the thirstiest one, drin-king; the stylish one, win-king; and the most garrulous one, tal-king.

A party calling himself Prof. Rouch put up a few posters about town last week advertising his lecture on "Kansas from 1852 to 1882," at the Institute on Saturday evening. An admission of 25 and 35 cents was what he wanted to charge. The Prof. was there but not one person put in an appearance. Not even a dead head could be found who wanted to know about Kansas.

The pew in the South Church No. 81, owned by Mr. H. H. Proctor, is offered for sale. Inquiries can be made of Miss M. J. Floyd, Collector. Payment on Taxes, allowing ten per cent. discount, can be made up to Saturday, June 5.

The Young People's Society of Christian Endeavor of the South Church had for its subject last Sunday "The home prepared for us." Next Sunday there will be a consecration meeting. Subject—"Are you conscious of divine help daily?"

Last Thursday afternoon a man from Danvers stole a lobster from Dodge's fish market but was seen by the clerk, Mr. Harry Robbins, who followed him across the street and relieved him of the lobster which he had hid under his coat.

There are many making the inquiry how much longer are we to endure the imposition of the velocipede on the side walk. The smaller the infant that sits astride it, the more danger there is. We would suggest the reading of the Riot act.

The English sparrows are industrious and persistent little fellows. A resident of Washington street removed a nest of them containing eggs, from the eaves of his house, and in less than a week they had another, containing two quarts or more of straw and rubbish, all back in the same place, and it has been again removed.

The work for the building of the West Peabody Cemetery has been given out. Mr. John G. Walcott will build the avenues at an expense of $150. The place will be enclosed in a pipe iron fence and with a short distance of face wall will be built by Mr. Jackson Kennedy at an expense not exceeding $250.

The pupils of our public schools are preparing for the coming musical exhibition at Town Hall on the 17th of this month. As it will be a certain kind of a holiday, although teachers and pupils will be busy, the school committee have concluded to have an all day session on Wednesday to make up in part for the day lost.

Spring Opening.

MILLINERY DEPARTMENT.

SECOND FLOOR

We cordially invite the Ladies of Salem and vicinity to our Opening of the largest and most carefully selected stock of Millinery Goods ever shown in this city, including Trimmed Bonnets and Round Hats, both imported and of our own design and execution. In Fancy Laces and Silk Lisses, we have many elegant patterns, and in some of the most delicate tints, fairly rivalling the shadings of nature. In Flowers, which are to be so largely used the coming season, we have a most attractive display, as fresh as from the garden, only lacking fragrance. We have also in Untrimmed Hats and Bonnets, a very large assortment from the strongest School Hat to the finest foreign make. In fact everything which goes to make up a complete stock. Mrs. A. C. Washburn, our manager, was in New York at the Importers' Opening in Feb. securing many choice things at that time, and has kept close watch of the market up to the present time. Having through years of experience formed a large acquaintance with Importing as well as Jobbing Houses, which gives her great advantage in selecting Desirable Styles and making Lowest Prices. Miss Sadie Bushby will remain with us, as will also Miss Etta Brown and Miss Hattie Gliddin. We have also secured the services of Miss Carrie Palmer, who will join our corps of popular sales ladies. And now we feel sure almost every lady calling on us next week, or after, will meet an old acquaintance who will gladly show them every attention, and will take a personal interest in pleasing.

Cloaks, Suits and Shawls.

SPRING, 1886.

We take pleasure in announcing to the Ladies of Salem and Essex County, that we have now open and ready for inspection our full line of Ladies, Misses and Children's Outside Garments, Wraps, Shawls, etc., for Spring and Summer wear. We may venture to say without any egotism, that our selections in this department far surpass anything we have previously offered. The increasing demand for superior Ready Made Garments and Suits has led us to exercise unusual care in selecting none but the best, both in material and workmanship, and we guarantee all to be just as represented. We have every style and quality a lady can wish for. Long Garments for driving and travelling, Short Wraps and Jackets for street wear in every available shade and colors, both Foreign and American make. Suits, stylish and of superior quality. Shawls, India Chuddas, Boucle, Cashmere, and Fancy Embroidered Scarfs in all grades and shades. Children's Garments, simply beautiful in Boucle, English, German and American Goods. Our Infants' Department requires especial mention for its variety of Long and Short Robes, Cloaks, Slips and Blankets.

Jersey Waists, fancy colors beaded, Mikado fronts, Vest fronts, Plain fronts and braided, in every variety; and a great many more equally good things that we have not space to mention.

We cordially invite you to come and see for yourselves, assuring all courteous attention, and any information we can bestow.

CRAYON ARTIST & PHOTOGRAPHER,

252 Essex Street, Salem,

Having refitted and refurnished our gallery with new Lenses, Cameras, Backgrounds, Accessories, etc., etc., and having one of the largest and finest operating rooms and skylights in the country, we now have facilities second to none for doing first class work in all branches of Photography.

We have just purchased the finest instruments obtainable for making pictures from 8x10 to 24x24 (full life size) direct from the sitter, and make them either bust, half or full length, or groups. To introduce them we shall make them very low for three months.

We have special facilities for copying old and faded Photographs, Daguerreotypes, Ambrotypes, Tintypes, etc. Before giving your pictures to agents, come to us, and see our samples and get our prices. You can save money and at the same time get better work and not risk the breaking or losing of your pictures in the mails.

We make a specialty of Life Size Free Hand Crayons, made from any kind of picture or from life. One of the advantages, not to speak of the superior artistic qualities, of free hand work over the mechanically finished solars, is that any changes from the original, no matter how great, can be easily made, whereas in the finished solar but very slight changes can be made. We can furnish duplictaes from any negative ever taken by N. C. Bousley.

Call and see what we are doing, all will be treated with courtesy whether anything is esired or not.

Poet's Corner.

Two Girls of 1812.

All was still along Point Cedar,
For the farming must be done,
And the guards and lighthouse keeper
To the harvest fields had gone.

But within the lonely lighthouse,
In the kitchen low and wide,
Plied the busy wife her needle,
With her daughters by her side.

"Come, Rebecca," said the mother,
"Put the kettle on for tea."
And the girl obeyed, then lingered
To look out upon the sea.

There she spied a British vessel
Letting down her boats and men:
Well she knew their crafty purpose,
And she called her sister then.

Do you see that vessel, sister?
'Tis the old La Hogue again,
She that in the early springtime
Burned our ships and stole our grain.

Now our ships with flour are laden
That we can't afford to lose;
Get the drum and fife, my sister,
There's no other way to choose.

You shall beat the rollcall loudly,
I upon the fife will play,
And we'll scare the British cowards
From our ships and shore away.

Down the Point, beyond the cedars,
Sped the girls with flying feet,
While the foeman's boats came onward
Toward the unprotected fleet.

Soon the sailors ceased from rowing,
Leaned upon their oars to hear,
As the sound of fife and drum beat
Fell distinctly on the ear.

Out to where La Hogue lay anchored
Floated plain the warlike notes,
And she ran a flag up quickly
To recall her men and boats.

Backward sailed the British raiders
From the well defended shore,
Never pausing till they clambered
Safely to the deck once more.

Safe from two fun loving maidens
Full of hearty, wholesome life;
Safe from Abigall, the drummer,
And Rebecca's harmless fife.

The Shores of Main and Main.

Between the shores of main and main
Between the mural mountains,
Between the rivers of the plain
And inland seas, we wandered twain,
When youth glanced in the fountains.

Swift schooners skimmed the inland seas,
Swift shallops sailed the river,
And fast fled those and fast fled these,
But faster fled the hours of ease
We dreamed could last forever.

What knew we in those happy days?
We saw the landscape burgeon,
The forests, steeped in sapphire haze,
The lake like liquid chrysoprase,
And life and love were virgin.

We felt the winds that stirred unseen,
As some divine emotion,
And saw through vapors soft sea-green,
The cereal slopes, like submarine
Enchantments of the ocean.

A world of beauty did I see,
And you that fair world's centre,
And I with you, and you with me,
Did dream that such would always be,
With joy no tittle scanter.

But sloop and shallop wing the wave,
Slow hours their swiftness covet;
What is there left that I should crave?
The centre of the world—this grave;
You in it, I above it.

Dies Paschalis.

(Arranged expressly for music.)

BY LYDIA DAVIS THOMSON.

From the far off hills supernal,
From the fount of life eternal,
Rose for us our Easter dawn
On the "Resurrection morn."
And a glorious light unfurled—
Christ, the light of all the world.

CHORUS.

Tell it all the land abroad,
He hath risen; Christ the Lord!
Swell His praises, loud and long,
In one grand, triumphant song.

Hail, all hail glad Easter day!
Roll the stone of doubt away!
And my soul arise and shine,
In the light of life divine;
In the Was, To-be and Is;
In the glory that is His.

From the silence of the tomb
Came the power to quell death's gloom.
From the terrors of the grave
Christ exultant rose to save.
He, the Conqueror, once the slain,
Lives, that we may live again.

Once.

A RONDEL.

I loved her well in that young spring
When all the world seemed love intent,
And all the birds began to sing,
To show themselves on mating bent.

And Time had wings as on he went—
Those happy days whereof I sing,
When first she wore my wooing ring,
And I on wedding was intent.

Yes, Time had wings; and so he went,
And summer's feet pursued the spring,
Ah, when the golden coin is spent
The empty purse's a useless thing,
And empty hearts no tribute bring—
Ah me! where is my old content?

MUSICAL NOTES.

To see Pepita at the Hollis street Theatre in Boston is a treat, if one enjoys rich costuming and scenery. It is easy to understand why the piece had such a successful run in New York. J. M. Hill, with his usual liberality, has spared no expense to bring it out in gorgeous costumes and they are equal to all that has been claimed for them. Musically the piece is very commonplace. The entire first act went through without a single murmur of applause. The ridiculous situations into which a professor, with a mania for invention, is brought in the second act, with the funny by-ply, wake up the audience a trifle, and the attractive form and costumes of Miss Lillian Russell keep them in anything but a dull mood. Take Miss Russell and the scenery and costumes out of the opera and it would not run six nights. But as it is brought out, it is attracting good audiences and is worth the attention of our readers. This is the last week, and we hear it stated on good authority that Manager Rich has been very successful with this new Theatre, in its first season. This is gratifying, as the experiment of a theatre so far up town was looked upon by many as a venture.

Surely the exhibition to be given by Prof. Bill, June 17th, should be a success. The scholars who are to take part sing a half hour every day, principally the selections to be given, and sometimes extra time is taken, and in the Bowditch district the scholars meet at some of the houses and practice in the evening. We can't help wondering if all this is necessary. We thought the affair was to be an exhibition of the results of the teaching in the schools for the past two years. Those results would of course be apparent at any time, and ought to be accomplished without extensive preparations.

The change in time of service at the Baptist church, beginning next Sunday, will deprive that church of the services of Miss S. P. Clemens, who is the soprano there as well as at the South church in Salem. The people here will be sorry to lose her.

Millard's Vespers in D flat will be rendered by the choir of St. John's church next Sunday at 3 P. M. The choir will have the assistance of Mrs. J. P. Fernald, who will sing "Salve Maria" by Mercadante.

A lecture on the tonic sol-fa method will be given in Horticultural Hall, Boston, to-morrow evening by Theodore F. Seward, president of the American Tonic Sol-fa Association. Rev. Dr. Duryea will preside. All interested are cordially invited.

F. H. Lewis, of Woburn, has been tendered the position of organist at the Ruggles street church in Boston during the summer season. Mr. Lewis is an excellent organist and teacher, and was for many years organist of the Unitarian church in Woburn.

The popular concerts at Music Hall in Boston, will begin next week after the same plan as last year. The orchestra is to be under the direction of John C. Mullaly, leader of the Globe Theatre orchestra. Mr. Mullaly is a fine musician and director—was first violin in Gilmore's old band in Boston for so many years that he was known as well as Gilmore himself. The music under his direction at the Globe Theatre has been among the finest in Boston, and the choice is one which assures the public that the music will be of a character which will assuredly make the concerts popular in fact as well as name. Mr. Joseph Gahm will again have charge of the refreshment department, and Charles A. Ellis will have the management of the concerts.

The tenth annual meeting of the Music Teachers' Association is to be held in Tremont Temple, Boston, June 30, July 1 and 2. Much of interest to music teachers and musical people will be presented and discussed, and prominent artists of note will take part.

The Centennial of the old Stoughton Musical Society, the oldest choral organization in the United States, is to observed June 9th. Haydn's Creation will be given, with other exercises, and Miss Kehew, Geo J. Parker and Clarence E. Hay will be the soloists.

The Salem Cadet Band will play during the season at the Masconomo House, Manchester.

The following committee of the Salem Schubert Club have been elected for the ensuing year: Arthur C. Clark, President; Francis N. Chapman, Secretary and Treasurer; David Mason Little, Theodore M. Osborne, Miss Parker, Miss Clara Pitman, Mrs. Shepard D. Gilbert and Mrs. Philip Little.

POLICE COURT.

As early as 8 o'clock Tuesday morning a large crowd gathered about the entrance of the court room and as nine o'clock approached it was largely increased. The police refused to let in but a few of the spectators and they hung around the outside till the numerous cases were disposed of.

Charles Dullea was first called, he had a black eye and plead guilty to the charge of being drunk and was fined $1 and costs, $5.83.

Charles Sullivan was the next to appear before his honor, and $1 and costs was assessed him for being drunk.

George Winter and Thomas Wondo, the latter an Indian, were next called, and plead guilty to being drunk. These men came down to visit some of the show people at the rink, and being drunk and causing a disturbance, were run in by the police. The judge fined them $1 and costs each, which was paid by Spotted Horse, and they departed. Big Indian should drink no fire water.

John Dowdell and Samuel J. Hayes were next arraigned for having a little fight among themselves, near the old monument last Saturday night about 10 o'clock. This was termed an affray, and they were fined $10 each and half the costs, or $12.66 apiece.

David Lynch an old offender, came up next and plead not guilty to being drunk and was fined $1 and costs. He also plead not guilty to the charge of using profane and indecent language on a horse car last Sunday. A. H. Walcott, the conductor, testified that he got on his car at Lynn, and was very drunk, and every time he tried to keep him from falling off, he would swear and curse him. When he got to the square he refused to get off and demanded his money back with a good deal of profanity. W. R. Snow the driver, testified in substance the same as Walcott. He was fined $10 and costs.

Patrick McMarlie, charged with biting a piece out of the lower lip of Thomas Skidd, pleaded not guilty, and as his counsel, Eugene T. McCarthy, Esq., was unable to be present, the case was continued to 9 o'clock this morning, and he was put under $2000 bonds. At 8 o'clock the case was called, and Skidd said he was sitting on the steps at R. H. Brown's office, when Mack came along, and wanted to fight but he refused, and Mack kicked him in the side. A scuffle then ensued, and Skidd held Mack down till they were separated. He did not know just when a piece was bitten out of his lip, but saw it in Mack's mouth. He said that the piece being gone it was difficult to eat or drink. Mr. Quinn said he was sitting on the steps with Skidd and another party, and that Mack used profane language, and struck Skidd. What followed was as Skidd had told. He saw the piece in Mack's mouth.

Mr. Gilman testified as above, and said he separated them, and heard a man named Mayne, say, bite him, eat the—— and he saw Mack hold the piece of Skidd's lip on his tongue, and saw him spit it out, and the blood from it went in his face. Doctor Pike said that he dressed the wound, and found a piece about the size of his forefinger to the second joint torn from Skidd's lip, leaving an ugly wound. He thought that when it healed he would have a drawn down lip. He said he had some fears in this particular case, as he had removed a cancer from it a short time ago. Mr. Hammond witnessed the assault, and said that he saw Mack hug close up to Skidd, and the next instant he had bitten out a piece of his lip. Eugene T. McCarthy, Esq., asked the judge to make the bail as reasonable as possible, and it was fixed at $1200, and Mack was bound over to the Superior Court at Lawrence, to be held in October. Patrick McCarthy went his bonds.

Saturday and Sunday were busy days with the police. Saturday noon a raid was made on Mrs. Patrick McCloskey on Sawyer street, and about half a dozen bottles of lager beer seized. At 10 o'clock in the evening, another raid was made, this time on Mrs. Honora Cuddire, on Mill street, where 2 quarts of whiskey and 2 quarts of rum rewarded the efforts of the officers. A visit was also made to Mrs. Hannah Mahoney on Spring street court but nothing found.

Charles Sullivan, Edward H. Russell, Charles Dallia and David Lynch were arrested for drunkenness, and Simon Hayes and John Dowdell were pulled in for a mutual affray. Edward H. Russell was locked up in No. 12 cell but not liking his quarters, split a piece from the two inch planks, forming the top of his bunk, and using it as a battering ram he burst the lock from the door, and waltzed out into the corridor, jumped out of the window on Hodgkin's lane and made himself scarce. This all happened between 10 and 11 o'clock Sunday forenoon. The other cases will come up for trial in the morning.

John Lowery, a young man with a bruised face, and trembling from dissipation, was fined for a simple drunk $1 and costs. The officers at the cells last night, say that he had a slight attack of the horrors.

MEMORIAL SERMON.

The Grand Army attended divine service last Sunday at the Baptist church, by invitation of Rev. J. N. Shipman, when that gentleman preached an eloquent and forceful sermon. By his courtesy we are enabled to present to our readers the following abstract of his remarks:

I Samuel, 4:9; "Be strong, and quit yourselves like men, * * * quit yourselves like men and fight." These words were spoken on the eve of battle. The chapter from which they are taken gives an account of one of the most hotly contested battles of antiquity. The first verse shows two hostile forces drawn up in battle array, face to face like savage beasts. In the second verse they are hurled against one another with all the energy veterans possess. The Israelites are defeated and 4000 of their number slain. They send to Shiloh for the Ark. Upon its arrival a shout goes up, heard in the Philistine camp. The Philistines fear and tremble, saying: "Woe unto us! Who shall deliver us out of the hands of these mighty Gods?" To allay this fear the words of the text rang through the camp: "Be strong, and quit yourselves like men, * * * quit yourselves like men and fight." And under the influence of these inspiring words the battle was again joined. Israel was once more defeated and 30,000 left dead upon the field. Such in brief is the historic setting of the text.

The text has a military bearing; there is a martial flavor and fragrance about it. To you, veterans, it suggests the long march, scanty fare, the flying bullet and crashing shell. It reminds us all of that baptism of blood, through the shedding of which, we, as a Nation, now occupy a high place among the Nations of the earth. It is but right that we keep alive the memory of those dark days, and honor in some public way the patriotism of those, both living and dead, who risked their lives that the Union might be preserved.

The time and place will not allow me to make my remarks merely secular. Consistency compells us to give our thoughts a religious turn. Allow me, therefore, in the first place, to call your attention to the fact that the war is not yet ended. The war of the rebellion was but one phase of a continuous conflict. Brave men, good and true, are needed now as then. The times are as urgent as the day when Congress voted $5,000,000 and 500,000 men to prosecute the war of the rebellion. You are not called to go again to the sunny South, nor to wear the blue, nor to bear a carnal weapon, but you are called to actual service, in a conflict of which the rebellion was but a sample.

To understand in what sense the war is not yet ended, we must get at the underlying principles. We need to understand the principles for which you fought and the spirit against which you went forth to battle.

(a) An underlying principle for which so much was sacrificed was the principle of union, allegiance to rightful authority, loyalty to United States Government and the spirit against which you fought was rebellion, treason. These two elements enter into the present conflict. There is rebellion everywhere against God's moral government, against rightful authority.

On March 4th, '61, Mr. Lincoln was inaugurated president of the United States. He became then the head of the Nation. Every American citizen owed him allegiance, but the South said, "we will not have this man to reign over us." To conquer that spirit three-quarters of a million lives were sacrificed. That same spirit is still rife, it is saying, "we will be a law unto ourselves." It is rebellion, and rebellion is odious wherever found. I assume that you believe in the existence of God as the moral governor of the universe. To Him every moral creature owes allegiance, but the haughty spirit of man rises up and says "we will not have this man to reign over us," and on this issue battle is joined. The present duty of every man is to bring himself into harmony with the moral government of God. To be true and loyal to the supreme authority, then, go forth as you went forth in '61 and '62, shoulder to shoulder, with a firm step, to put down this moral rebellion and thus help to maintain the unity of God's moral government. To this warfare you are called, therefore "Be strong, and quit yourselves like men."

(b) Another element which entered as a leading factor into the Civil War was the principle of liberty. The slave was a bone of contention between the North and South. The crack of the slave driver's whip, the cries of an oppressed race, were at last heard from the Carolinas to Kansas and stirred the noble spirit of John Brown. The decision of the supreme court of United States, through Chief Justice Taney, was looked upon by the North as removing the last barrier to the extension of slavery. The issue upon which Lincoln was elected was the extension of slavery. The North said slavery was a relic of barbarism, an institution of the dark ages, and should and must be distroyed. Upon this issue the terrible conflict was precipitated. In the fall of '62 came the emancipation proclamation. And it was through the heroic deeds of the northern soldiery, of which you veterans were a part, that the proclamation of the president was made effective and 4,000,000 set free.

Members of G. A. R., you said, by your acts, that the rebellion should be put down, that it was odious and hateful, and inimical to human good. And you said also that all men should be free and equal under the law. For this principle of liberty you fought, and against this spirit of bondage you entered your country's service. In the great moral conflict it is liberty against bondage and bondage against liberty; loyalty against rebellion and rebellion against loyalty. It is the same old struggle, the war is not yet ended. The cries of the slave are still heard; the groans of a distressed people come up from every quarter of the globe. Men are in moral and spiritual bondage a thousand times more oppressive than civil bondage; In bondage to appetite, passion, the evil propensities of a perverted nature, and it is from this bondage they need, long to be freed.

Members of the G. A. R., if it was worth while to leave home and friends, to endure hardships, to risk life, in order that a portion of the great family of man might be liberated from civil bondage, is it not worth your while to do something towards liberating your fellow men from moral bondage and bringing them into the higher liberty of God? Where do you stand in this moral conflict? Are you loyal and true to the higher powers? Are you as ready to strike down the double headed monster (rebellion and treason) to-day as you were twenty-five years ago? The war is not yet ended and cannot be till the last disloyal subject lays down his weapons of war and swears true allegiance to the divine government of his Creator. Therefore: "Be strong, and quit yourselves like men, * * * quit yourselves like men and fight for God and the freedom of our fellow men."

"Be strong, and quit yourselves like men, * * * quit yourselves like men and fight." How can this be done? What are the characteristics of a good soldier? They are everywhere the same. That which makes a good soldier in the army of the Potomac, makes a good soldier in the army of the Lord. What are these characteristics, these qualifications?

(a) The first I would mention is whole heartedness. A good soldier has a profound sense of the righteousness of his cause. A consciousness that duty has called him and at her bidding he goes forth to fight her battles. There is no thought of personal gain or private aggrandizment. Regard for truth and justice are the motive powers. In ancient times when nation warred against nation, armies were composed largely of mercenary troops, hirelings, who entered the service simply for pay. Such were cowards and usually deserted in the hour of danger. The good soldier never does that. The cival war of America was one of the most bloody ever known. Why? Because it was American against American.

It is an old saying that "when Greek meets Greek then comes the tug of war." But since '61 we have known that when American meets American then comes the tug of war. In our civil war men fought for home and kindred, and thus "quit themselves like men." Such men are wanted now for the army of the Lord. Men with heart and soul and conscience, and for such every church is a recruiting office. Mercenaries are not wanted and need not apply. The great captain of our salvation wants recruits, actuated by a love for truth, justice, righteousness and virtue, and haters of treason, rebellion and bondage in whatever form they are found, and under whatever name they may be known. Ungodliness, infidelity and scepticism in a thousand and one forms and ways sweep over our land like a tempest, striking at the very foundation of our christian institutions. Forces are continually at work to destroy the christian sabbath, the christian church. It's treason, rebellion, against God, and menacing to human well being, both here and hereafter. The times call for brave men, self sacrificing men, to battle for God and the right. Will you, veterans, enter the service of your Maker as heartily as you entered your country's service a quarter of a century ago? To the ranks of the good soldiers of Jesus Christ I invite you.

(b) The good soldier obeys orders. He obeys promptly, and asks no questions, requires no explanation. He loves to obey. It is a pleasant duty and privilege to obey. He enters the jaws of death at the command of his chief. As a notable example of this I point you to Pickett's magnificent charge at Gettysburg. "Obedience is the mother of success" says a Grecian sage. Not one of you ever thought of refusing to obey. Upon obedience depends the organization and discipline of the army, and upon these depends its efficiency. Obedience is an important factor in problems of successful warfare. Disobedience means disorganization, confusion, defeat. The good soldier obeys orders, obeys from a sense of duty. He knows the commanding officer has superior facilities for learning the position and strength of the enemy, and therefore knows what should be done to win the day. In the Moral conflict the good soldier obeys orders. And the first is to repent. "For God commandeth all men everywhere to repent." Acts 17:30. Will you do it? promptly, heartily, willingly to the very letter? "Be strong and quit yourselves like men."

(c) A good soldier, especially in God's service, fights to the end. During our civil war some enlisted for three months, others for nine months, others still for three years, or as long as the war should last. But in the moral warfare for God and humanity, it's a life work, no furloughs, no dress parades. God wants men for service, not for play. It's a service accompanied with some hardships, privations, dangers, trials, but full of peace as a river, widening and deepening on its way. To such a service you are once more called, and if you would "quit yourselves like men" you must enter upon this service heartily, with a fixed purpose to obey orders, and a determination to fight to the end. These are three essential qualifications of a good soldier.

Finally, What of the end? Victory! Four years of blood and carnage, but victory at last crowned the goddess of liberty in the capitol of the Nation. So in the moral and spiritual warfare to which all good men and true are invited, the end is victory. The word of God says, it is victory over the world and the flesh and the Devil. Victory over death and the grave, victory at the final judgment.

To-morrow's exercises bring us once more face to face with that sublime truth, vicarious sacrifice. To-day we enjoy the blessings of a united free people, but to-morrow, as you place a few flowers upon the graves of our heroic dead, remember that it was through the shedding of their blood, that these blessings are ours. Then for one brief moment turn your thoughts back, through the centuries, to that lonely place, outside the city wall, and behold the bleeding lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world, and think of the blessings which may be yours through the shedding of His blood.

MEMORIAL Day will be a long remembered day in town.

IT IS said that drunkenness was so common yesterday in Salem and vicinity that the police ordered the saloons on Boston street to close.

NO LICENSE in Peabody, but plenty of drunkenness. How long will it be before Salem will lend her aid to the cause of temperance by closing the saloons?

WHY IS not Sunday the best day for Memorial Day? Despite the suggestions of the commander of the G. A. R., Memorial Day is more of a holiday than a day of Memorial to the dead heroes.

WHY SHOULD not a special election be held, and a Selectman be chosen to fill the vacancy caused by the resignation of Mr. Preston? Surely that that would be the most democratic way. Let the voice of the people be heard.

OUR POLICE have had their hands full since Saturday evening. What with drunks, assaults, escape from the police station, and a murder, it has been no poetry. Through it all, they have conducted themselves with firmness and good judgment, and are deserving of great credit.

THE ADDRESS of Rev. Henry E. Mott in the Town Hall is spoken of in the highest terms by the soldiers and citizens. We shall publish it in full in the PRESS next week. It was our intention to have done so this week, but the crowding of our columns, owing to the murder, has made it simply impossible. We should have been obliged to cut it, and we thought our readers would prefer to have it in full.

OUR EXTRA, which was issued Monday evening, giving the full account of the murder on Union street, sold like wildfire. It was on the streets shortly after eight o'clock, and we had hard work to supply the demand for them. Everybody was talking of the murder and the enterprise of the PRESS in giving the public the particulars in an attractive form. The paper was sold for one cent,—the same price as the dailies. In addition to giving the boys all they could sell, we printed an extra edition, sending it to all of our regular subscribers free of charge. After the arraignment of Crowley and the autopsy, we issued last evening another extra giving the full particulars, and which had an equally large sale.

MURDER.

(From our extra edition of Monday.)

The peace and quiet of this beautiful Memorial day has been desecrated by a horrible murder. While the law abiding citizens and veterans of the Grand Army were assembled to do honor to the memory of their departed dead, a tragic scene was being enacted in that part of our town known as "Dublin."

Patrick Crowley, an industrious working man, and his wife, were having a family row, something that the neighbors say is not an infrequent occurrence. Just how the row commenced is not known at this writing, but loud words and profanity were heard in the tenement house on Union street occupied by four families and belonging to Patrick Ryan.

The sounds proceeded from the left hand tenement in the second story occupied by Patrick Crowley, wife and four children. About 1.30 o'clock, Mrs. Ellis, a neighbor, heard a fall and shortly afterwards Crowley passed out of the house.

The woman had a presentment that something was wrong, as everything was still, and rushing into the tenement below said she feared something had happened to Mrs. Crowley.

Edward Fitzpatrick and his wife went up stairs and found the lifeless body of Mrs. Crowley laying in a small bed room off the kitchen. They immediately gave the alarm and the neighbors and police were sent for.

Officer Goodwin was the first to arrive, and as he entered the kitchen he saw large spots and pools of blood on the floor, some of which looked as if hey had been partially wiped up or that a body had been dragged through it. There was also a broken pitcher on the sink. Entering a little bed room beyond he found the lifeless body of Mrs. Crowley. She was laying on her side, her hands thrown out with one palm up and the other down, and across her hand was resting the broom.

Shortly afterwards Medical Examiner Carleton and Dr. H. K. Foster arrived on the scene. They had hardly began an examination, before Dr. Pike, who had been sent for, came in and a partial examination followed. The woman who was about 35 years of age, was found to be badly bruised about the head, and blood had been streaming from her nose and mouth. There were bruises on her neck and side of her face, and when turned over the other side was found to be horribly bruised and several wounds were found on her body, including one on her shoulder and one on her knee, while in many places there were black and blue marks, as if made some time before. The physicians were of the opinion that her neck was broken. That the murder took place in the other room was evident by the blood spots on the floor, the broken pitcher and the unnatural position of the body in the room. To still further confirm this suspicion, there were found bloody finger marks on the woman's thigh and wrist as if she had been taken up and carried into the bed room. There was no blood on the hands of the dead woman, so it must have been the work of her murderer.

As soon as the police were notified they sent officers in search of the husband of the woman who was suspected of her murder, and the police of all the neighboring cities and towns were telephoned to be on the look out for a man answering the description.

Patrick Ryan said he was sent for by Mrs. Ellis who said, "My God, Mrs. Crowley is dead." He came over and found them described as above and he had remained in the house since and not allowed the body to be touched. He said Crowley went out between 12 and 1 o'clock.

Edward Fitzpatrick who lived down stairs said he heard a row up stairs about 1 o'clock. It was not uncommon and he paid little attention to it. Later he heard them at it again and heard Mrs. Crowley call her husband a ——. In a little while, Mrs. Ellis came in and said she thought something had happened to Mrs. Crowley and he in company with her went up stairs and found the woman dead on the floor of the bed-room. He felt he pulse and told the others she was dead.

Mrs. Patrick Ellis lived across the entry from Crowley and heard the row when she returned from work at Sanger's Laundry where she is employed. Shortly after one o'clock she heard a little noise and a jar as if some one fell, and Mr. Crowley passed down over the stairs out doors. Mrs. Crowley did not follow him to the door as usual, and she became alarmed and went to Mr. Fitzpatrick, and with his wife went up stairs and found things as related above.

Medical Examiner Carleton ordered the body removed to another room until an autopsy can be held by Medical Examiner Osborne probably tomorrow The room in which the deceased was found was about 6x8 and, contained a broken down bedstead, two tables and a chair. The whole was in a filthy condition.

The deceased was a native of Salem and has lived in this town about fifteen years.

There are conflicting reports about the temper of each, some claiming that he had a violent temper and others that she was in the habit of drinking.

The following diagram will show the scene of the murder.

A twelve year old son of Crowley, put in an appearance about half an hour after the murder and to questions from Chief Police Peasley, he said he knew nothing about the affair; that was was playing ball and the boys told him his mother was dead. He said his father went to Lynn in the morning, and he had not seen him since. He said his father was not home at noontime. The boy acted as if he knew more about the case than he was willing to tell, and after seeing her remains he began to cry and make considerable fuss which seemed to be affected.

About quarter of four Crowley came home and entered the house which was in charge of Officer Goodwin. Some one looked up as he entered and said: Hello Crowley!" and a second later the officer had his hands on him with the remark "You are my prisoner." What is this for? said Crowley. You know, said the officer. I want to look in that room, said Crowley indicating the one where his wife lay, which he was allow ed to do, when he cooly turned to the officer and said: How did this happen? He said that he had been to Salem and that his boy came down and told him. He then changed his hat and coat and the officer put the twisters on him and handed him over to the chief who had arrived. He was removed to the police station and locked up in cell No. 6.

On being searched, some cigars, tobacco, a knife and about $3.20 were on his person. The prisoner is about 5 feet 10 inches in height, and weighs about 165 pounds, he is very dark complected with dark curly hair and moustache, has high cheek bones, and not a bad looking face. He was dressed in dark clothing and wore a dark slouch hat and is about 45 years of age. He has worked for L. & G. H. Poor for the past three years.

CROWLEY ARRAIGNED.

(From our extra edition Tuesday).

Patrick Crowley, the man arrested for the murder of his wife, spent the night in cell No. 6 at the police station Monday. To one of the officers he said that he had been drinking beer that forenoon, and to another he said that if his wife was dead he might as well be, and would before morning. Officer Jerry Mack was assigned to the duty of looking after him and he stationed himself near cell No. 6. He made statements also to the police which will be brought out at the hearing.

Crowley slept from 10 o'clock till 1, but not much after that. At 6 o'clock this morning he was sitting on the side of his bed resting his head on his hands, but refusing to make any conversation. He is very despondent and begins to realize the enormity of the crime with which he is charged. At 6.30 he was laying on his back on the bed, and to the question if he was asleep, replied: "I wish to God I was." That night he told the officer that there would be two of them in that box before morning, referring to the ice box in which his wife's remains were laying in the hallway. He also said that if he had known the officers had intended to keep him over night, they would not have got him over there.

The officers of the force are very conversant with the family affairs of Crowley and say that to within three years they have lived happily together, but since then his wife has taken to drink and family rows have been frequent. The officers have often found the husband strolling about in the vicinity of his home and he told his troubles to them and said he was keeping away from the house because his wife was intoxicated.

At one time she was arrested and taken to the station house for being drunk, and it was hoped by the officers that she would reform, but it did no good. At that time her husband came forward and desired the officers to let her return with him.

A few months ago her infant child fell from the second story window and was killed by striking on a picket fence below. Since that time family jars have been more frequent and it is said he blamed her for neglecting the child.

The neighbors say that on this occasion there was not so much of a disturbance as usual, and that the woman had been at work all the forenoon, returning home about 12 o'clock.

The medical examination into the cause of the death of Mrs. Ellen Crowley was held at the room in the rear of the police court room in the basement of the town hall this morning. The examination was in charge of Medical Examiner Doctor Geo. S. Osborne, assisted by Medical Examiner Carleton of Salem, and Doctors Atwood and Shreves of Salem, and Doctors Pike, Weston and Foster of Peabody, and undertaker Fallon.

The examination was conducted privately, none being admitted except those named above. All reporters were refused admission. The examination commenced about 10 o'clock a. m., and was continued till 2.15 p. m. Dr. Osborne was at once besieged for the facts in the case, and made the following definite reply to the representatives of the papers. "I don't undertake to anticipate that which I haven't yet comprehended", which being interpreted, means he had no information to give.

We learn from other sources, however that the bones of the neck and other parts of the body as well as the head were examined, and it was the opinion of the physicians that it was a very bad case. There was no doubt but that she came to a violent death, and did not die from natural causes, as some had predicted. The full particulars of the autopsy will be developed at the examination, and it was not deemed wise to make anything public which would tend in any way to prejudice the prisoner. No attempt has been made to obtain from him any statement, and the result obtained or the probable evidence or want of it against the prisoner is a matter to be tested legally by the courts.

A written statement of the case was taken and kept by Doctor Osborne, and will be used at the hearing. The organs of the head, abdomen and the larynx were thoroughly examined, and the skin on the outside showed finger marks on the front of the throat, in the vicinity of the windpipe. And while it is not officially announced, the conclusion is, that the woman was strangled to death.

Dr. Osborne had a consultation with Judge Merrill, and as a result Officer Crowley was dispatched to Salem to consult with District Attorney Hurlburt. Officer Crowley returned and at 3.45 the prisoner was arraigned in the presence of Officers Peasley, Crowley and Goodwin and a representative of the PRESS.

The indictment as prepared by Judge Merrill was then read to the prisoner, and is as follows, but may be changed technically by the District Attorney.

It charges that

Patrick Crowley of Peabody, in said County of Essex, on the thirty-first day of May, in the year one thousand eight hundred and eighty six at Peabody, in said County of Essex, with force and arms in and upon the body of one Ellen Crowley, feloniously, wilfully and of his malice aforethought did make an assault with the felonious intent to kill the said Ellen Crowley, and the said Patrick Crowley did then and there feloniously, wilfully and with malice aforethought, threw down and murdered the said Ellen Crowley.

The prisoner looked very much broken and his eyes were blood shot and his countenance haggard. "Are you guilty or not guilty?" said the judge. "Not guilty! Not guilty!" replied the prisoner. "I never did it," and he shook his head.

The judge then said: "Your case will be continued till 11 o'clock to-morrow."

"Do you want to procure counsel," asked the judge. "No! I want no counsel," was the reply. He was then taken back to his cell. The case will be tried in the court room to-morrow and District Attorney Hurlburt will be present.

Mr. Albert Poor, for whom Crowley worked for a number of years, said he always found him sober and industrious and that he always attended strictly to his work.

It is impossible to trace the whereabouts of Mrs. Crowley on Monday forenoon. About 7 o'clock she came to the house of Mr. W. J. McCarthy on Foster street, where she was in the habit of doing the washing every Monday morning, and having done her work she left there about 9.30 o'clock. And the next person who claims to have seen her was Mrs. Cuddire, who said she passed her place on Mill street shortly before 12 o'clock.

When the woman left Mr. McCarthy's she had not drank anything and was perfecty sober.

The body was removed by undertaker Fallon to the residence of the deceased and the funeral will take place from there to-morrow afternoon, and the remains will be buried in the family lot in the Catholic Cemetery in North Salem.

THE HEARING THIS MORNING.

The announcement exclusively in the PRESS extra that the hearing on the murder case would be at 11 o'clock to-day brought out a large number of people, a fair number of whom were admitted to the court room. It was 11.23 when District Attorney Hurlburt arrived. A large number of government witneses were present and sworn except Mrs. Mary Ellis who was overcome by the bad air of the police station and went out. The prisoner was brought in and given a seat on the left of the judge, who asked him if he wished a hearing or whether he would waive an examination and have the case go to the higher court. Crowley said he had nothing to say.

Officer B. F. Goodwin was the first witness, and said he was called about 2.10 by some boys who said there was either suicide or murder. He entered the house and found Mr. Ryan there; he found blood on the floor and found Mrs. Crowley in the bed room on the floor. On inquiry he found there had been a row; he described the location of the body; said he sent for the Chief and Medical Examiner; he left after the arrival of the other officers, but returned later and assisted in removing the remains to another room, and while in charge of the premises a man came in and was identified as Crowley whom he arrested. After a few words Crowley said: "I want to see her." He let him go and he walked into the little room where the woman was found. Crowley not finding her there went through to where the remains were. He took hold of his wife's hands and said: "This is queer; I don't believe she is dead." The officer told him to go with him, and he replied: "Don't hurry, I want to change my clothes." He was allowed to change his hat and coat and take off his collar and necktie. He was then removed to the station house. Crowley said to the officer that he went home and found his wife lying on the lounge; they had some words and she threw a flat iron at him and he hit her a poke in the nose, choked her and threw her into the bedroom; he also said that wouldn't kill her; he said she threw the pitcher at him and broke it before she threw the flat-iron.

Edward Fitzpatrick testified in substance as his statement given above. He didn't know whether Crowley was under the influence of liquor or not, had not seen him from 1.30 till he was arrested.

Patrick Ryan's testimony was the same as the statement above. He was there when Crowley returned and corroborated the testimony of Goodwin about Crowley's going to the bed-room and also to conversation, and the position in which he found the remains.

The prisoner who had asked no questions up to this time, got up and said he wanted to ask Mr. Ryan a question. He then asked, "Was she on her right or left hand side when you found her?" Ryan answered, "On her right." "That is all I want to ask," said the prisoner.

Medical examiner Charles A. Carleton said he arrived at 3.10 o'clock, found spots of blood on the floor and on the broken pitcher; found body in the bedroom with head next door, there was a liquid flowing from her mouth that smelt like beer. He found various bruises about the head, several contuse wounds about the neck and face, and marks of bloody fingers on her wrist and thigh; made a very careful examination for bruises, etc., and then ordered her removed to another room and left the remains in charge of officer Goodwin. He was present at the autopsy; they found wounds on both sides of her throat made with finger nails; beneath the skull were large clots of blood about the brain, two ribs were fractured and an old fracture of another rib was found; the spleen was fractured and there were several clots of blood in the lungs which had come from ruptured blood vessels. Death was due to blows on the head and strangulation with the fracturing of the spleen and ribs.

Medical Examiner Geo. S. Osborne said he was called at 7 o'clock and found the woman on the bed. There was dry blood on her face and nostrils and also on her arm and anterior parts of her thigh. He directed the undertaker to remove the body to the station house where he held an autopsy yesterday. The body showed marks of violence which was noted externally and showed that considerable of a struggle had taken place. The marks about the throat seemed like those from finger nails and they were about the windpipe. There was a very severe contused wound on the face showing a powerful blow. The congestion of blood on the brain and lungs, rupture of two ribs and spleen, showed great violence and also showed strangulation. They found that the fifth and ninth ribs were broken and that the third rib had been fractured before, and it was reasonable to suppose these internal injuries which had helped to cause her death were done by pressing down upon her chest or side with a heavy weight. The following is the doctor's official report of the case. Death resulted from:

"Congestion of the brain and lungs with extravasation of blood into the aforesaid organs, resulting partly from violent blows upon the head, and partly from strangulation, together with the fracture of two ribs and the rupture of the spleen with hemorrhage in the abdominal cavity."

Mrs. Mary Ellis having recovered returned and testified that she lived in the house on the same floor. About ten minutes past 1, she heard a fall like chair. She heard a man's voice just previous to the crash, and in a few minutes some one went down stairs, a minute later she went down and saw Fitzpatrick and with him and his wife went up stairs and found Mrs. Crowley in the bedroom dead.

This concluded the testimony and District Attorney Hurlburt asked the Judge to commit the prisoner to Salem jail without bail to wait the action of the grand jury. This Judge Merrill did remanding him to jail till the meeting of the Superior at Lawrence next October.

Crowley took things coolly and listened attentively to all that was said. About 2 o'clock Crowley was taken from his cell, and in company with Chief Peasley was taken to Salem jail in Wilson's depot carriage. He was smoking a pipe as if it was a comfort to him.

The School Committee have appointed the following committee to examine the specimens of writing and drawing from the different schools: J. W. Upton, John P. Fernald, Miss M. O. Barrett.

Many of our citizens have been making purchases from the establishment of Paine's Furniture Company, Boston, offering as an excuse for their lack of loyalty to home industry the large assortment to select from, and the difference in price; besides, say they, every one in town don't find out what we paid for them.

TESTIMONIAL FROM PROF. BILL.

W. J. LEFAVOUR, Dear Sir: It gives me great pleasure to be able to endorse the Ivers & Pond piano. In resonance, volubility, firmness and purity of tone it will compare favorably with any piano made in the country. I heartily recommend it to the public and my friends who are intending to purchase. Yours truly, C. R. Bill, teacher of music in public schools.

Tuesday morning about 9 o'clock a horse belonging to John Shaw, in So. Peabody, became frightened while standing in front of Geo. Southwick's house on Wallis street. Mrs. Shaw had driven down to take her sister, Mrs. Southwick, for a ride. Mrs. Southwick was in the buggy waiting for Mrs. Shaw to come from the house when the horse started, running down Tremont street where Mrs. Southwick was thrown out, but fortunately was unhurt. The horse ran down Main street to the burying ground, where it was caught and taken to Symonds' stable. The horse was somewhat bruised and the buggy damaged. The ladies came to the stable of Mr. Symonds very shortly after the horse was brought in. It was a narrow escape.

Mr. Russel Burnham, son of Webster Burnham, died last Friday morning of consumption after an illness of several months. He was born Dec 20, 1852 and was a graduate of our public schools. He was early married to a daughter of Mr. I. H. Beede, but owing to his dissipated habits, his wife was separated from him, and with her son resides with her father at South Peabody. He was a driver on the old coach line between Peabody and Lynn, and has since been employed as a teamster. He had many good qualities but liquor was his worst enemy. His funeral took place Monday.

The Boston & Maine railroad company is laying out a park on the lot between the depot and Seashore house, at Old Orchard; it will be surrounded by a granite curbing, and will contain a fountain and other ornaments. If they have not yet decided on a fountain, we suggest they take the one in front of our station.

Mr. Albert Carlton was the first to pick ripe strawberries in his garden this year, as he picked the first on Memorial day.

At the meeting of the School Committee last evening it was decided to conduct the examinations of the schools on a different plan from that of preceding years. Rev. Mr. Hudson will conduct the examination of the Wallis, Center, Bowditch and Rockville grammar schools in the study of grammar; Mr. Farnham the same schools in geography; Mr. Carroll in reading and spelling; Dr. Foster in arithmetic; Mr. O'Conor in history; Mr. Osgood will conduct the examination of all the primaries, and the West and Felton grammars. The arrangement is as follows:

REV. J. W. HUDSON.—Monday, June 21, Wallis; Thursday, June 24, Center; Friday, June 25, A. M., Rockville; Monday, June 28, Bowditch.

THOMAS CARROLL.—Tuesday, June 22, Wallis; Thursday, June 24, Bowditch; Friday, June 25, Center; Tuesday, June 29, P. M., Rockville.

FRANK E. FARNHAM.—Tuesday, June 22, Center; Wednesday, June 23, P. M., Rockville; Thursday, June 24, Wallis; Friday, June 25, Bowditch.

DR. H. K. FOSTER.—Monday, June 21, A. M., Rockville; Tuesday, June 22, Bowditch; Friday, June 25, Wallis; Monday, June 28, Center.

P. H. O' CONOR.—Monday, June 21, A. M., Center; P. M., Bowditch; Monday, June 28, A. M., Wallis; P. M., Rockville; Wednesday, June 23, A. M., Endicott primary.

G. FRED OSGOOD.—Monday, June 21, A. M., Bowditch; P. M., West; Wednesday, June 23, P. M., Rockville; Thursday, June 24, Center; Friday, June 25, P. M., Felton; Monday, June 28, Wallis.

The examination of the Peabody High School will probably be Tuesday, June 29, and the graduating exercises Thursday, July 1, in the Town Hall.

Last Saturday afternoon as Sammie Clark, son of A. B. Clark, about 15 years of age, and a companion named Charlie Folsom, son of C. G. Folsom, were at play near Buxton's Hill, the latter accidentally shot his companion in the mouth. The weapon was an air pistol that throws a cartridge smaller than 22 calibre. The ball entered Clark's under lip, passing through the end of his tongue, and lodged in his neck. Doctors Weston, Pike and Foster probed for the ball but did not get it. The Clark boy is out and no serious results are anticipated.

A man at work on the road lost his coat the other day in a novel manner. He took it off and hung it temporarily on the back part of a carriage, which was standing in front of a residence, and forgot to remove it. The owner came out a little later and drove off taking the garment with him. Probably they are both puzzled; one to know where his coat is and the other to know to whom it belongs.

A new leather measuring machine has been placed in position in the tannery by the Union Leather Measuring Machine Company of Peabody, Mass. The machine is a vast improvement over the old one, doing away with the weights and strings, in the place of which are graduated wire pins. The machine is also supplied with an adjusting attachment, invented by Matthew Vassar.—Ballston N. Y. Paper.

At the close of the Grand Army parade on Memorial Day, the members of Post 50 passed a unanimous vote of thanks to Mrs. Harriet N. Sumner for the button hole boquets which each wore. It has been the custom of Mrs. Sumner for several years to not only make the boquets, but to pin them on each member, and as she is getting to be quite an old lady, it is no small task and we are glad to see that it is appreciated.

Hazen A. Spaulding has generously tendered us some samples of his fine cigars, and we can conscientiously assure our readers that they are some of the very best. Spaulding has just added a new line of the best goods; he has some sixty different varieties, and all who use the weed can find something to suit them. Give him a call.

Rev. O. S. Butler, of Georgetown, gave us a pleasant call Tuesday. He was on his way to Cape Cod, driving over the road, and will spend a few weeks among the cranberry meadows.

Officer Tim Lee of Lynn was in town yesterday.

Glenmere Lodge I. O. O. F. of Lynn will pay a fraternal visit to Holten Lodge of this town next Tuesday evening, and their degree staff will exemplify the work. Refreshments at town hall at the close.

Six conductors on the Naumkeag street railroad have been dropped, it is understood, for "knocking down" fares Decoration Day. It is said there are more to follow.

Miss Cora Bliss Wenham, of Grand Rapids, Mich., a neice of Dr. Bliss of Garfield fame, was in town yesterday. Miss Wenham has been studying music during the winter in Boston.

F. G. Preston having tendered his resignation as truant officer to the School Committee, Officers Crowley and Goodwin have been appointed truant officers for the remainder of the school term.

The Selectmen have elected Lyman Osborne as Collector of Taxes in place of Levi Preston, resigned, and Mr. Osborne has accepted. Mr. Preston tendered his resignation as Selectman to the Board Saturday afternoon and it was accepted. No action was taken relative to filling the vacancy. We understood the Board consider themselves legally qualified to perform the duties of Selectmen without calling upon the town to elect a member in place of Mr. Preston. They also elected J. Henry Osgood as Registrar of Voters in place of Lyman Osborne. We hardly see how Mr. Osgood is to be considered a Republican, as it is well known that he voted for Cleveland at the last presidential election.

Christopher A. Burdick, a traveling teacher in penmanship, who will be remembered as giving lessons in this town some ten years ago, died at Eagle Bridge, N. Y. He was a bachelor and homeless and had found that some of his relatives were not disposed to entertain him in his loneliness and failing health and as they thought poverty. He found hospitality in the house of one Nabum Newcomb of Pittstown, N. Y., who felt sorry for him. It turns out that he left an estate of $15,000, and before his death he willed $3000 to each of Mr. Newcomb's four children, besides some money to Mr. Newcomb's wife.

Mr. Levi Preston received notice last Thursday that he had been appointed Deputy Collector of the Port of Boston, and he will enter upon those duties at once. It was well known that Mr. Preston had been an applicant for the post office, and that his name had been sent on to Washington for that office, and this new deal which places him in a more responsible position, was a surprise to him as well as to his fellow townsmen. It a long time since such a "plum" has come to Peabody, and it is a compliment to the town, as well as Mr. Preston, that he has been appointed to the position. There is no question of his ability to fill the position to the satisfaction of all, and he is to be congratulated on his success. The situation is worth about $3000 a year, and it is said some perquisites.

In the starry darkness just preceding dawn and just following dusk, that is after 3 a. m., and just before 8 p. m., close scrutiny will reward the searcher with a glimpse of Fabry's comet. In the morning it is visible in the east, in the evening in the west, and in each instance somewhat north of the sun's rising and setting place. His cometship is at present in the little constellation of the Triangle, and is about half way between the two great constellations of Cassiopea and Taurus. In other words, everybody knows where to find the Pleiades, or seven stars, and the chair, farther north. Half way between these two aggregations the comet may be found.

A large delegation from Masconomo Tribe of Red Men, including their degree staff, and also members of the order from Salem, Danvers, Marblehead and Beverly, went to Newburyport, last Friday evening, to attend the institution and exemplify the work before Monomac Tribe No. 22 of that city. The tribe was instituted by Great Sachem, J. M. L. Davenport of Worcester. After the raising up of the elected chiefs, the company adjourned to an adjoining hall and partook of corn and venison, returning in a special train about 1.30 o'clock. Quite a number went down early in the afternoon and witnessed the ball game between the Newburyport's and Haverhill's, while others went about the city and drifted into the building where they saw the elephant and three legged dog.

WILLIAM G. WEBBER & CO.

More about Silks.

The Latest, with old and new facts made prominent.

When we issued our advertisement of Special Silk Sale a few weeks ago, we did so from the conscientious assurance that our stock of Silks was of such quality and prices that the unvarnished facts in regard to them would bear us out in any statement, however strong we might make.

During the last few weeks, the results of our plain speaking are so satisfactory, that we underscore it all to make it more emphatic. The comments of customers, and the steady reduction of stock, are sufficient guarantees.

We do not claim to sell Silks below the cost to manufacture, other dealers may, we have no objection. We do business to make money; that we admit at the outset. But we do claim that the prices at which we have been and are selling Silks are nearer the cost of manufacture than ever before. That is more to your advantage than ours, because we must now sell several yards to make the profit that was realized formerly "UNDER THE OLD ORDER OF THINGS." from the sale of one yard.

We repeat and facts warrant it, that our stock of desirable Silks in all fashionable colors and black, is better than ever before shown; that is saying a good deal, for our stock has never been inferior to any.

Special opportunities the past few days have put us in the way to obtain some very choice lots of Silks, which the largest houses in the country would be glad to place on their counters. This is not idle speech. Representatives of such houses have so expressed themselves. We ask your critical examination of our Silks, and shall be satisfied with your verdict, knowing in advance what it must be.

Happiness

results from that true contentment which indicates perfect health of body and mind. You may possess it, if you will purify and invigorate your blood with Ayer's Sarsaparilla. E. M. Howard, Newport, N. H., writes: "I suffered for years with Scrofulous humors. After using two bottles of Ayer's Sarsaparilla, I great relief. It has entirely restored me to health." James French, Atchison, Kans., writes: "To all persons suffering from Liver Complaint, I would strongly recommend Ayer's Sarsaparilla. I was afflicted with a disease of the liver for nearly two years, when a friend advised me to take this medicine. It gave prompt relief, and has cured me." Mrs. H. M. Kidder, 41 Dwight st., Boston, Mass., writes: "For several years I have used Ayer's Sarsaparilla in my family. I never feel safe even without it. As a liver medicine and general purifier of the blood, it has no equal." Mrs. A. B. Allen, Winterpock, Va., writes: "My youngest child, two years of age, was taken with Bowel Complaint, which we could not cure. We tried many remedies, but he continued to grow worse, and finally became so reduced in flesh that we could only move him upon a pillow. It was suggested by one of the doctors that Scrofula might be the cause of the trouble. We procured a bottle of and commenced giving it to him. It surely worked wonders, for, in a short time, he was completely cured."

Found

At Home
